RAKES SUPREME COURT: DEFIES IT

JAPAN FORCES DEADLOCK ON RUSSIA TREATY

Influence of Tokio Gets Clause Which America Cannot Accept.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Two fresh instances of Japan's antagonism to the United States were disclosed here today.

Aimaro Sato, Japanese ambassador to the United States, has informed the department that his government will feel obliged to lodge a protest if the pending immigration bill is allowed to became a law with provisions, now included, to which Tokio takes exception.

Japan objects to any recognition or legalization in the bill of the gentlemen's agreement under which she prevents Japanese labor from migrating to the United States. Japan is violently opposed to the house provision excluding Japanese in case the gentlemen's agreement becomes inoperative, and also has considerable objection to the senate substitute.

A conference committee of the two houses on the immigration bill considered Japan's protest at two lengthy sessions today, but came to no decision. The indications are that the senate substitute will be adopted with further modifications.

TIES UP RUSSIAN TREATY.

Japan, it also transpires, has used her newly strengthened influence at Petrograd to prevent Russia from negotiating a new commercial treaty with the United States and thereby opening to American interests the rich Muscovite trade coveted by the Japanese.

The Wilson administration is endeavoring to negotiate a treaty with Russia to take the place of the commercial agreement abrogated under the Taft administration, but insists that Russia shall honor all American passports, including those presented by American Jews.

Russia declines to accede to this condition and contends that the abrogation of the former treaty was unjust because her exclusion policy was not directed at American citizens but at the return of former Russian revolutionists.

CHANGE ASKED BY RUSSIA.

Russia recently has informed American Ambassador Francis that even if it were willing to discuss a new treaty it would meet the American conditions with a counter proposal that the United States cease to exclude Russian subjects, referring to 40,000,000 Russian Mongolians.

It now turns out that the suggestion to Russia to take this tack in discussing a treaty with the United States emanated from Tokio, which recently effected a peculiarly close alliance with the Petrograd government.

A counter proposal by Russia to admit Russian Mongolians would prove embarrassing to the United States, and the opposition of the Pacific coast would be sufficient to prevent the administration from negotiating a treaty based on such a compromise. At the same time the administration has no thought of waiving its insistence that Russia admit American Jews.

LANSING HAS CONFERENCE.

Secretary of State Lansing had a protracted conference today with the conference committee which is perfecting the immigration bill. The conference was called as a result of the renewed complaints of the Japanese government concerning provisions of the bill.

It was thought that President Wilson's backdown on the proposed legalization of the gentlemen's agreement and the senate's provision, excluding all Asiatics except Japanese, had satisfied Tokio. It appears, however, that Japan is far from satisfied.

OBJECTION RAISED BY JAPS.

Japan still complains that the bill proposes to legalize the gentlemen's agreement under which she prevents the migration of Japanese laborers to the United States. Tokio contends that the agreement is being implicitly objected to and objects to any mention of the contract in American legislation. There are several minor provisions of the bill affecting Japanese to which Tokio objects.

On the other hand, Congressman Hayes of California, a member of the conference committee, has insisted upon adoption of the house provision excluding Japanese if the gentlemen's agreement becomes inoperative. He is urging congress to refuse to bow to Japan's demands.

Deering Wants Back $1,000,000 Hospital Gift?

Dissatisfaction Over Wesley May Revive Northwestern U. Dispute.

The $1,000,000 from James Deering, given early in 1914 to Wesley Memorial hospital, Twenty-fifth and Dearborn streets, has revived the controversy of two years ago between the hospital and Northwestern university. It is reported that Mr. Deering is not satisfied with the administration of the hospital and that through William J. Louderback, his business representative, he has intimated he would not refuse the return of his donation.

The gift of the million, which was in the nature of a memorial to Mr. Deering's father, William Deering, brought a hot debate between the trustees of Wesley hospital and the trustees of the university, the medical school of which is conducted in connection with the hospital.

Condition Made by Deering.

Mr. Deering's gift named as one condition that the hospital should become a teaching hospital. The university authorities insisted this could be brought about only by permitting the medical school to appoint the staff of physicians, and to employ only physicians who were on the staff of the school.

At that time the matter seemed to be adjusted when Abram W. Harris, then president of Northwestern university, said:

"The Wesley Memorial hospital will be a teaching institution, and it is agreed the physicians and surgeons shall be chosen from the medical staff of the university, and a superintendent will be selected with authority over them."

Some Admit Deering Hint.

"It is true that Mr. Louderback, business representative of Mr. Deering, spoke to me some fews weeks ago in regard to Mr. Deering's million dollar donation," said Perley Lowe, president of the board of trustees of the hospital, last night, "and that there was some intimation by Mr. Louderback that Mr. Deering would be willing to take back his gift.

"While no actual reasons were given for the intimation, it seems Mr. Deering is evidently not satified with the way things are being carried on. After my talk with Mr. Louderback I communicated with him, asking him to send the board of trustees a bill of particulars stating exactly what Mr. Deering's objections were. So far I have not heard anything more from him."

No Denial by Louderback.

"If Mr. Lowe says that he had a conversation with me," said Mr. Louderback, "and that there was an intimation that Mr. Deering would be ready to accept the return of the million dollars which he donated, then Mr. Lowe must be right. That is all I have to say."

James Deering is in Florida and could not be reached last night.

SENATOR CALLS IT A USURPER; WOULD SHEAR IT

Owen of Oklahoma Follows Ohio Jurist in Denunciation.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—In a sweeping and vitriolic attack on the Supreme court of the United States Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma before the National Popular Government league tonight declared it was "unparalleled impudence for the Supreme court to declare unconstitutional any act passed by congress."

Urging that the court be shorn of its power to overrule the action of congress, Senator Owen declared that at such action the courts should "ipso facto cease to exist."

Later, when Senator Owen's remarks were repeated to him and he was reminded that his remarks might cause him to be called before the court for contempt, Senator Owen said:

"I don't believe they will do anything of the sort. If they do subpena me they will start something that will shake this country to its foundation."

ADAMSON LAW IS ISSUE.

The senator's attack on the Supreme court was uttered at the conclusion of a speech made by Judge Wanamaker of the Ohio Supreme court, who, citing the case of the Adamson law, said that a law passed by congress to prevent a great clash was now being defied by the railroad interests of the country while the Supreme court sat in judgment on the constitutionality of the law.

"On the one side," said Judge Wanamaker, "we have 400,000 laboring men. On the other we have $15,000,000,000 in wealth. Congress passes a law, and now this law is in danger of being overruled."

Judge Wanamaker urged a "gateway amendment" to the constitution to facilitate its popular amendment, and denounced "our traditional worship of the constitution."

WHAT A PROGRESSIVE IS.

"We have long worshiped at the shrine of the constitution," the judge said. 'What is, is right—this is the creed of the obstructionists and reactionaries; what is, is all wrong—this is the creed of the revolutionists; whatever is, is right—or wrong, according as it squares with reason—this is the policy of the true progressive—with a small 'p,' if you please."

Judge Wanamaker declared also in favor of releasing several judges from their benches three months in every year, "that they may keep in touch with the pulse of the common people."

OWEN BACKS HIM UP.

After Judge Wanamaker had concluded Senator Owen took the floor and vigorously upheld everything said by the judge and even went a great deal further in excoriation of the Supreme court.

Senator Owen said that the 531 members of congress were sworn to defend and uphold the constitution and that when they passed a law it was the natural presumption that they had given due deliberation to the subject and had weighed its constitutionality.

"Then for a court of nine members, of whom five can make a decision to pass on the law and override the judgment of the 531 members of congress is a piece of impudence," Senator Owen continued.

"ANTIQUATED INSTITUTION."

Mr. Owen declared the Supreme court was an antiquated institution, and that it had outlived its usefulness. In reference to the Adamson law, he said that the court's expected action in the case, no matter what it proved to be, is a piece of "judicial usurpation and ought not to be tolerated."

At his residence later Senator Owen said that he intended to take up the subject of the Supreme court's jurisdiction by a resolution which he would offer in the senate Monday. He said he had not finally determined on the text of the resolution, and consequently would not give it out at this time.

Senator Gore in Hospital; May Undergo Operation

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, who has been ill at his home here for several days, was taken to a hospital today for an X ray examination to determine whether a major operation would be necessary. A decision will be reached tomorrow. Physicians pronounced the senator's ailment as inflammation of the gall bladder and said his condition was alarming.

British Destroy Enemy Trenches Upon Wide Front

Fierce Battles Are in Progress in France, Roumania and Russia.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.
(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The British infantry broke its long inactivity last night and in a brief, sharp assault seized two German posts on the Ancre front, north of Beaumont-Hamel. The positions were held in the face of a strong counter attack.

Gen. Haig's troops also carried out a successful raid on the enemy's lines southeast of Arras, entering, according to the war office, "the enemy's trench system over a wide front and penetrating to his third line." Here dugouts were destroyed and much damage done to the defenses.

Surprise attacks by the Germans on the advanced posts of the French on the Somme, in Champagne, and near Mesnil, failed. On the Verdun front, however, the Germans succeeded in raiding trenches and bringing back captives.

Continue Balkan Sweep.

The onward sweep of the Teuton armies in Roumania continues without a check. The official report issued in Berlin today tells of the capture of five more towns. They are Rimniceni, Hartaru, Olaneasceu, Guilianca, and Maxineni. The invaders have reached the Sereth river line at two points.

Galatz, the most important of the Roumanian towns which remains in the hands of the defenders, is under the fire of the German and Bulgarian heavy artillery on two sides, and its fall seems imminent.

Focshani, another important city in central Roumania, apparently is on the verge of capture. It now is menaced by strong forces of the Germanic allies from both the west and south.

Details of the fall of Braila yesterday are contained in the official Berlin report. The Russians, before evacuating the city, destroyed most of the manufacturing establishments.

Fight on Russian Front.

Furious fighting is taking place in the swamp regions near Riga, on the northern end of the far-flung Russian front. Twenty miles southwest of Riga the czar's troops took the offensive and seized the road near Lake Babit, captured two rows of German trenches and made prisoners of enemy troops. Later the Russians captured a strong position southeast of the village of Kalnzem and swept in 275 prisoners and a light battery. Counter assaults by the Germans failed to dislodge the Russians from their new positions.

In the sector between the coast and the Mitau-Riga road, east of the River Aa, the Russians penetrated the German positions, Berlin admits, but the operation proved costly, as the Germans in counter attacks captured 900 prisoners and several machine guns.

WILL DEPORT CHICAGO WOMAN

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Mme. Elmira Brockway of Chicago, who was arrested in London last month charged with fortune telling, was found guilty at the West London police court today. She was fined $200 and costs and recommended for deportation.

Mme. Brockway, who is known as a psychic demonstrator, was induced to go to London several weeks ago to assist in the organization of a new British college for psychic science, and was taken into custody during a general roundup by the London police of persons found to be telling fortunes.

She is a woman of 60, with independent means. A son is a captain in the French army and has charge of the ambulance of the Red Cross on the western front.

GERMAN RAIDER IN THE PACIFIC?

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 6.—The mysterious schooner Tinto, believed to be at large and in charge of a German crew bent on preying on allied commerce, has its headquarters at an uninhabited island in the South Pacific, according to "reliable information" quoted tonight by the newspaper Razon. The information, it was said, came from trustworthy sources in Chile.

Wool Scarce; Paper May Be Used to Make Clothes

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 6.—Hereafter we all may have to be more careful about carrying matches, for paper clothing is as sure to come as taxes, according to James Kuppenheimer, clothing manufacturer. He states that the search manufacturers are making for a substitute for rapidly soaring wool is leading them to paper.

HISTORIAN OF THE FUTURE WRITING UP THE WAR

FIREMAN DIES IN SUBURBAN TRAIN WRECK

For nearly two hours last night a wrecking crew worked to release the body of John White, 4200 Ellis avenue, a railroad fireman, killed when a Blue Island express train on the Illinois Central railroad crashed into a switch engine at East Eighth street. The engineer of the switch engine, as well as passengers and crew of the passenger train, escaped injury.

The passenger train left Randolph street at 6:05 o'clock. As it was nearing Eighth street Edward McGowan, the engineer saw an open switch and applied the emergency brakes.

White was sitting in the cab and failed to see the oncoming train. He was pinned under the wreckage. As the passenger train struck the switch engine, the whistle of the latter opened and blew until the steam was exhausted.

SUICIDE'S BOMB KILLS ANOTHER

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 6.—Two men were killed and four badly injured tonight by an explosion in the smoking compartment of the Southern railway's Birmingham Special, just as the train was entering Birmingham from New York.

While train officials were unable to establish definitely the cause, there were indications that a quantity of nitroglycerin or some other powerful explosive had been set off by Lewis D. Walton, a Birmingham business man, as a means of committing suicide.

He was in the lavatory of the car, whose steel wall next the lounging compartment was blown completely away, and his body was dismembered by the explosion. The other man killed was W. J. Oliver of Birmingham.

EUROPEAN WAR SUMMARY

Germanic forces capture five more towns in Roumania. Important city of Galatz now under fire of artillery. Germany reports Russians burned manufacturing plants in Braila before evacuating it.

British raid German trenches on wide front near Arras on French front, penetrating to third line. Raiding and artillery actions in progress at other points along front.

Hard fighting at various points and, with varying success occurs along the whole of the Russian front.

Turkish statement reports the defeat of enemy attacks at three points on the Tigris front.

One British and one Danish steamer sunk by submarines.

CONDUCTOR DIES WORTH $500,000

Henry Torborg, 73, Worked Forty Years on Blue Island Avenue.

Henry Torborg, 73 years old, a conductor on the Blue Island line for over forty years, said to be the richest street car employé in the world, is dead at 2447 South Hamlin avenue. Quick pneumonia contracted while on his car three days ago caused his death. Torborg left his home in Indiana when he was 14 and when he was 19 he had saved $500, which he gave to his mother. He then worked on the steamship docks and sugar plantations on the gulf of Mexico for ten years. Finally he came to Chicago to work on the Blue Island horse car line. His wealth is estimated at $500,000.

His Investments.

He saved his salary from the street car company and invested it in real estate on the south side, and stock in the Railways company.

He had a number of sayings which he said helped him become wealthy. Some of them are:

Good spenders may be popular, but a bank account needs no friends.

Never pay for having work done that you can do yourself.

Make your vacations pile up your dividends.

The man who stops work is like the old mill out of use. He falls to pieces.

Son Like Him.

Torborg's wife has been dead for years. He has two sons, Milo and Arthur, who live with their sister, Mrs. Tillie Sanderson.

Milo is 24 years old and has worked for the railways company for five years. He is said to have a bank account now of more than $1,500 and he says that his father taught him how to save.

Mr. Torborg's home was a room in the Hotel Torborg at Blue Island avenue and Leavitt street.

Commander W. A. Moffett Promoted to Be Captain

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Commander W. A. Moffett, commandant of the Great Lakes naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill., has been promoted to the rank of captain. This was announced at the navy department today.

SOTHERN AT END OF STAGE CAREER, PHYSICIAN SAYS

New York, Jan. 6.—Announcement that E. H. Sothern never again will appear on the stage was made here tonight by the actor's physician, Dr. Joseph B. Bissell. Mr. Sothern returned tonight from Chicago, where he became ill several days ago.

Dr. Bissell, who went to Chicago and brought Mr. Sothern back to New York, said he did not think an operation would be necessary for the present. He added, however, that he had advised Mr. Sothern that he would have to give up the stage permanently and that the actor had consented.

Julia Marlowe, in private life Mrs. Sothern, went as far as Buffalo to meet her husband and Dr. Bissell but missed their train and returned here on another train about two hours after their arrival.

LOWDEN QUITS PULLMAN BOARD

Col. Frank O. Lowden, governor-elect, sent his resignation as a member of the board of directors of the Pullman company to President John S. Runnells yesterday.

In transmitting his resignation to Mr. Runnells, Col. Lowden said: "I do not feel that in the discharge of my duties as governor, upon which I am about to enter, I should be officially connected with a company whose interests might by any possibility be affected by any action I might be called upon to take as governor of Illinois."

Col. Lowden was elected a member of the board of directors the first time in October, 1901, and served until November, 1906. He was a member of congress from 1906 to 1911, when he retired voluntarily. He was again elected a member of the board of directors of the Pullman company Nov. 13, 1912, and has served continuously since that time. He was made a member of the executive committee June 25, 1915, and is still a member thereof.

"GOLD COAST" ROBBERY RAIDS TOTAL ELEVEN

Eight New Burglaries, Including Casino Club, Added to List.

Reporters for THE TRIBUNE yesterday uncovered eight new raids made by the Lake Shore drive burglars in the residence district between Chicago avenue and Lincoln park.

This brings the total number of Gold Coast raids credited to the bold band within the last few days to eleven. Seven of the victims were private residents. The eighth was the Casino club, upon which the burglars made an early morning sally that was frustrated only by the caution of the manager.

THESE HOMES ROBBED.

The persons whose homes were invaded, so far as learned by TRIBUNE reporters yesterday, were:

ROBERT G. McGANN, 120 East Pearson street.

CHARLES C. BARRETT, 54 East Division street.

DAVID B. JONES, 1435 Astor street.

F. F. NORCROSS, 1500 Astor street.

F. G. LOGAN, 1150 Lake Shore drive.

EDWARD BLATCHFORD, 1111 North La Salle street.

CHARLES McKENNA, 62 East Oak street.

The robbery of George M. Reynolds' Lake Shore drive residence was reported in THE TRIBUNE yesterday. The two other robberies reported were those of the John Borden and Mrs. Michael Cudahy mansions.

WORK WITHOUT FEAR.

The startling feature of the raids, which have given a black eye to the Chicago avenue police district, is that the burglars operated apparently mith small fear of attack from the victims or from their servants.

At the home of Banker Reynolds they enjoyed a meal. In the David B. Jones mansion they invaded the wine cellar, and with discriminating taste selected the imported champagne, passing up the domestic vintages.

They invaded bedrooms in which their victims were sleeping and worked slowly without fear for themselves. In four instances they awakened the sleepers, whereupon they made off, but apparently with little terror.

SHOW CRIME "TECHNIQUE."

It is believed the band is composed of three or four men. They appear to display a foreknowledge of the comings and goings of the rich that a society editor might envy, and an accurate working knowledge of the interiors of the homes they invade, and of the precise location of the domestic cache for valuables. They use an automobile.

The police to date remain powerless. The rapid tactics—hit and run—employed by the intelligent band, has left Capt. Russell groping at shadows and picking up for examination "old offenders" who in all their days never had the wit to conceive nor the technical ability to execute the brilliant sequence of robberies that keep the "Gold Coast" awake of nights.

SPECTACLE CASE CLEW.

The only clew the police have obtained so far that may be of value is an old spectacle case which was picked up in the home of David B. Jones after the burglary. Detective Sergt. George De Mar is taking the case to various optical establishments in an effort to discover to whom the spectacles were sold. Finger prints also were photographed in the Reynolds home by members of the Bertillon department.

Several persons, among them Mr. Reynolds, have seen members of the burglar party, and would have been enabled to come to grips if discretion had not supplied the warning that the intruder might be armed.

CASINO CLUB RAID

Here are the stories of the seven known burglaries and the attempted raid on the Casino club:

The Casino club "blow" was attempted at 2:30 o'clock Thursday morning, following a recent series of elaborate dinners which have left the club coffers more than usually plethoric. Three men approached the kitchen entrance and knocked. Manager Walter Keehn, who was alone in the club at that hour, drew on his trousers and went to inspect the cause of the commotion. He chose to be discreet. He called through the window and asked what was wanted.

GOLD COAST BURGLARS, WINE CONNOISSEURS, TRAVEL TO AND FRO IN AUTO

"There are burglars in the neighborhood!" replied one of the trio with crisp authority in his voice. "Open; we are officers and want to search the club!"

"Show me your badge," said Koehn, as did Little Red Riding Hood to the wolf.

Without a moment's hesitation one of the men flipped back his coat and snapped up something bright and shining on his waistcoat. But the light was better, for looking from Mr. Koehn's position he saw the bright and shining article was a watch, which the caller was displaying as a badge of authority.

Discovers Watch Ruse.

"All right," said Mr. Koehn. "I'll open at once." He retreated discreetly. Still discreetly he opened a side door and let himself out. Though he was barefooted and it was cold, Koehn went away from there like a telegram. He saw a black limousine standing at the corner of the drive. He rushed over and flung it open.

"What's up?" demanded the chauffeur.

"Rush me to the Virginia hotel," ordered Koehn. "Burglars are attacking the Casino club."

Without a word the chauffeur threw her in high and spurted off, leaving Koehn with the foot that had engaged the step still upraised in the air, after the manner of a stork taking a nap. And then it dawned on Koehn that the chauffeur probably was waiting for the burglars and knew the enterprise they were on. So Koehn sped over the ice surface of the city some more until he arrived at a hotel, where he telephoned first to the police and [illegible]n for some shoes.

THE M'GANN BURGLARY

On the night of Dec. 30 Henry Gross, the 21 year old son of Alfred Gross of Evanston, was a guest of Farwell Winston McGann at the home of the latter's father, Robert McGann, 120 East Pearson street. He occupied a guest chamber alone. At 3 o'clock the following morning he was awakened. He saw dimly a form moving about the room and the intermittent firefly winkings of an electric "bull's eye."

Young Mr. Gross decided for discretion. He lay still. Occasionally he opened his eyes a chink and glimpsed the intruder rifling his pockets and squeezing the links out of his cuffs. Then he watched him depart from the room. Mr. Gross got up and went to the door. He reached the hall in time to see the burglar entering Mrs. McGann's room.

He pressed a button, flooding the whole house with light, and setting bells to ringing in the servants' quarters, and at the same time he made an outcry of "Burglars!" But before a household posse could gather into a witful organization the burglar pattered down the steps and escaped. He secured $25 in gold from young Gross' pockets, his cuff links, valued at $60, and a stick pin from Farwell Winston McGann valued at $200. The intruder and his companions, if he had any, obtained entrance to the house by jimmying open the east dining room window.

ROBBERY AT JONES HOME

The visit to the home of David B. Jones at 1435 Astor street was paid Friday night. This job was executed without raising an alarm. Mr. Jones is in Los Angeles. Miss Gwethalyn Jones and several servants were the only occupants of the house. Forcing a window in the basement, the burglars ascended, and, after rummaging over the first floor without finding anything they cared to take, proceeded to Miss Jones' room. They worked so silently that Miss Jones was not disturbed. She was still asleep when at 7:30 o'clock a maid aroused her.

Miss Jones gave the police the following list of articles, all of which were taken from her dresser:

Two amber hairpins, diamond set, valued at $1,300; gold meshbag, valued at $500; gold meshbag, valued at $150; diamond set wrist watch, valued at $600; barpin set with diamonds, $200; two smaller barpins, valued at $200; gold pencil, valued at $15.

Selected Imported Wines.

The burglars took more leisure in robbing the Jones home than most plumbers allow themselves. After securing the valuable from Miss Jones' room they descended to the wine cellar and took out several bottles of imported and domestic wines. They only tasted the domestic wine, leaving all but a single glassfull in the bottle.

But they regaled themselves liberally with the imported wine and paid the delicate compliment to Mr. Jones' taste as a connoisseur of carrying several quarts (imported) away with them.

NORTH SHORE ROBBERIES

Not Only the Gold Coast but Contiguous Territory Has Been Visited by Burglars.

Following is a complete list of the wealthy persons robbed during the recent foray on the "Gold Coast," the amounts taken, and the dates:

A. E. FORD, 648 Lincoln parkway—Home entered Nov. 24; $34 taken.

NORCROSS WINDOW JIMMIED

The home of Frederic F. Norcross is at 1500 Astor street, just a few doors from the Jones home. A houseman discovered Thursday morning that a window in the ballroom had been jimmied and the lock broken. Mr. Norcross, who is a member of the law firm of F. F. & J. V. Norcross, said nothing was taken. It is believed that the burglars were frightened and retired immediately after entering the house.

REYNOLDS VISITED TWICE

It was discovered yesterday that burglars entered the home of George M. Reynolds, at 1444 Lake Shore drive, twice within a week. The second and sensational raid came when Mr. Reynolds discovered an intruder in his bedroom Friday morning and frightened him away with the $3,500 of loot he already had collected. It was preceded, however, by a visit last Tuesday, when Mrs. Reynolds heard some one trying to open the locked doors of her bedroom. She made no outcry at the time, and did not speak of the incident to her husband until the following morning.

On the second visit Mr. Reynolds was awakened at 5 o'clock in the morning and discovered the presence of an intruder.

Feared for His Life.

"I knew I might be killed if I left my bed," said Mr. Reynolds. "The room was dark but I could see the burglar standing beside my dresser. My first thought was to try to reach my revolver, but I decided that the burglar undoubtedly himself armed, would have the advantage. I half rose in bed and shouted: 'What are you doing there?' He made no reply but slammed shut a drawer of the dresser and rushed from the room. I jumped out of bed then, slipped on a robe and ran after the man; but he escaped out the rear way. The robber had eaten a meal before leaving. With five of the servants we made an inventory of the house, and found that the burglar had made an attempt to open Mrs. Reynolds jewelry safe which contained valuables many times greater than he secured."

The haul at the Reynolds home consisted of $500 in cash taken from Mr. Reynolds' pockets, an unknown amount of cash derived from the sale of tickets for the allied bazaar; pearl ring set with diamonds; coral pendant, gold mesh purse valued at $700; two pairs of pearl shirt studs, valued at $800, gold watch and chain and jewel box.

BARRETT RING RETURNED

A fourth robbery and one of sensational aspect not attributed to the band was uncovered during THE TRIBUNE'S investigation of the "Gold Coast" swoop. On Nov. 30 the home of Mrs. Charles C. Barrett, 54 East Division street, was robbed and the story was suppressed. It is reported that a guest in Mrs. Barrett's home returned a $1,000 ring which was stolen.

Mrs. Barrett last night refused to tell the story of the return of her ring. The police were called in on the case, and a young woman is said to have returned the ring while they were working on a remote clew.

SOUTH SIDE ROBBERY

Other sensational hauls outside of the Lake Shore drive district have been made by burglars in recent days, although it is not known whether the "Gold Coast gang" conducted the operations.

Friday evening robbers entered the apartment of Dr. R. W. McNealy, 5017 Blackstone avenue, and took jewelry valued at $3,000 while Mrs. McNealy was visiting neighbors across the hallway. From the McNealy home were taken a three stone dinner ring, value $700; two rings of two stones each, valued at $650 apiece, and a ring with three diamonds and two emeralds, valued at $1,000.

CRIME OF THE WEEK

A Seven Day Chicago Record.

Murders	6
Holdups	50
Burglaries and larcenies	322
Pickpocket cases	1
Con game cases	8
Stolen autos (not recovered)	7

The total of property reported as taken, according to police information, is $41,000, of which $31,000 was in burglaries and larcenies.

TOO MUCH CRIME "CURE"

Only 2,000 Men of Chicago's Police Force of 5,000 Are Patrolling Streets.

CHICAGO, with a police department numbering 5,000 employes, has less than 2,000 men patrolling the streets to prevent crime. Of the total force, nearly 800 are doing detective work and the rest are assigned to "special details."

After receiving these figures yesterday from the efficiency staff, members of the council finance committee concluded that the police department had twisted around the maxim about prevention and cure.

"Here's one answer to the crime situation," said Ald. John Richert, chairman of the committee. "We've got too few men on patrol duty preventing crime and too many men detecting criminals after crime is committed. If we had more prevention we wouldn't need so much cure."

On Dec. 22, 1916, the report of the efficiency staff showed that of 4,241 men on "regular" duty 1,769 were patrolling beats and 779 assigned to detective work.

The patrolmen worked on three shifts, divided so that 538 were on duty during the day time, 922 during the evening, and 309 during the night and early morning.

It was shown that Chief Healey has not complied with the provision of the reorganization ordinance prohibiting the assignment of patrolmen to plain clothes duty. At the beginning of last year eighty men were in plain clothes, and by the end of the year he had increased the number to 150.

"Special details" of patrolmen included thirty-eight men assigned to city departments, twenty-four to the county, forty-three on special work, and sixty-four on "miscellaneous assignments."

Of the remaining men in the department, 340 are traffic men, 106 lockup keepers, 413 wagon and ambulance men, and 57 detailed at bridges.

Missouri Governor Frees 92 Convicts; Term Ending

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 6.—Gov. Major, as one of the last acts of his administration, today pardoned ninety-two young prisoners from the state penitentiary. It was said by prison officials that the number was the largest ever released at one time in this state.

Robber Band on South Side Cleaned Up by the Police

The police of the Fiftieth street station yesterday cleared up the operations of a robber band whose activities cover five months, and recovered property valued at $5,000.

John Moller, 22 years old, and Raymond Garfield, 26 years old, held at the Fiftieth street station, are the alleged robbers. At the annex of the Hyde Park station Mrs. Sophia Garfield, wife of the latter, and Mrs. Dolores Claremont, 22 years old, a cabaret entertainer who lived with them at 113 East Forty-fifth street, also are held.

Late Thursday night the men were arrested after they had robbed a north side home. In suitcases in their possession was found property valued at $1,000. An hour later a raid on the East Forty-fifth street apartment was made, the police arresting the two women and confiscating the proceeds of the robberies.

Identify Their Property.

The stolen property was piled on tables in Lieut. John Hogan's office and about twenty persons viewed it during the day. By 5 o'clock last night practically all of it had been identified.

Nearly all the articles had been taken from seven homes and the owners will be called upon to sign complaints against the men. The robbery victims are:

JOSEPH T. DORGAN, 5347 Prairie avenue, $500.

L. P. WHITE, 4432 Calumet avenue, whose home was robbed last October.

JOSEPH LEAHMAN, 1006 Roscoe street, $1,000.

The name of the seventh victim is being withheld.

Moller Greets Victims.

Moller, during the identification of the property, sat near by and often would say to persons he recognized:

"Your stuff is here. This belongs to you, also," or "Don't forget this, it's yours."

Moller and Garfield were arrested after the family saw them fleeing and gave the alarm to the police.

The women, the police believe, had no part in the burglaries and knew little of them. Both denied complicity.

DESERTED WIFE SAYS HE USED "POISON PEN."

"Poison pen" letters, which she alleged her husband, Carl Mader, mailed to his friends in Chicago while a musician with the First regiment of the Illinois National guard in Texas, were shown to Lieut. McMahon of the South Clark street station by Mrs. Lillian Mader yesterday after she had led detectives to the Greenstone hotel at Wabash avenue and Harrison street and trapped her husband.

They live at 18 East Twenty-first street. She charges that Mader abandoned her and their two children six months ago after inheriting $20,000 through the death of his mother in Germany.

Denial by Mader.

Mader says he formerly was head musician for the Sportsmen's Club of America. He denied the charges made by his wife.

Mrs. Mader also showed the lieutenant letters which she says Mader had written to her from Texas. In these letters he addressed her in endearing terms, she said.

Mrs. Mader rushed into the station and exclaimed excitedly to the lieutenant that she had traced her husband to the hotel. Policeman William Casey went there with her and Mader was arrested.

Letters Ridiculed Her?

"While at the border," she said, "he wrote numerous letters to his friends here, ridiculing me. At the same time he wrote letters to me expressing love.

"In other letters he told me to go ahead and get a divorce. I waited for his return here and finally I traced him to the Greenstone hotel. He is a good musician and makes good money."

Mader will have a chance to tell his story in the Court of Domestic Relations on Monday.

Lead Detective Efficiency List.

Detective Sergt. Michael Mooney and Michael Neary of the detective bureau were first on the monthly list for efficiency at the bureau. Detective Sergts. Herman Otten and John Ryan were second according to figures given out by Lieut. James Larkin.

BIDS ON SHELLS ANGER DANIELS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Calling American bids on high projectiles for the navy outrageous, Secretary of the Navy Daniels announced today that the government armor plate board is also working on plans for a government projectile factory.

"It appears that American firms are so busy making shells for foreign nations that they are not particularly interested in our business," Daniels declared. "I consider their bids outrageous."

Daniels said he might ask congress to double the appropriation for a projectile plant.

The Bethlehem Steel company today offered the government a reduction of 10 per cent on its recent bids for construction of war ships.

Mayor Asks Continuance of Postal Tube Service

Mayor Thompson yesterday sent a telegram to Speaker Champ Clark of the house of representatives protesting against the proposal to discontinue the postal pneumatic tube service in Chicago. The mayor said the substitution of auto trucks for delivery of mail now dispatched through the tubes would result in inevitable delays, due to the congestion of Chicago streets.

PASTOR SAYS OFFICIALS RUN CRIME SCHOOL

Elmer Lynn Williams, more widely known as "the fighting parson," yesterday sent out a circular letter containing these charges:

"A school of crime is being operated in Cook county under official auspices! 'Stall fed perjurers' are taught to frame up on honest men.

"Burglars, safe blowers, and con men kept at public expense are allowed to commit crimes with the knowledge and consent of public officials, who share in the spoils.

"Judges are deceived to prevent their interfering.

"Policemen are disciplined and intimidated, and publicly maligned to line them up.

"The public is blissfully ignorant of the facts, but alarmed at the symptoms."

An investigation, the circular goes on to say, has been going on quietly for more than two years. The results will be told this evening in Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Locust and North La Salle streets, by the pastor, who is the Rev. Mr. Williams.

ROBBERS HAVE A BUSY NIGHT

Otto J. Haver of 1827 North Albany avenue, a driver for the White Laundry company, was held up by two armed men in front of 3741 North Kildare avenue last night while delivering laundry and robbed of $35.

William Heenan, 12 East Twelfth street, a watchman for the Chicago Industrial league, was robbed of $7 by three armed Negroes.

James Bunner, a driver for the Rosenheim Grocery company, was robbed of $7.50 at East Fortieth street and Lake Park avenue by two young men, one armed with a revolver.

Bride Saves Bridegroom; He Comes Back to Chicago

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Paul R. Fitpold, 20 years old, of Chicago, who was arrested on his wedding day, became mentally deranged the night he was released and was taken back to Chicago by his relatives this morning. Fitpold obtained his release through the efforts of his bride, who came to Detroit, obtained employment, and pleaded with officials until he was released. It is alleged Fitpold opened a letter containing a check for $5 payable to the Inagiffe Fuel company. He indorsed the check and cashed it, then journeyed to Chicago, where he met his schoolgirl sweetheart, Miss Edna Wagner. They were married and returned to Detroit. On their arrival Fitpold was arrested for forgery.

THIEVES REAP RICH HARVEST DURING WEEK

Commencement of New Year Shows Batting Average of .500 for Underworld.

Burglars, pickpockets, automobile thieves, holdup men, and swindlers closed the first week of the new year with a batting average of .500.

Daily reports forwarded to Chief Healey show a total of burglaries and larcenies of 322, which is seventy more than the previous week. There also were fifty holdup robberies, an increase over the last week of the year.

Automobile Thefts Increase.

Fifty automobiles were stolen, compared with thirty of the week before.

Only one pickpocket case was reported. There were seven the previous week. "Con" men and bogus check swindlers were on the job after a brief vacation. Eight cases of this nature were reported.

"Quietest Murder Week."

It was what the police call the "quietest murder" week in a long time, only two homicides being reported.

This was four less than the last week of 1916. The average in Chicago for the last year was one murder a day.

NAB ROBBERS IN THE ACT

Two men were captured by Policeman William Dornbus of the Chicago avenue station while robbing Charles W. Hood, night clerk of the Dover hotel at [illegible] North Clark street, early yesterday in the hotel office on the second floor. They gave the names of Frank Howard and Joseph Bender of 4592 Lake Park avenue.

The men drove up in front of the hotel about 1 o'clock and, entering, asked Hood if they could rent rooms. Before he could answer one drew a long knife and the other a revolver and commanded him to raise his hands. Because he failed to comply quickly they attacked him and in the struggle he was slashed across the face with the knife.

A third man and a woman remained in the automobile, but drove away at a high speed when they saw a policeman coming.

Woman to Tell of War.

George Hamlin will sing at Trinity church, Michigan boulevard at Twenty-sixth street, this evening at 8 o'clock. Miss Victoria Booth-Clibborn, granddaughter of Gen. William Booth of the Salvation army, will preach and tell of her life in the war zones.

BREWERY RULE OF CITY SALOONS UP TO THE MAYOR

Henry Hyde Finds "Big Bill" Could Stop Domination of Bar Licenses.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The breweries own half the saloon licenses in Chicago. They put in charge of these saloons irresponsible, sometimes criminal, men. Each of these men holds his job only as long as he can turn over to the brewery enough money. When he fails to produce enough cash he is turned out and another equally uncertain adventurer is installed. The result is that as the price of holding his job is to somehow find money to meet the brewery demands, these saloonkeepers are driven to make alliances with prostitutes, gamblers, and sometimes criminals.

That is the substance of Mayor Thompson's charge against the brewery interests of Chicago.

Up to Mayor?

It would seem to an outsider that the mayor has it in his own power to correct this situation.

Suppose that one of the brewery licenses is issued to John Brown, authorizing him to conduct a saloon at 111 Red street. When it is issued $500 is paid by the brewery to the city collector, covering the first six months license period.

At the end of a month, perhaps, John Brown proves a failure and the brewery turns the saloon over to James Black. Now, the law provides that in a case of this kind the new man must take out a new license and pay five-sixths of $500 to cover the five months of the first period remaining.

In other words, each time the brewery changes the man in charge of one of its saloons it must, if the law is enforced, pay over again the license fee for the time remaining of the six months period.

Law Not Enforced.

This law is not at present strictly enforced. Sometimes the change in saloonkeepers is not brought to the attention of the proper authorities.

A recent investigation of the saloons in a single police precinct—there were 30 saloons in all—showed that at least twenty of them were operating illegally. New men had been put in charge of them by the interests owning the licenses, and the additional payments required for the issuance of new licenses had not been made.

Soon Could Stop Practice.

If the mayor would instruct the police force, the license officers, and all other officials to check up and report on all saloons run by men other than those to whom the licenses had been issued it is probable that the effect would be immediate. It would, at least, make the changes in the ostensible ownership of saloons less frequent than at present. The breweries would be compelled to use more care in selecting their saloon keepers. They would seriously object to paying the license fee or any part of it over two or three times each six months.

There is another current practice, a reform in which would also help. At present when a license owned by a brewery is issued to John Brown the brewery agents at once take an assignment of the license from Brown and file that assignment with the city collector. That is done to protect the brewery from the possibility of Brown's selling the assignment to some third party.

Legality Questioned.

The legality of the practice is questioned. At any rate, there is nothing which compels the city collector to accept and place on file assignments which are made as soon as the license is originally issued.

By ordering the city collector under no circumstances to accept or pay any attention to these advance assignments, Mayor Thompson could probably make it unprofitable for the breweries to deal so extensively in saloon licenses.

The whole object of the law seems to be to make the individual who runs the saloon responsible for what goes on in the saloon. If, as soon as a license is issued, an assignment is filed which gives public notice that the individual named does not own the license, the spirit, if not, indeed, the letter of the law is plainly violated.

RUNAWAY GIRL SEEKING A JOB LOSES HER WAY

Edna Ralston, 17 years old, found life in the little town of Winchester, Ind., dull and decided to come to Chicago. Besides, too, she knew herself to be an expert at "housekeepin'" and why should she find any difficulty in obtaining a position here with some influential and wealthy family? She took French leave and landed at the Park row station. A few minutes' walk brought her to the Greenstone hotel at East Harrison street and South Wabash avenue.

Edna rented a room, "slicked up," and sallied forth in search of employment. After a few hours she decided to return to the hotel, but had lost her way. Traffic Policeman Kelly at South State and Van Buren streets found the girl crying and took her to the South Clark street station. She refused to tell Lieut. McMahon her name.

Policeman Doyle was sent to the hotel, where he searched the girl's baggage. It was not until he found a bank book from a Winchester bank showing deposits amounting to $38 that her real name was known.

DEFENDS WIFE IN ARMY CASE

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Weekly Dispatch today prints a long statement from Col. William Cornwallis-West in defense of his wife and her connections with Lieut. Barrett of the Welsh Fusiliers which led to the war office scandal and the denunciation by the court of inquiry of "petticoat rule" in the army.

"The whole gravamen of the charge against my wife is that she was very much 'in love with Lieut. Barrett,'" Col. Cornwallis-West says. "She herself admits she may have been indiscreet, but it was an indiscretion entirely born of her good heart and her solicitude. She was a mother to him, nothing more. She went to see him constantly and found him generally in tears.

"Before leaving him for the last time she went up to his room and found him again in tears. He said he thought that he was dying and she kissed him on the forehead and said: 'It's all right, Pat, don't be afraid,' and so she left him.

"That was a motherly action, surely, from a sympathetic woman of sixty-two to a nice boy."

Thirty Dollars More for Policeman's Widow

The widow of the murdered policeman, Edward J. Mulvihill, tomorrow will be the recipient of an additional $30 sent to THE TRIBUNE for her benefit. This monetary help has been contributed by the following TRIBUNE readers: Wisconsin Granite company, $25; H. B. Franklin & Co., $5. Including amounts previously acknowledged this fund now totals $183.

TOMAN 'DARES' MAYOR TO CLOSE VICIOUS SALOONS

Alderman Challenges Thompson to Prove He Is "on the Square" on Lid Attitude.

Ald. John Toman, chairman of the city council license committee, yesterday challenged Mayor Thompson to "prove he is on the square" by closing up the "rotten" saloons of Chicago.

Ald. Toman's challenge to the mayor was an answer to the latter's charge that the license committee is controlled by the "whisky trust."

"Everybody on the committee is for closing up the rotten saloons," Ald. Toman said. "If the mayor was on the square he could close them up in twenty-four hours. I could do it myself if I had the authority.

Suggests Police Raids.

"If necessary he could take a squad of policemen and go out and put the vicious saloons out of business at once.

"Why does the mayor shoot off his head about 'whisky aldermen'? I don't take orders from the whisky people and I bawl them out just as often as I do the mayor. I would just as soon tell the whisky people as the mayor to go and jump in the lake."

Ald. Toman indicated that both he and a majority of the license committee will oppose the proposed ordinance taking the license revocation power away from the mayor. It was this ordinance that inspired Mayor Thompson's broadside against the committee.

Won't Attend Meeting.

The mayor said in the morning that he would not attend the meeting of the committee unless he was informed in writing just what the aldermen wanted to ask him. He commented again on Ald. John Haderlein's reference to a mysterious person who had been able to get champagne at 3 o'clock in the morning in the Rienzi.

"Ald. Haderlein is a representative of the people, and it is his duty and that of every alderman who know of places that are violating the law to see that the law is enforced," the mayor said.

Again Hits Breweries.

The mayor also elaborated on his plans to wrest the saloons from brewery control.

"After the passage of the Harkin ordinance," he said, "the breweries formed a trust, as it were, and went out to get a monopoly on the licenses. That started the trouble. The saloon licenses were farmed out by them at high premium to many irresponsible persons. These irresponsibles, possessing nothing more than a white apron and having nothing to lose, are the ones who fail to obey the law."

The mayor declared he believed the passage of the bill making it a penitentiary offense to violate state saloon laws would in a large measure mitigate the evil.

WHITE GIRL IS GIVEN BACK TO HER 'MAMMY'

Marjorie Delbridge is going home to her black "mammy," who has cared for her for fourteen years, since her mother placed her in the care of Mrs. Camilia Jackson of 3222 Calumet avenue. The white girl was then 2 weeks old.

Marjorie has been in the Juvenile Detention home pending trial of the case. Until the trial is held she will be allowed to live with her "mammy."

Attorney James G. Cotter represented Mrs. Jackson.

"BUFFALO BILL" HAS A RELAPSE

Denver, Colo., Jan. 6.—Critically ill following a severe nervous and mental collapse last night at Glenwood Springs, Colo., W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) is due to arrive in Denver at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning on board a special car attached to a Denver and Rio Grande train.

Upon arrival in Denver he will be joined by his wife and his sister, Mrs. May Decker, and by his family physician, Dr. J. H. East. The party will then start for Cody, Wyo., the colonel's old home, if his condition permits the journey.

Col. Cody's collapse came suddenly last night, following a two days' stay in Glenwood Springs, during which time it was declared the colonel seemed to be in better condition than he had been for several weeks.

Little hope can be held out for his recovery, according to a statement issued by Dr. W. W. Cook of Glenwood Springs. Col. Cody's mental faculties are impaired and his memory is almost gone, according to Dr. Cook.

Steever Gets 16 Aids for Army Drills in Schools

Sixteen sergeants in the United States army have been notified to report to Capt. Edgar Z. Steever to assist in giving military instruction to the boys in the Chicago high schools, according to Supt. John D. Shoop. The men will make Fort Sheridan their headquarters. Mr. Shoop said he will hold another conference with Capt. Steever tomorrow, and the commission on military training appointed by President Jacob M. Loeb will hold its first meeting on Tuesday.

BUSINESS MAN LOSES ALL FOR GIRL'S SMILE

C. F. Collier, Sentenced on Serious Charge, Said to Have Deserted Wife.

A reporter went to the county jail yesterday and inquired for Charles F. Collier, gray haired candy store proprietor, sentenced recently to five years in the penitentiary on serious charges brought by a number of young girls.

Collier was brought from his cell to see his visitor.

"How do you do, Mr. Rudolph," said the reporter to Collier.

The prisoner almost fell as if from a blow.

"Rudolph—where did you get that name?" he demanded.

Pillar of Church?

"Isn't it true?" asked the reporter, "that your real name is B. F. Rudolph, that you formerly were an alderman and pillar of a church in Connellsville, Pa., and that you deserted your wife and family to run away with a young woman named Grace or Clara Rittenhouse Roberts?"

"I—I won't say a word about it," vehemently replied Rudolph, or perhaps Collier.

Assistant State's Attorney Ramsey, who prosecuted Rudolph, was more communicative, however. He told the following story:

"Rudolph was for years a respected citizen of Connellsville, a leader in the community's civic life, and a deacon in one of the town's largest churches.

First Went to Cuba.

"A few years ago, however, an infatuation arose between him and a young woman—I think she lived in the same town. He ran away with her to Cuba, and later brought her to Chicago. Here he started a candy store near a school at Wellington and Hoyne avenues.

"Prosecution was threatened ten months ago under the Mann act, but was abandoned, I believe, because the girl refused to talk, and because there was no commercial element in the case.

"Several months ago the girl left him. Shortly afterward evidence was brought to us that 14 and 15 year old girls had been lured by him into his candy store and mistreated there. There were no less than eleven complaints. He was convicted three weeks ago.

Son Comes to Chicago.

"About a week ago a young man called with Attorney Lester E. Lee at the state's attorney's office.

"'My name is the Rev. George Rudolph,' he said. 'I am the pastor of a church in Connellsville and the son of a man convicted under the name of Charles F. Collier. I would like to see him somewhere outside the county jail, as I want to be able to return home and say truthfully to my mother that I did not see father in jail.'

"A conference between father and son was arranged. It was held in Judge Barrett's chambers.

"'Father was led astray by a wicked woman of the world—an adventuress who employed vampire tactics to lure him from ways of the righteous,' said the younger Rudolph afterward.

"From what I was told today, however, 'father' was by no means the guileless innocent that his son described him. The woman, I was told, was a young girl, and I gathered that 'father' did most of the luring.

Seeking New Trial.

"Collier, or Rudolph, is making legal efforts for a new trial."

Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, said he recalled the case, but doubted if the man would be prosecuted if commercial elements in the case were not found.

"Dr. Rudolph called to see me one evening after prayer meeting," said the Rev. William Wedderspoon, pastor of St. James' Methodist Episcopal church. "He told me the story of his father. I expected him to call on me again, but he did not."

MEN'S CLOTHES CHANGE LITTLE

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 6.—No radical changes were made in the fashions for men's wear next fall and winter in the report submitted late today by the style committee to the annual convention here of the National Association of Clothing Designers. The committee's report says the double breasted sack coat promises to be popular for young men next winter and that conservative sack coats should be high waisted and without belts, while trousers should have cuffs.

In overcoats the raglan and ulsterette will come into vogue, with the ulster of trench type measuring forty-six inches in length and the box coat forty-two inches.

The sack coat of the business suit is to increase in length and vary from thirty-three to thirty and one-half inches as the most approved dimensions.

There will be a marked tendency to close fitting garments, padding to be wholly or almost wholly eliminated. Trousers will be cut with a narrow knee, fifteen inch bottom, and one and one-half inch cuff.

GEM MERCHANT REPORTS $2,000 JEWEL HOLDUP

This is the story of the robbery as Louis Epstein, partner in the Landfield & Epstein Jewelry company, room 206 Mid-City bank building, 803 West Madison street, told it to the police last night.

"About 6 o'clock a man wearing a black overcoat and a black plush hat came into our shop and said he wanted to see some diamonds. I showed him a tray, and none of them pleased him. I got out another tray, which had twenty small envelopes containing diamonds on it.

"I broke the seal of one envelope and poured out the stones. When I looked up he had a revolver pointed at me. He told me not to open my mouth. Then he dropped the stones in his pocket and walked out."

The police say that fifteen minutes elapsed before Epstein told the elevator man to call a policeman. Meanwhile the "man in the black overcoat" had ample opportunity to get away in the crowd at Halsted and Madison streets. Epstein says the loss, $2,000, is fully covered by insurance.

The janitor of the building, Oscar Beier, remembers seeing a man wearing a light overcoat in the jewelry shop. The elevator man, Matthew Ryan, recalls that a man without an overcoat went whistling out of the office shortly before 6 o'clock.

Soon after the robbery Epstein ran into the hall and shouted he had been robbed. Physicians and other persons who have offices in the building were startled by his cries and left their offices to learn the cause of the trouble.

Capt. Thomas Costello and a wagonload of policemen and detectives hurried to the scene and searched for the robber, but were unable to find any trace of him.

Epstein was taken to the station to be questioned and was joined a short time later by Meyer Landfield, his partner, and Mrs. Epstein, a bride of two weeks.

Four More Army Officers to Be School Instructors

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Four more army officers were assigned today for military training at high schools and other educational institutions. The four newly assigned officers will report to Capt. E. Z. Steever at Chicago before proceeding to the cities where they will begin work.

JANITOR STRIKE ALL OVER CITY UP TO LEADERS

Union Shows Its Strength in First Apartment Building Skirmish.

A janitors' strike in Chicago is threatened. At a meeting of the Janitors' union last night the actual calling of a walkout was left in the hands of the executive committee by an almost unanimous vote. "Immediate action" was prophesied.

More than 20,000 apartment buildings will be affected if a strike is called, and over 6,000 janitors are involved. They demand an increase in wages averaging a little more than 10 per cent of the present scale. Several weeks ago the demand of the janitors was put up to the various associations of landlords. When the demands were flatly refused a strike vote was called.

Strike Plans Tried Out.

Yesterday the effectiveness of the strike plans was tested on a thirty-six flat building at 824-36 Lakeside place owned by Fred Roth, a saloonkeeper, and several of his brothers. The janitor refused to start the heating plant, the milk men refused to deliver milk, the ice men ignored the tenants, and grocery drivers and coal men failed to call, it was said.

In a few hours, according to William Quessy, president of the janitors' union, the owners of the building made offers of a settlement and finally agreed to the terms proposed.

Just Here and There.

It is not the plan of the union leaders to call out all of the janitors simultaneously. Instead a few buildings in each locality will be "pulled out" and the rest of the janitors will lend aid. In this way the union expects to cause the tenants of the buildings so to harass the owners with threats of canceling leases in favor of flats where no strike is in effect, that quick settlements will be made.

BELGIAN TOILER TELLS OF LABOR IN GERMAN CAMP

Says Food Is Scant and Blows Frequent for Those Who Were Deported.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Three authenticated letters written by a deported Belgian in Germany to his family have arrived in London. They are the first that have been smuggled through. The first letter says:

"On the day when I departed, we received good soup at the South station. I ate none of it. I had been used to better things at home. Now I eat everything. At 2:30 in the night we were at Soldau in the prisoners' camp after having been in the train thirty-three hours. Here we were given maize soup. In the morning we received coffee (acorn water) without bread, at noon rump soup, too bad for a pig, and in the afternoon a tiny piece of bread.

"We slept on a poor straw bed; there were 150 of us in a wooden hut. On the third day after my arrival men were brought to do voluntary work. Later all had to do work. Those who refused were forced to go and work in the marshes under the supervision of a German. There were guards with their bayonets fixed and from time to time one or another of us was knocked down with the butt of a rifle."

Moved in Cattle Cars.

The second letter gives more details of the life at Soldau and the third says:

"It is six weeks since we left (Soldau). We were kept there from Monday to Thursday. During that time we received as food bread and soup twice. We remained on the train forty-three hours in cattle trucks. We were taken to a small commune of 1,700 inhabitants.

"We were led in groups to the railway, where we have to help complete a new line. At first several refused to work. Next day everybody refused. The German soldiers gave each workman an ax or a shovel. When they noticed that the workmen refused to work they fetched a noncommissioned officer. The latter at once began beating the men with the butt of his rifle. He hit two and broke the shoulder of a third. Thereupon everybody started to work.

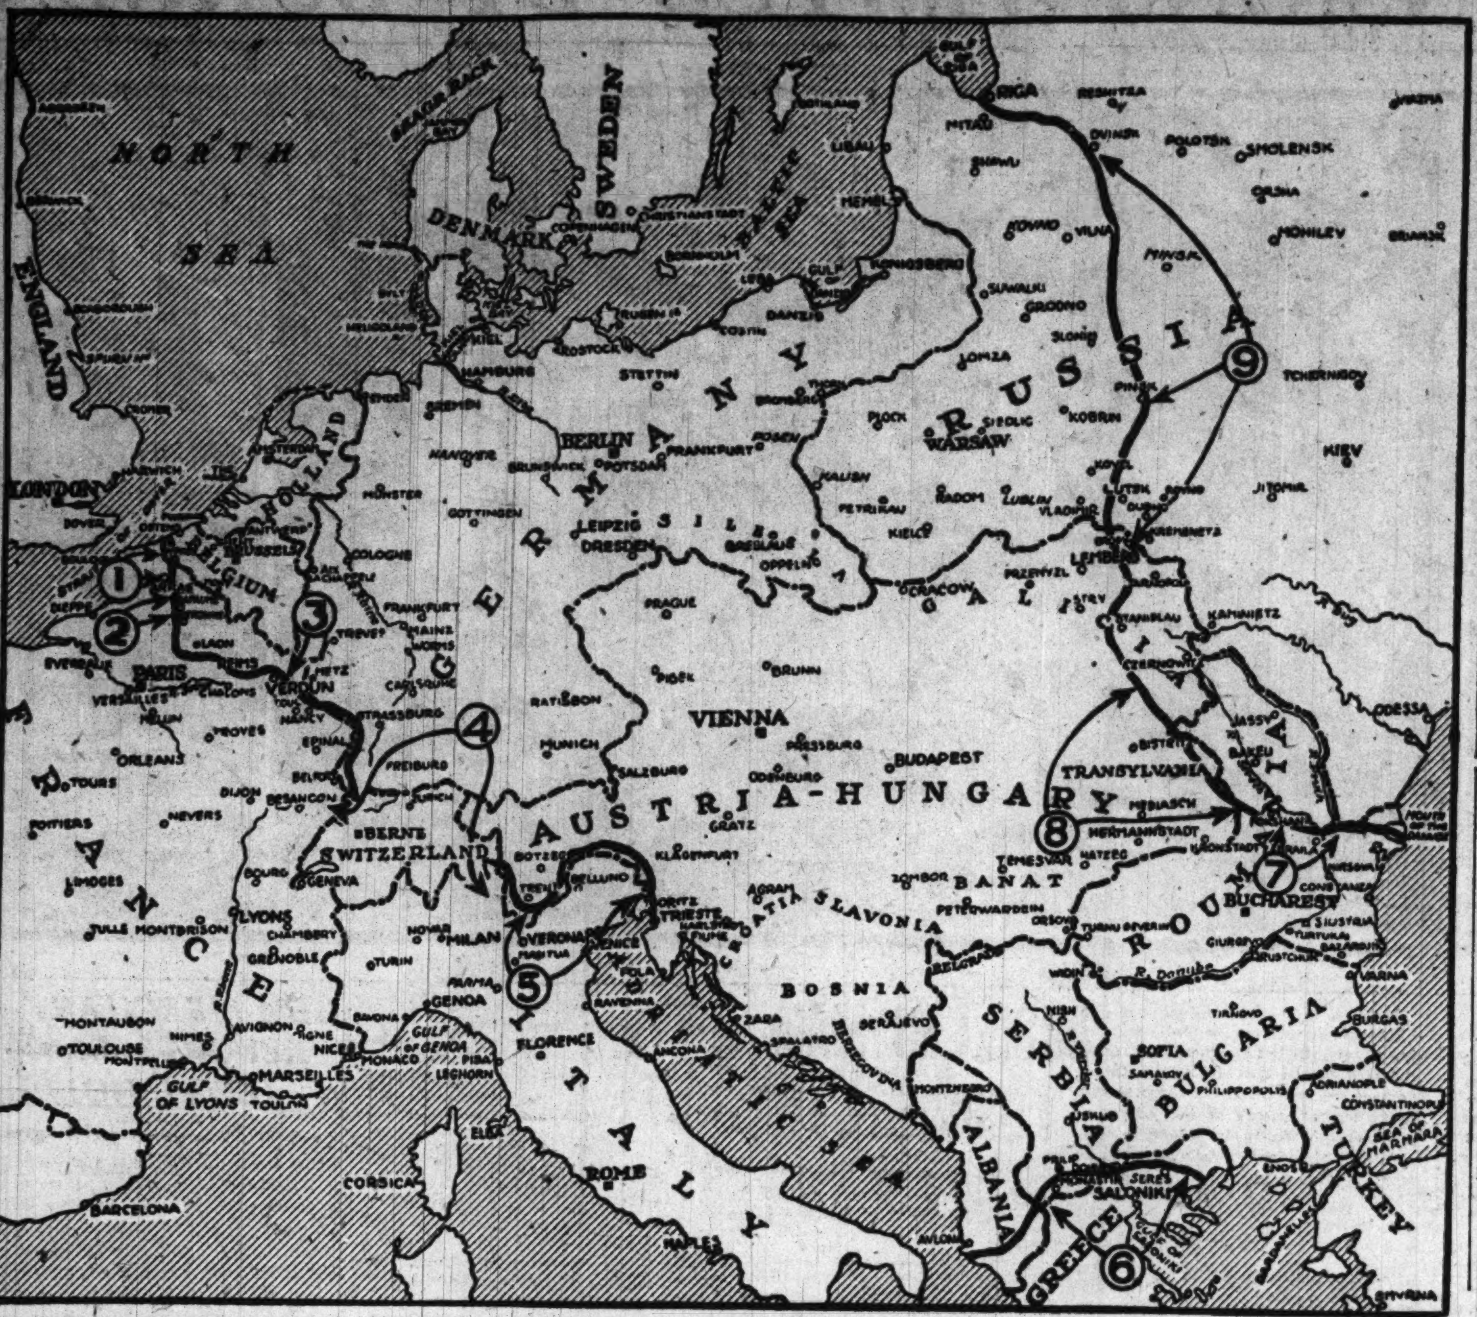
"Much more work is demanded and must be done in all weathers. The soldiers watch us constantly and blows fall upon us like rain. The clothes of many are already in rags.

Appeal Met with Blows.

"Our food consists of a quarter loaf, and at noon a litre of soup. We complained and sent a delegation with the message that, with such a diet, it was impossible to carry on the work demanded from us. Immediately six or seven Germans invaded our place and began clubbing us with their rifles.

"When some soup is left over and we push one another to get some more, they keep on striking us haphazard. I have seen them hitting with a pole with a long nail in the end of it. We endeavor to get the potato peeling in order to boil and eat it."

WEEK'S DEVELOPMENTS ON EUROPEAN BATTLE FRONTS



1—The famous Ypres sector was the scene of lively fighting during last week. There were indications that both sides were feeling out these positions in Flanders with a view to a new offensive on a large scale in the near future. Heavy artillery duels and trench raids were reported as far south as Armentieres and Arras.

As the week closed Gen. Haig reported that the British had penetrated enemy trenches as far as the third line on a wide front southeast of Arras.

2—Fighting on the Somme sector was confined to heavy artillery exchanges.

3—Berlin reported some successful trench raids northeast of Verdun during the week. Heavy artillery fighting also continued on this sector, which extended to the south along the Woevre plain.

4—As a result of the developments in the peace negotiations launched by Berlin and the entente's rejection of the Teuton proposals for a conference, there has been a renewal of reports that Germany and Austria would attempt new attacks on France and Italy through Switzerland in an effort to force the war to a decision. These reports emanating from the capitals of the allies were emphatically denied by Berlin and Vienna.

5—Rome reported spirited fighting in the Trentino, the Austrians being repulsed in an attack between the Adige river and Lake Garda. The Italians also reported small gains on the Carso plateau, where the artillery continues active.

6—The fighting on the Macedonian front, owing to unfavorable weather conditions, was of little significance. Only isolated trench raids and artillery firing was reported.

7—The central powers have reached the Séreth in eastern Roumania, where that stream joins the Danube north of Braila. This important town fell before the onslaughts of Von Mackensen's forces as a result of the flanking attack through Dobrudja. This Roumanian province has been entirely cleared of Russian and Roumanian forces. The battle line now follows the course of the Danube from the Black sea to the Séreth, thence along that stream to a point southeast of Focsani, swinging west and northwest around this Roumanian town to the Transylvanian Alps in the region of Oituz pass, and thence along the Maldavian frontier to the region of Dorna Watra.

8—Both the Teuton and Russian lines have been reinforced along the frontier and heavy fighting has been in progress all week. The reorganized Roumanian forces are again in action, and with the Russians are holding their positions.

Back of the lower Séreth and Danube the Russians and Roumanians are expected to make a desperate stand, for the loss of these positions would turn their entire line to the north and force their retirement from their mountain positions to the Séreth line and probably still further east of the Pruth. With Braila lost, Galatz becomes the chief front of defense north of the Séreth.

In the region south of Prusk, Petrograd reported the checking of an attempt by the Germans to take the offensive.

Southwest of Brody they took a Russian trench but were driven out again.

Three raids brought on some heavy artillery exchanges and counter attacks.

FIRST STEP FOR WORLD LEAGUE BY CHICAGOANS

President Lowell of Harvard Inspires 500 to Plan to Enforce Peace by Sword.

Looking toward immediate action after the close of the present war, 500 men and women of Chicago, inspired by an address by President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard university, took the first steps last night in Chicago's part to establish a league of nations to enforce future peace by means of the sword. A dinner was held at the Congress hotel under the auspices of the League to Enforce Peace.

A resolution was adopted indorsing the proposals of the league and organizing the Illinois state branch of the organization. The chairman, Charles L. Hutchinson, was authorized to appoint a committee of three to select the state committee for Illinois. Mr. Hutchinson chose James A. Patten, Harry A. Wheeler, and Arthur T. Aldis.

Supported by Fisher.

Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago introduced the resolutions, and they were supported in short talks by Walter L. Fisher and Edgar A. Bancroft.

The proposal of the league is not to interfere in the present war or to take any means for stopping it. It is planned to bind every nation willing to enter the agreement to submit all "justiciable questions" to a judicial tribunal for hearing and judgment, and all other questions to a council of conciliation for hearing, consideration, and recommendation. If any nation signing the agreement refuses to abide by it, the other nations will jointly make war against it.

President Lowell said that just as the present war is infinitely more brutal than the wars of 100 years ago, the wars of the future, if they continue unchecked, will be even more ruthless than at present.

Mankind at Crisis.

"Mankind is brought face to face with the alternative of losing its civilization in the blast of war or of contriving some means of stopping war, either by a league of nations or the domination of the whole world by one government," asserted Dr. Lowell.

"Of all the plans proposed for common action among the nations to prevent war the only one which seems to have a chance is that of the league for peace enforcement," Dr. Lowell said. "It promises success because it proposes the use of force. Utopian ideas of a millennium based on the possible moral improvement of men are al very well, but they do not remedy the disease.

"The plan proposed is to put force behind international law without the sacrifice of national rights, without a possibility of that force being used for aggressive purposes, and with a probability that it never will be necessary to use it."

Dr. Lowell cited the Monroe doctrine and its effects upon the colonization ambitions of Europe with regard to the Latin American republics. He declared that such an organization as the one he advocates would not be possible unless the United States gave its consent and subscription to it and meant what it said.

Critic of Monroe Doctrine.

"The Monroe doctrine," continued President Lowell, "is not an entangling alliance but an entangling enemy. It throws the glove to all the world. Several nations have desired to violate it, and yet there never has been a violation and not one drop of blood has been shed to carry it into effect.

"We do not agree to abide by the result of the tribunal, but we agree not to go to war until all the world has had a chance to hear both sides of the case. Preparation is not only not inconsistent with our policy but our program takes in preparedness. Armament necessary will be reduced, just as when we have a police force it is no longer necessary for every citizen to carry arms.

Pays to Hit First.

"We may have to go to war, but we shall always have a year's notice. Every nation that goes to war denies having struck the first blow. In war today it pays a nation to strike the first blow and then to say it didn't."

Charles C. Michener of New York, director of the field work of the national organization, urged Chicago to carry the movement to the surrounding cities and states.

Miss Jane Addams was seated just below the speakers' table.

"FIGHT ON"—KAISER

Wilhelm Says the Central Powers Now Must Force Enemy to Accept Peace.

AMSTERDAM, via London, Jan. 6.—A Berlin telegram says that the following order of the German emperor to the army and navy has been officially published:

"Conjointly with the allied (central powers) rulers, I proposed to our enemies to enter forthwith into peace negotiations. Our enemies refused my offer. Their hunger for power desires Germany's destruction. The war will be continued. Before God and humanity, I declare that on the governments of our enemies alone falls the heavy responsibility for all the further terrific sacrifices from which I wished to save you.

"With justified indignation at our enemies' arrogant crime and with determination to defend our holiest possessions and secure for the fatherland a happy future, you will become as steel. Our enemies did not want the understanding offered by me. With God's help our arms will enforce it. WILHELM I. R."

BELIEVE ITALY HOLDS UP PLANS OF THE ENTENTE

Diplomats See Broader Demands Made by Rome as Subject of Allied Conference.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—It is reported here that Italy either threatens to interfere with plans of the allies for more vigorous prosecution of the European war or seeks to increase its demands for compensation when the conflict is concluded. Because of Italy's attitude an unexpected situation has arisen, the outcome of which is uncertain.

This is the view reported as taken by entente circles. Nothing tangible has arisen, but the Rome conference of allied civil officials and high ranking military officers has furnished the text for this prediction.

The presence of Premier David Lloyd-George, Lord Milner of the British cabinet, and M. Briand, the French premier, at the council in the Italian capital is construed to mean that some obstacle has developed which alike is serious and unforeseen.

Outcome Vital to Allies.

Diplomats versed in European affairs do not hesitate to prophesy that differences have appeared between Italy and those nations with which it is coöperating. It is assumed that Italy is insisting upon greater recompense than the allies believe it is entitled to receive, or that it is unwilling to furnish men and munitions for operations elsewhere than along the Italian-Austrian frontier. Either of these suppositions would be equally vital to the allies.

The holding of the conference in Rome is regarded here as significant. Paris or London would have been a more convenient location. The selection strengthens the belief that the demands or objections of Italy will furnish the chief theme of discussion.

CONFERENCE IS PROTRACTED.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The conference of the entente statesmen, including Premiers Lloyd-George, Briand, and Boselli, was in almost continuous session today, according to a Havas dispatch from Rome. Premier Boselli presided at the meeting, which was the first of a number at which the general situation will be discussed by representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy, and Russia.

GERMAN NOTE TO GIVE TERMS

PARIS, Jan. 6.—A second note to the entente, which, according to the Lausanne Gazette, the central powers are reported to be preparing, enumerates their conditions of peace, the newspaper says, as follows:

First—The evacuation of Belgium in exchange for the Belgian Congo.

Second—The evacuation of northern France in exchange for the German colonies occupied by the allies.

Third—The creation of the kingdom of Poland within the limits of the grand duchy of Warsaw, with the exception of the province of Suwalki.

Fourth—The creation of the kingdom of Lithuania, comprising the provinces of Vilna, Kovno, Grodno, Suwalki, and Courland, with the retention of local autonomy.

Fifth—The cession to Russia of eastern Galicia as far as the river San.

POPE'S HOPE ON PEACE.

ROME, via Paris, Jan. 6.—"I hope that peace, founded on right and justice, will soon return to the world," said Pope Benedict in answering New Year's greetings today from the Roman nobility. He added that he regretted that the nobles were so few because some were dead on battlefields, that some are prisoners, and that others are at the front.

DEFNITE REPLY BY ALLIES SEEN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Indications increased in allied diplomatic circles here today that the allied reply to President Wilson's peace note, while following in the main the reply to the central powers, will have some additional features calculated to make it more clear whether a continuance of the negotiations is desired.

If the allied governments are determined to press the war to a military solution, it is expected they will leave no doubt that further exchanges at this time will not be welcomed; if not, the reply is expected to leave the door open for additional correspondence.

Appeal by Allied Bazaar for Girl Ticket Sellers

The Allied bazaar yesterday sent out an appeal for several hundred young women volunteers to sell tickets on Ticket day, Jan. 10, in the buildings and on the streets. Young women and young men who will donate their services and who are responsible are invited to apply to Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal or Mr. Laurence Heyworth, cochairmen ticket sale committee, room 405 Monadnock block, Jackson boulevard and Dearborn street, tomorrow between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Medical Schools Indorse Universal Army Service

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Unanimous indorsement of universal military training and service was given in a resolution adopted here today by more than a hundred faculty heads of medical schools and colleges throughout the country, assembled at the call of the council of national defense, to discuss preparedness measures as affecting the medical profession.

See Early Settlement of the Petrolite Case

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Settlement satisfactory alike to the United States and Austria will be reached in the case of the Austrian shelling of the Standard Oil tanker Petrolite soon after the new Austrian ambassador, Count Tarnowski arrived here, according to hopes expressed here by officials.

OFFICIAL REPORTS ON RESULTS OF EUROPEAN BATTLES

ROUMANIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—In the southern part of the wooded Carpathians there was a strong artillery engagement. Austro-Hungarian troops repulsed Russian battalions northeast of Kirlibaba.

South of the Trotus valley, Bavarian and Austro-Hungarian regiments stormed extensive hostile defensive establishments between Cotumba and Faitucanu. Between Casinului and the Suchitsa valley several points of support were captured.

German columns, after clearing height positions southeast of Soveia, are advancing along the valleys towards the northeast.

Army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen—After an effective artillery preparation, divisions of Lieut. Gens. Schmidt von Knobelsdorf (Heinrich) and Von Oetinger, commanded by Lieut. Gen. Kuehne, stormed the position of the Russians, strongly constructed and fitted with barbed war barricades, from Tartaru as far as Rimnicend, captured these towns, and advanced across the swampy river sector to the Sereth. The enemy there still holds some villages from which he launched unsuccessful counter attacks.

Further to the southeast Lieut. Gen. Count von Schmettow, with a reinforced cavalry corps, captured Claneasca, Gulianca, and Maxineni. The vanguards reached the Sereth.

The Russians, on the night of Jan. 4-5, desisted from further resistance south of the Sereth against the Danube army of Gen. Kosch and retreated to the north bank, sacrificing strong rear guards.

German and Bulgarian cavalry entered Braila from the west and German and Bulgarian infantry from the east across the Danube. The most important Roumanian commercial city is thus in our hands. The Russians before abandoning the city destroyed the majority of the Roumanian factory establishments.

In Debrudja, the third Bulgarian army, containing German, Bulgarian, and Turkish troops under command of Gen. Nerezoff, fulfilled their task. No more Russian or Roumanian soldiers remain there.

New operations that are intended are being begun. Galatz is under our fire.

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Jan. 6.—In the region of Dzviniach, north of Zolotvin (Galicia), our scouts attacked an enemy force half a company strong, killed a number of Austrians at the point of their bayonet, and made the rest prisoner.

A German company attempted to approach our trenches in the region of Kotumba, Roumania. Part of the company was bayonetted and the rest captured. South of Kotumba the enemy forced our troops to withdraw eastward.

The battle for the possession of a height north of the Usul valley was concluded with a counter attack on our part which overthrew the enemy.

Enemy attacks in the Oitus valley region were repulsed and our detachments occupied a height south of the Oitus river.

The enemy attacked the Roumanians on the upper part of the Suchitza river and pressed them back to Rosaca. The enemy succeeded also in pushing back the Roumanians in the region of Kopruria, southeast of the confluence of the Putna and Zabala rivers and northwest of Odobechti. Enemy attacks near the latter place were repulsed.

The enemy bombarded Rimniceni, on the lower Rimnik river, with his heavy artillery and took the offensive on the front Rimniceni-Gulianca-Klovenu-Maxineni and pressed back our advanced posts eastward, after a stubborn resistance. At nightfall the enemy undertook an attack along the high road from Gulianca to Obenechti, but was arrested by our fire.

We evacuated Braila on Thursday and retired across the Sereth river.

RUSSIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Jan. 6.—Enemy attacks on our detachments east of the Drul swamp were beaten back. Our detachments by a bold attack took possession of the road southwest of the end of Lake Babit and after a fierce struggle they occupied two rows of trenches east of the village of Kalnzem, southwest of Riga. Counter attacks were repulsed.

Our detachments moved on farther and reached the river south of the village of Kalnzem and took possession of the position southeast of this village. During our attacks we made prisoner three officers and 272 men and captured one light battery and six limbers. Counter attacks were unsuccessful.

Our scouts under the command of Ensign Demianoff discovered an enemy column in the region of Mislahno, southeast of Kovel, who were attacking our outposts. Ensign Demianoff, after instructing our artillery as to the moment for opening fire, attacked the enemy by surprise. Part of the enemy column was bayonetted. The remainder, who were fired upon by our artillery, dispersed.

A party of our scouts forced their way into an enemy outpost position south of Mount Koverly. A number of men were bayonetted and the others made prisoner.

GERMAN

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—Front of Prince Leopold—The Russians repeated their attacks between the coast and the Mitau-Riga road. East of the river Aa they entered our position, across a frozen swamp, to the width of a battalion. At all other points they were repulsed. In counter attacks 900 men and several machine guns remained in our hands. Attacks by smaller Russian detachments at numerous places on the Dvina front and north of Lake Miadziol met with no success whatever.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

BULGARIAN

SOFIA, Jan. 6.—In the bend of the Cerna [Macedonian front] Lieut. Brandek shot down his second captive balloon, which fell in flames.

GERMAN

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—Artillery fighting occurred in the Cerna bend and skirmishing patrols on the Struma front. Greek coast towns between the mouths of the Struma and Mesta rivers are shelled every day from the sea by entente warships.

FRENCH

PARIS, Jan. 6.—Bad weather has impeded operations at almost every point in Macedonia. Especially spirited artillery fighting continues in the regions of Gatevgeli, Lumnica, Monastir, Madyag, and in the Cerna area near Rapesh. Reports have been received of the checking of a Bulgarian attack on Leskovo and of a well conceived action of British troops again Keupri, near the railroad between Seres and Demar-Hissar. The British fleet bombarded Akar, Vika, and Semuartelos, north of Orfant.

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH

LONDON, Jan. 6.—North of Beaumont-Hamel we seized two hostile posts last night. A subsequent enemy counter attack was beaten off and our new positions were consolidated.

We successfully raided the enemy's positions southeast of Arras under cover of a heavy bombardment. Our troops entered the enemy's trench system over a wide front and penetrated to his third line. Many dugouts were bombed and destroyed and much damage was done to the enemy's defenses.

There has been increased artillery activity in the neighborhood of Hebuterne.

FRENCH

PARIS, Jan. 6.—During the course of the afternoon there were violent but brief artillery actions in the region of Passchendaele (Belgium).

On the Somme front our artillery effectively shelled German organizations in the region of Bois l'Abbe, Omiecourt, and Licourt. Surprise attacks by the enemy on our advance posts east of Butte du Mesnil in the region of Maisons de Champagne and west of Arracourt were repulsed by our fire. The enemy left prisoners in our hands.

GERMAN

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—During last evening there were vigorous artillery engagements in the Ypres salient on both banks of the Somme and in isolated sectors on the Champagne and Meuse fronts.

Near Serre, north of the Ancre in the Somme region, British troops in a night attack entered our most advanced trench.

Our raiding detachments in the Massiges district and on the northwestern front of Verdun brought back prisoners from the French lines.

EAST AFRICAN FRONT

BRITISH

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Our columns pursuing the enemy in the Rufiji valley occupied a German camp on the Tahogowali river and reached Kibambawe, on the north bank of the Rufiji, on the morning of Jan. 5. The enemy still holds the south bank.

VILLA LEADING FOE INTO TRAP, EL PASO BELIEF

Reports of Three Days' Battle Near Chihuahua City Conflict—Fighting Is Renewed.

BY WEBB MILLER.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 6.—With advices that heavy fighting between Villistas and government forces was resumed near Jiminez today, United States department agents tonight made widely divergent reports upon the result of the three days' battle at Jiminez.

Based on official bulletins issued by Carranza officials, asserting that Gen. Murguia's army inflicted an "irreparable" defeat upon Villa's forces, some federal department agents declare that Villa's bold effort to eliminate Murguia's army—the strongest force of government troops in northern Mexico—failed, and that the bandit leader has suffered staggering blows to his plans for securing control of northern Mexico and establishing a provisional government.

Villa Plays Shrewd Game.

Other United States authorities declare they have obtained information that Villa is playing a shrewd game, feigning a retreat in order to draw Murguia far from his base.

Then, it is asserted, Villa detachments will sever Murguia's line of communication and Villa begin his real attack. One government official tonight stated that his report of the result of the Jiminez battle was "diametrically opposite to Gen. Murguia's story."

Mining men secured advices tonight that bandit forces have circled southwest of Jiminez and are making another attack upon government troops.

Sees End of Border Friction.

New York, Jan. 6.—Nicifero Zambrano, treasurer of the de facto government of Mexico, recently sent to Washington by Gen. Carranza as his personal representative and who came here today, issued a statement in which he predicted an early settlement of the border difficulties.

He based his belief, he declared, on the fact that the American government is considering seriously lifting at an early date, for the benefit of the Carranza government, the embargo placed by President Wilson on the shipment of arms into Mexico, the recall of Gen. Pershing's expedition, and the sending to Mexico of Ambassador Fletcher.

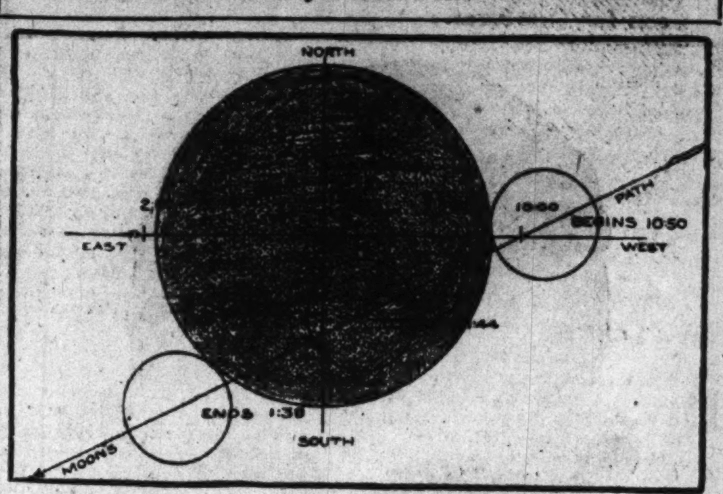
Mr. Zambrano said he had called on Secretary Lane and George Gray of the American commission, with whom he discussed the Mexican situation. He let it be understood also that he was received by President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing. As the result of his visit to Washington Mr. Zambrano said he had reported to Gen. Carranza that prospects for an early adjustment of the existing difficulties are very bright.

Speed to Stop Smugglers.

Laredo, Tex., Jan. 6.—Acting on reports that a filibustering party or smugglers were attempting to cross the Rio Grande into Mexico at some point between Laredo and Minervo, forty miles west of here, K troop, Fourteenth United States cavalry, was sent hurriedly to that section tonight. Military authorities declined to discuss the matter further than to admit that either smugglers or filibusters were reported active in the vicinity of Minervo.

MOON ECLIPSED TONIGHT

How Earth Will Cast Its Shadow on Satellite and Totally Obscure It.



For the moon to be eclipsed the earth must be so placed that its shadow will fall upon our satellite. If the sun and moon traveled along the same path in the sky there would be a lunar eclipse at the instant of of every full moon. However, the paths of the two bodies actually cross at only two points, because the moon's orbit is slightly tilted. An eclipse can occur only when there is a full moon very near to one of these intersections.

The moon in its course about the earth will enter the shadow at 10:50, reach total eclipse at 11:44, and will emerge entirely before 1:38 a. m. All the direct sunlight will be extinguished, and the only illumination to render it visible will be light bent inward by our own atmosphere.

A person watching this eclipse from the moon (were such a thing possible) would see only the night side of the great earth overhead. The sun, encircled with glowing fire-mists, would slowly disappear behind it, until there would hang in mid-sky a dull black ball, encircled by a crimson ring of sunset light. After the daylight is gone our morning and evening skies appear very brilliant, and it is these, shining on the moon, which give it its ruddy hue.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—A total eclipse of the moon, visible throughout the United States, and the first of seven eclipses to occur during 1917, will begin Sunday night at 12:50 a. m., eastern time [11:50, Chicago time], according to officials of the naval observatory.

At that hour the moon will first come in contact with the earth's shadow, and at 2 a. m. it will be entirely within the shadow. For one hour and twenty-nine minutes the total eclipse will continue, and then the moon will begin to leave the shadow, finally coming into full light at 4:39 a. m.

This will be the first total eclipse of the moon since 1913 and the first that has been completely visible here since 1910.

DEMANDS GREECE REDRESS WRONG TO U. S. CITIZEN

American Minister Appeals on Behalf of Man Called a Rebel Soldier.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A dispatch from Piraeus to the Daily Telegraph says the American minister has presented to the Greek government a note which is illuminating with regard to many of the dark deeds of Dec. 2. Here are a few of the principal passages:

"On Dec. 2 an American citizen, Basil Saffis, was arrested as a revolutionary by Greek soldiers, who took from him $717, notwithstanding his energetic protestations and production of his American passport.

"He was brought before an officer of high grade, who refused to hear him, but ordered the soldiers to take him to the office of an undercommander, accompanying the order with a wink.

"Realizing that he was being led to execution, he implored his guards not to commit such a crime, but the soldiers beat him. At the barracks Saffis was examined by several officers, who, after becoming convinced of his nationality, asked him if he knew anybody who would render himself responsible for him. There was present a noncommissioned officer who is related to him and on whose guarantee he was set at liberty."

The note ends by asking restitution of the stolen money and an official inquiry into the outrage against an American citizen.

Vopicka Asked to Reply to Charges of Germany

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Secretary Lansing today cabled Minister Vopicka at Bucharest, accredited to Roumania, Serbia, and Bulgaria, asking for a statement on Germany's charge that he had been guilty of unneutral conduct in favor of Roumania. During the investigation the minister will be continued at his post. If the charges are substantiated he will be dropped from the diplomatic service; if not, he probably will be transferred out of courtesy to Germany.

BERNARD SHAW SAYS KAISER CAN WAR 100 YEARS

Briton Asserts Teutons Are Inexhaustible, but Disgusted with the Conflict.

BY F. V. CONOLLY.

[Copyright, 1917: By American Press Association.]

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The newsboys were shouting "Germany proposes peace" as I rang the bell on the little gate on the first landing of the broad staircase of 10 Adelphi terrace, George Bernard Shaw's town residence.

It was answered by the philosopher himself, who unlatched the gate and showed me into his sanctum.

"Come up. Come up," he cried, his reddish beard tinged with gray streaming in the draft, like "Thon's blown by the night wind." "Now what is it?" he inquired, standing erect, alert and expectant, like a viking warrior in a pepper and salt lounge suit.

"Do you think, Mr. Shaw, that the proposals of Germany for a statement by the allies as to their terms of peace should be considered seriously by England, France, Russia, and Italy or merely brushed aside as an insincere diplomatic move on the part of the central powers?"

"What are we coming to that it should be possible to ask such a question?" exclaimed Shaw emphatically. "To take the proposals with anything short of the deepest seriousness would be an exhibition of frivolity in the face of horrible calamity which could only be characterized as revolting blackguardism. It would put us in a position of inexcusable moral inferiority. We have no right to assume that it was meant to do so; but if it was, it is our business to see that it does not succeed."

Sees Germany Disgusted.

"Is it your opinion, then, that Germany is so exhausted by the war that she is honestly desirous of peace, or are her proposals, as a section of the press declares, merely bluff?"

"Germany cannot be exhausted by the war," was the reply. "The central empires can afford to go on fighting for a hundred years as well as the allies can. But Germany, being human, is necessarily disgusted, damaged, disillusioned, made miserable by the war, and must be honestly desirous of peace. So are all the other belligerents. It is the vaunted desire for war to the last shilling and the last man that is dishonest and insincere."

"Then do you think the allies ought to discuss peace? If so, what terms should they offer Germany?"

"Of course they ought to discuss peace," was Shaw's response. "In every war peace should be continually discussed from the beginning until it is actually achieved. As to terms, they should offer and demand the best terms they think they can get. But this leaves open the question of whether they should aim at the best terms for their reigning dynasties, according to the ideas and ambitions of kings and courts, or at the best terms for Europe and the world.

What Terms Should Be.

"For instance, if they offer to agree to the independence of Poland, provided it be made a republic, and the internationalization of Constantinople and the straits, instead of making it an appanage of the czar at the expense of the sublime porte; if they agree that neither a German nor an English ruler or a German-English ruler can be tolerated in Greece, and that he must be replaced by President Venizelos or some other Greek citizen, with appropriate republican institutions; in short, if instead of gabbing about the rights of small nationalities, to be used as handy little properties to settle their own Hohenzollerns on, they would embrace the future boldly as the champions of democracy, then their terms will have intelligence and moral weight and be worth fighting for.

"But if they aim only at a division of the spoils between King Tweedledum and King Tweedledee, it will not matter twopence to you or me what the terms are, providing they are an excuse for stopping the senseless slaughter and ruin."

"Do you think," I inquired, "that the British masses have any more confidence in Lloyd-George than in Asquith, and do you believe that such men as Lord Devenport, about whom Ben Tillet, secretary of the Dockers and Transport Workers' union, once hysterically prayed at a strike meting, 'God strike Lord Devenport dead'; Lord Milner, Lord Curzon, Lord Rhoudda, Sir I. Maclay, and others command the confidence of the British democracy?"

"I don't know," Shaw answered. "All the gentlemen you name have been careful not to put their popularity, or that of their party, to the test of a general election since the war began, and they are not likely to do so, especially since the result of the Australian conscription referendum has opened their eyes to the fact that the predominant sentiment roused by the war is simply loathing of it, and agonizing doubt whether it is really inevitable or was ever necessary."

If I Were King.

"If you were King George, Mr. Shaw," I asked, "and had the appointment of the cabinet placed unreservedly in your hands, whom would you appoint to ministerial positions to settle the present terrible crisis?" Shaw stroked his beard.

"I don't know what I should do if I were King George—act as he does, I suppose," was the answer. "But if King George were King George Bernard, which I suppose is what you mean, he would do what the kaiser's grandfather did by the advice of Bismarck; that is, announce that as his parliament was obviously impotent and incapable he would govern the country himself for the people.

"He would then trump Bethmann-Hollweg's lead by replying that the war is a most pestilential nuisance to us; that it is causing us horrible personal suffering and material mischief; that it is doing the same, as we know perfectly well, to all the allies and all their enemies; that, nevertheless, there is nothing physically impossibe or financially impossible in both sides going on with it for the rest of the century if we are fools enough.

Would Overcome Pride.

"He would say that its apparent popularity is manufactured by people who make so much money out of it that they find it worth while to finance newspapers, written by cads for cads, by idiots for idiots, by ignoramuses for ignoramuses; that will create by reaction so powerful a republican peace movement that if the kings do not stop it there will presently be no kings at all. I am willing and anxious to make peace on any terms that the irreducible minimum of human pride and pugnacity will bear, and that I call all the world to witness that a gentleman can say no more and no less."

I thought for a moment and resolved to put a poser to him. "Now I will also assume, Mr. Shaw," I said, "that you possess absolute power. What would you do, if you were in that position, to restore 'peace on earth' and bring about such a better understanding in the future that war would be extremely unlikely, not to say impossible?"

Back came the reply: "I must refer you to the publications of the Fabian society, to the research department, of which I have the honor to be, as Dick Swiveller said, 'perpetual grand.'

"All human problems, except those that are insoluble, have been solved by this deserving body."

Indianan Breaks Up Convention to Consider Corrupt Practices in North.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Clifford S. Lee of Indianapolis dropped a verbal bombshell into the meeting of the National Popular Government league today and when last observed the distinguished southern Democrats who dominate the organization were running for cover.

Under the guidance of Senator Owen of Oklahoma, Democrat, the league, which professes nonpartisanship, had been discussing the necessity of stringent corrupt practice legislation to eradicate the deplorable corruption alleged to inhere in elections in Indiana, Illinois, and other northern states.

In the midst of the southern lamentation over conditions in the northern states Mr. Lee obtained recognition and presented a resolution condemning the disfranchisement of Negroes and even of some whites in the southern states.

Southerns Are Surprised.

This move wrought consternation in the nonpartisan organization. Senator Owen, president of the league, sought to shut off Lee by referring the resolution to the committee on resolutions, but the Indiana man came back with the revelation that no such committee had been provided.

Then Mr. Lee, who is the associate editor of the National Republican, proceeded to address a few pointed remarks to the southern Democrats. He said that the corrupt conditions in Indiana were the result of domination by a corrupt Democratic machine, and then added:

"If it is dishonest to expend large sums of money in elections even for legitimate purposes, it is doubly dishonest and worthy of reprobation to use the machinery of the government to convert majorities into minorities.

"There are states in this union where peonage pure and simple is practiced; where citizens by birth right are deprived of their right of suffrage.

"The returns of the recent election have called attention to the fact that in the state of Illinois, with twenty-nine electoral votes, there were more ballots cast for president than in the twelve states of the solid south, with 132 electoral votes. In Illinois over 2,000,000 persons voted for president and in the solid south only a little over 1,000,000.

Urge an Impartial Attitude.

"In all the southern states Negroes, totaling more than a million and a half, are not permitted to vote at all, yet the whites count them eagerly enough in figuring the population on which the representation in the electoral college is based.

"I believe that any organization with a purpose such as this one has, in championing a campaign to end corrupt practices in elections should embrace in its efforts corrupt practices in the south, as well as in the north."

The southerners were flabbergasted, but one of them had sufficient presence of mind to move an adjournment and the motion was carried. It was stated tonight that Mr. Lee's resolution had been effectually chloroformed.

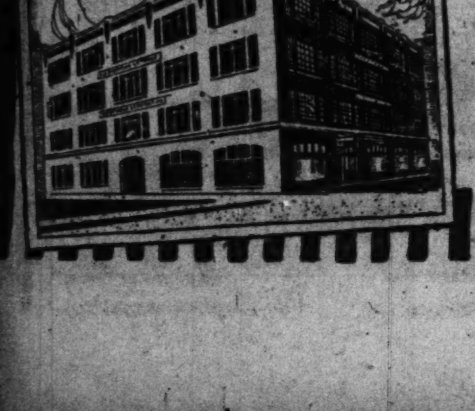
"'Burnall' saved 26% fuel in this building."—A. J. Pardridge & Co., Real Estate.



Thompson Co. Bldg.
Pittsburg, Pa.

—"a saving of 25% in our fuel bills, less labor and less smoke. We are greatly pleased with results on our two down-draft boilers."—E. J. Thompson.

When I tell YOU that a Burnall Fuel Saver attached to your heating plant will save you 25% to 40% on your coal bills—I MEAN EXACTLY THAT!

You Owners of Apartment Buildings who are spending hundreds and thousands of dollars each year for coal—and still have your tenants "kicking for more heat"—I will convince you as to the absolute truth of every claim I make for Burnall Fuel Savers! I will demonstrate to you beyond a doubt that you are today—without a Burnall Fuel Saver—actually burning up twenty, fifty and one hundred dollar bills in your furnaces.

In view of the high price of coal—the highest it has ever been—this is an inexcusable and a preventable waste. If, therefore, I guarantee to cut down your fuel consumption at least 25% to 40%, certainly you should investigate such a remarkable claim.

BURNALL FUEL SAVER
: GUARANTEED :

Nor do I ask you to accept my word without proof. Let me show you the letters and affidavits I have from some of the biggest property owners from all over the country who have gladly testified that the Burnall Fuel Saver attached to their heating plants did even more than it was contracted to do.

If a "Burnall" did not produce results—if it did not positively cut down your coal bill 25% to 40%, I would not dare to back this claim with the written guarantee of the Burnall Corporation. Nor could I afford to install at our expense a Burnall Fuel Saver on your heating plant and put it to a thirty days' test in order to convince you as to its efficiency and practicability, and that is the offer we make you.

Call at our office or make an appointment for our representative and we will explain to you the simple principle on which the Burnall Fuel Saver works and install one for a thirty-day free test.

This is our busiest season and quick action on your part is advisable. See us at once.

Earnestly yours,

Burnall Corporation

INQUIRY ON LEAK TO BE SWEEPING; NO FAVORITISM

Wall Street Writers Blamed—Gardner Makes Public "Tip" Given Over the Ticker.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Congress, on edge, tonight awaited the rap of Chairman Henry's gavel Monday, when Secretary Lansing, Presidential Secretary Tumulty, Thomas W. Lawson, practically every financial writer in Washington, and perhaps a half dozen big financiers of Wall street will appear at the house rules committee's investigation of the leak on President Wilson's note to belligerents.

The hearing will be one of the biggest things, in the investigation line, that congress—with all its investigations—has seen in years. It will go right through to a finish—with a night session if necessary.

Shown There Was Leak.

It was established today beyond question that there was a leak.

Representative A. P. Gardner of Massachusetts produced a copy of the Dow Jones ticker service report sent out a few hours after Secretary Lansing told newspaper men, in confidence, that the president had sent his note. This ticker service report "predicting" what the president had done appeared in print in the offices of its clients in New York ten hours before the time which Lansing told the newspaper men it could be made public.

It was furthermore established today that this ticker report was disseminated almost an hour before the stock market closed.

One other prominent feature of the day's hearings was that the suspicion of many congressmen point to attachés of American embassies or some of Washington's corps of financial writers as responsible for the leak.

Lawson to Be Target.

On the shoulders of Thomas W. Lawson will fall the full wrath of the committee.

He made the statement that gave Wood's resolution its privileged status in the house—that "the capitol had been wallowing in Wall street leak graft for forty years."

The two sensations of today's meeting came when Representative Gardner of Massachusetts proved there was a leak and when the committee decided to summon the financial writers.

Representatives Wood and Gardner were the day's witnesses. Wood, on examinaton, admitted he could not locate "A. Curtis," who in a letter gave him the information which drew official denials from all over Washington and New York.

Writers May Give Clew.

The big result of the day was the order for the appearance of the financial writers, for all telegrams and private wire messages sent by them at the time of the leak, and for individual lists of stock transactions by New York and Chicago stock exchange members.

The newspaper men subpœnaed are John Boyle and Henry E. Eland of the Wall Street Journal, and W. A. Crawford, Ernst A. Knorr Jr., A. L. Geiger, Nelson M. Shepard, and A. M. Jamieson, employés of the Central News of America, which supplies information to Financial America.

The Harrison criticism of Wood's action regarding the Curtis letter precipitated a wrangle at the opening of the hearing between Republican and Democratic members.

"Representative Wood is not the author of the charges under inquiry here," Mr. Chiperfield protested, "and his motives cannot be impugned. I think that we are losing sight of the fact that these scandalous charges were made by Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, and it is my understanding that Mr. Lawson was the chief beneficiary of this falling market."

Representative Harrison, Democrat, called attention to the fact that Wood's first resolution was produced before Lawson had made any statement or before the letter from "A. Curtis," alleged New York broker, had been received.

"The question," Mr. Chiperfield insisted, "is whether there was a leak and whether government officials improperly profited by it."

"Do you think there was not a leak?" asked Representative Campbell of Mr. Harrison.

"Yes," Mr. Harrison replied, "but I think the leak came from the representatives of those two Wall street papers or else the leak came back from foreign centers."

Gardner Cites Ticker Tip.

Representative Gardner, who on the floor of the house on Jan. 3 said that he knew there was a leak and that the whole stock exchange transactions showed it, was then called to the witness stand.

Representative Gardner testified he was convinced there had been a "leak" because at 2:05 p. m. Dec. 20, ten hours before the peace note was released for publication and four hours before it had been placed in the hands of the news agencies, the following dispatch was sent out over the Dow, Jones & Co. ticker:

"The renewed selling of the market is due to reports received by brokers' private wires from Washington to the effect that the administration will in the near future address to the belligerents some suggestions or proposals in regard to peace. Nothing definite is obtainable in administration circles."

"There is your proof of a leak," Mr. Gardner said. "Miracles don't go on the stock exchange, and Dow, Jones & Co. don't deal in prophesies."

New York Paper Had "Dope."

Mr. Gardner also said that while the Wall Street Journal on Dec. 20 stated, "There will be no peace manifesto issued by President Wilson," the New York Evening Sun on that date reported rumors and hints of the sending of such a note in the following terms:

"The Washington advices were bearish, these saying that President Wilson may address foreign powers on the peace proposals."

"Where did the Sun get this advance information?" asked Mr. Gardner. "I think that I see indications of a leak. But the absolutely definite visible watermark of a leak is contained in the ticker record of Dow, Jones & Co.

Would Question President.

"If you find a prima facie case that there was a leak you cannot take the position that you will do nothing at all about it until some one informs you as to the names of those who profited by the leak or the names of those responsible for the leak.

"It seems to me that the right way to go about the matter is to find out from the president who he talked this peace note over with and then summon them and find out whether there was any way in which they might inadvertently have let the cat out of the bag. Next I should get a list of those employés of the White House and the state department and of our embassies abroad who handled this particular peace note. I think you will find that list quite formidable in length."

Representative Gardner said he absolved Secretary Lansing and Secretary Tumulty of all suspicion.

The committee then went into executive session.

To Subpœna Allen Curtis.

New York, Jan. 6.—Kenneth Romney assistant sergeant at arms of the house of representatives, left for Boston tonight to serve a subpœna on Allen Curtis of the stock exchange firm of Curtis & Sanger of New York and Boston, as a witness in the congressional inquiry into the "leak" of information concerning President Wilson's peace note.

Mr. Romney said he was informed the broker would accept service of the subpœna, although Mr. Curtis has denied he was the author of the letter to Representative Wood of Indiana, signed "A. Curtis," and giving information about the "leak."

O'Donnell Gives Bail as His Sister Dies

Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell appeared in the Criminal court building yesterday with his attorney, J. J. Healy, and gave $5,000 bail in the latest indictment against him. Max Weissbaum, brother of former Detective Michael Weisbaum, also gave bond.

Attorney O'Donnell told of the death of his sister, Anna O'Donnell, 58 years old, who died at 1102 Albion avenue, Rogers Park, about the time the indictment against him was returned.

Attorney O'Donnell said he will not be in court Monday when a hearing on his petition is to be had before Judge Walker. He will go to his farm at Woodville, Ind., to inter the body of his sister. He said he does not know if the state will grant a continuance or forfeit his bonds.

SOME DARING AND ALL GAY AT SOCIETY MASQUE

Butchers and Bakers' Ball Includes Turks, Greeks, and Dutchmen.

When the pie was opened the birds began to sing
Mercy! What a dish it was to set before the king!

And out they flew from behind closed doors when the message, with the swath of a mighty lariat, swung wide over the groups of revelers scattered through the city, proclaimed that the Twelfth Night masquerade festivities of the Butchers and Bakers and Candlestick Makers were about to begin and all must hurry to the scene. Not a soul but "Billy" Gamble, the master of the fun, had known that Germania hall was to be the spot until the word was received. And then the scramble was such, it was said, as almost to tip over some of the tables where dinners were being given to those who were to be guests of the ball.

He Came Bare Legged.

At 10 o'clock the masqueraders began to troop into the hall, which was decorated in every sort of fantastic balloon and festoon and trailer. There was James W. Morrisson, dressed as a bodyguard of the Greek king, with a short kilted skirt, and acting frightfully embarrassed about his exposed legs. There was the stately white nun who came with Little Boy Blue—who kept her disguise throughout the entire ball.

Mrs. Ralph Edmunds appeared as a billionaire Persian woman, with as many jewels hanging in ropes about her as are owned by the geekwar of Baroda; George A. Ranney flaunted himself as the "latest wuxtry" in a garment from which one actually might read the final news of the evening. Mrs. Ranney was a Turkish lady in green and orange satin bloomers, and one wondered where the two could have met.

Dutchman and Pierrette.

Leverett Thompson was, by his own word, the garden variety of Dutchman, in funny little breeches and wide white collar, with flaxen curls; and Mrs. Thompson was a black and white Pierrette. Mrs. Charles Garfield King was a Russian skater and Miss Lloyda Smith a real Russian peasant, in her imported frock. Queen Isabella was seen in the person of Miss Isabel Holt, and Miss Mildred McCormick was a little Dutch fishergirl.

Instead of a queen, there was a cakewalk—this was the explanation for the lack of a Twelfth Night cake, from which the bean might fall to the lot of the lucky queen of the evening. Only three debutantes were allowed to come, the ones who slipped in being Miss Helen Hoyne, Miss Elizabeth Adsit, and Miss Elizabeth Goodrich. Dancing stopped at midnight, when there was a buffet supper.

CAPTAIN SELOUS DIES IN ACTION IN EAST AFRICA

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Capt. Frederick Courteney Selous, author and hunter, who accompanied Theodore Roosevelt on his hunting expedition in 1909, has been killed in action in East Africa.

The news of the death of Capt. Selous was received in a telegram here today. Notwithstanding his age, he volunteered for service at the outbreak of the war and went to East Africa with the Legion of Frontiersmen, composed of men who knew the country in which the British are rounding up the remnants of the German force, and where there has been serious fighting in the last few days.

Capt. Selous was one of the best known of modern big game hunters and for many years devoted the greater part of his time to elephant and other hunting trips in South Central Africa, to exploration, and to collecting natural history specimens.

LIKELY TO LEAD TARIFF BOARD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Prof. Frank W. Taussig of Harvard today accepted a place on the tariff commission and probably will be made chairman. The other four members will be announced later.

Prof. Taussig is a teacher of political economy and has written extensively on the tariff.

It is understood the administration had difficulty in persuading him to accept. With Secretaries McAdoo and Houston, he conferred with President Wilson this afternoon and was told that the work to be done by the commission was considered of great importance because of tariff readjustments that may be necessary after the war.

Man Who Shot His Wife Sentenced to Prison

Jaskos Semkowicz, who was found guilty by a jury of shooting his 16 year old wife, was sentenced to the penitentiary for an indeterminate term of from one to fourteen years by Judge Fitch.

Miss Eleanor Hambleton Bride of F. S. Rickcords

There was a touch of spring in the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Eleanor Hambleton, daughter of Mrs. Earl L. Hambleton of 65 East Cedar street, to Francis Stanley Rickcords, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Rickcords of 1500 Dearborn parkway, which was celebrated in the chapel of St. James' Episcopal church at 4 o'clock before a group of friends and relatives. Smilax trailed over the window casements and the small stairway, and pink roses in tall vases decorated the altar.

Miss Gladys Hambleton, the bride's sister and only attendant, wore a quaint poke bonnet of rose satin, and her gown was of rose silk and velvet, with a wide girdle.

The gown of the bride was of white satin, made in long, simple lines, with an overskirt of cloth of silver. She wore a tiny lace cap caught with orange buds, and carried white lilies of the valley and roses. Her train was long, and over it fell a veil of white tulle.

The ushers were William D. Dean, James T. Fales, and G. H. Peake, and William Penn Nixon was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Rickords will be at home at 1315 Astor street.

Robey Street Extension Gets Advance Inaugural

The inaugural opening of the extension of the Robey street car line between Forty-seventh street and Sixty-third streets was held last night. Two cars crowded with members of the West Englewood Improvement club started from Forty-seventh street and proceeded to Fifty-fifth street, where a stop was made and addresses were given by aldermen and officials of the various south side improvement clubs. The extension will be opened officially this morning.

Seek Extension of Logan Square "L" to Edison Park

The Jefferson Improvement association has started a campaign to obtain the extension of the Logan Square elevated line to Edmunds street and Milwaukee avenue and thus on the surface to Norwood and Edison Parks, instead of stopping the extension at Irving Park boulevard, as recommended by the traction and subway commission. A mass-meeting has been held and petitions are being circulated.

Handsome Music Cabinet, Adjustable Bench and 24 Rolls of Music FREE

These Player-Pianos were made to sell for $650—were sold for $650—and worth every dollar of that price. They are full-scale 88-note Player-Pianos, converted by a simple movement of a lever into a regular piano for hand playing. These Claritone Player-Pianos have the latest improved expression devices—so simple and so perfect in construction that even a person who has no knowledge whatever of piano playing can reproduce the most difficult and the most beautiful compositions with the human touch of the skilled performer. You can emphasize a single note—or a phrase—or you can cut out the melody, at your pleasure, if you wish, and have only the accompaniment. The pneumatics do the mechanical part of the playing—the fingering—and you can put your own feeling into the music. The case is a beautiful plain semi-colonial type—and is of the finest figure mahogany—elegantly finished.

Finally—we give with every one of these instruments the regular Adam Schaaf guarantee. We say that these Player-Pianos are equal to $650 instruments—and we mean every word of it—and right now you can get one at this special price of $375.

BILLIK'S GUILT NEVER PROVED, DUNNE REPLIES

Governor Defends His Pardon Against Attacks of Judge and Prosecutor.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Gov. Dunne tonight replied to the criticism made by Judge Albert C. Barnes of Chicago upon the pardon granted this week to Herman Billik, who spent eight years in the state penitentiary for the murder of Martin Vrzal and his children.

Judge Barnes' criticism of the action of the pardon board was mainly a protest against the impression created that Billik was an innocent man. Judge Barnes was the trial judge. Neither he nor George M. Popham, assistant state's attorney, who tried the case, was called as a witness by the pardon board.

Dunne's Statement.

Gov. Dunne's statement follows:

"Last week I sat with two members of the board of pardons—McNaughton and Colvin (the other member being absent by reason of death in his family), at their request on learning of the application for pardon for Billik.

"We all believed from the evidence heard and still believe that Billik's conviction was obtained by subornation and perjury.

"Years ago with S. S. Gregory and tens of thousands of other citizens I protested to Gov. Deneen and the pardon board against his hanging, because I honestly doubted then that he was guilty. This I did without money and without price.

"The doubts I then had have been more than confirmed by the evidence we heard last week, the evidence of Jerry Vrzal, Mr. Edwardson, and Dr. C. P. Caldwell. If the theory of the prosecution and the police and the perjury of Jerry Vrzal were true Billik was a wholesale murderer of several persons by poison and should have been hanged under a governor not opposed to capital punishment.

"Gov. Deneen was not opposed to capital punishment, yet he commuted his sentence. The evidence before the board of pardons showed that when most of his alleged victims died in Chicago Billik was in another state. The retraction by Jerry Vrzal of his perjury was not considered by the Supreme court. The court overruled the motion for leave to file same, evidently being of the opinion that it was not in the record and could only be considered by the board of pardons and the governor.

"We did consider it and believed it to be true and that Billik was the victim of perjury.

Against Death Penalty.

This is another case in favor of the abolition of capital punishment. Billik, most probably an innocent man convicted by perjury, would have been hanged years ago upon the sentence of death imposed by Judge Barnes were it not that tens of thousands of citizens protested that it would be a miscarriage of justice.

"Billik was indicted for the murder of several persons in the same family by poison. The evidence in all cases would have been practically the same. After Jerry Vrzal had retracted his testimony Billik's friends sought to have Billik tried on the other cases, but the prosecution refused to do so and has never brought any of the other cases to trial, even after Billik had his sentence commuted by Gov. Deneen. The recommendation of the board of pardons was right and I promptly approved the same."

PROSECUTOR STATES CASE.

Mr. Popham, the assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Billik, did not see the governor's statement, but commented as follows on the pardon:

"The pardoning of Herman Billik was an outrage against justice. If he was pardoned on the assumption by Gov. Dunne that he was innocent, then it was doubly monstrous.

"If he was pardoned because Father O'Callaghan's eloquence persuaded Gov. Dunne he should exercise mercy, then it was not so terrible.

"It is to be hoped, lest the law be brought into disrepute, that Gov. Dunne still believed Billik the arch murderer that he was, but had good reasons for extending executive clemency. To even suggest that Billik was innocent is outrageous.

"Monstrous Murderer."

"Billik not only was a monstrous murderer himself but he made an adulteress and a murderess out of a wife and mother. He killed little children to get their life insurance.

"Gov. Dunne may have some facts that have not yet been disclosed to the public on which he bases his pardon of this man. If he has, he should make them public at once, in order that justice may not be made a mockery. Otherwise this case now will go down in the history of crime in Chicago as perhaps the most notable case of the miscarriage of justice."

"In all my association with the enforcement of the law against criminals, and particularly murderers," continued Mr. Popham, "Billik was the one person for whom I made up my mind never to ask clemency.

Public Doesn't Realize It.

"The general public, of course, does not understand this case. They have no way of knowing the full record of this man. It is one of the worst in our criminal history. Think of it! He killed children with poison to get their life insurance. And today he is walking the streets a free man. Why?

"When Billik's case first came up before the pardon board, during former Gov. Deneen's administration, Father O'Callahan was present, as were Judge Barnes, representatives of the state's attorney's office and attorneys for Billik.

Father O'Callahan's Idea.

"The whole case was gone over. At that time Father O'Callahan was asked why he thought Billik was innocent. He replied that at first he had considered him a bad man and wished to have nothing to do with him. Later, he told us, a woman who was interested in Billik's case, came to see him and begged him to go see Billik. He said he finally went, and after talking with Billik he was convinced of his innocence.

"Jerry Vrzal, the boy whose third 'confession' is now used to justify the pardon of the murderer, first claimed that he had been bulldozed by the police into making a confession which showed how Billik had poisoned the children. Later the boy repudiated this confession. But later still he admitted that his first confession had been written by him while he was alone in his room with no one about him.

He finally testified to that at the trial and declared under oath that he had told the whole truth without being intimidated or frightened in any way. He branded Billik the murderer that he is. Judge Barnes asked the boy repeatedly at the trial if his statement was true, and he replied it was.

"It should be clearly understood that Gov. Dunne undoubtedly believes in Billik's guilt, but has reasons for showing mercy. Any other justification for this pardon would mean a black mark against justice and law."

Indictments Pending.

It develops that four indictments still are hanging over Billik in connection with the murders with which he was charged, and that State's Attorney Hoyne can place him on trial if he so desires.

Mr. Hoyne still is confined to his home. One of his assistants expressed the opinion that no attempt would be made to try Billik again.

FORD CAN BUILD BLAST FURNACE

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 6.—Henry Ford may proceed with his plans for erection of a $12,000,000 blast furnace on River Rouge, despite the restraining order granted to Dodge Brothers in their suit to compel distribution among the stockholders of the Ford company's $60,000,000 surplus.

Reversing their decision of last December, Circuit Judges Weist, Hart, and Chester today ruled that work on the blast furnace may proceed with the filing of a $10,000,000 bond by Ford.

The bond will be drawn immediately, to indemnify the Dodges against possible loss.

Sir Frederick W. Borden Is Dead in Nova Scotia

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 6.—Sir Frederick William Borden, who was minister of militia and defense in the Laurier administration from its formation in 1898 until its defeat at the general election in 1911, is dead, according to a dispatch received here today from Canning, Nova Scotia.

Sir Frederick, a physician by profession, served as an army surgeon and was credited with efficient organization of the Canadian troops which fought in South Africa, where his son, Lieut. Harold L. Borden, was killed in action. Sir Frederick was born in Cornwallis, N. S., in 1847.

FEDERAL JUDGES DENY INJUNCTION ON 2 CENT RATE

Block Railroads' Short Cut to a 2.4 Cent Passenger Tariff.

Federal Judges Evans, Landis, and Carpenter, after a three day sitting en banc, yesterday unanimously denied, without prejudice, the application made by the twenty-eight Illinois railroads for a temporary injunction against the enforcement of the 2 cents a mile passenger rate.

The railroads attempted by this means to take a short cut to the 2.4 cents a mile rate which the interstate commerce commission already has held reasonable. As a result of the decision the railroads will start their presentation of the merits of their case before Judge Landis Tuesday morning. Unless a decision is handed down by Jan. 15 the three judges provided that the plaintiffs could return to the court of three in another application for a temporary injunction.

The outcome of the case is being watched closely, as it is likely that it will be a test procedure against about ten other western and middle western states which have 2 cent statutes they refuse to repeal.

Counsel for the various railroads regard the decision of the three judges a substantial victory, inasmuch as it will give them an opportunity to obtain a ruling on the conflict of power between the national and state authorities. The railroads complain that they have forty-nine masters to obey—each state and the interstate commerce commission.

"CUSTOM MAKES THE LAW"

A PRACTICAL MEANS TO THRIFT

Open to Millions of People

At a time, like the present, when those in high station, from the President of the United States down to state officials, publicists and civic officials, are seeking every available means to effect a reduction in the cost of living, it is pertinent to consider the advantages of DAILY THRIFT as practiced by millions of consumers. Those who follow the sage advice of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, "To pay as you go," get the most for their money. These thrifty men and women form a great body of purchasers that directly influence trade. Their millions of daily retail transactions build up an aggregate of more than TEN BILLION DOLLARS A YEAR. Upon this stupendous expenditure in the daily necessities the THRIFTY SAVE ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLAS in the form of TRADING STAMPS AND COUPONS which are given for cash trade and annually redeemed in cash and merchandise.

Domestic Economy Promoted by Profit-Sharing

It is well known that the giving of premiums for cash payment and for repeated purchases helps establish and build up trade for the retailer and manufacturer, while ASSURING the CUSTOMER AN IMMEDIATE PROFIT SHARING TOKEN. It is significant that during the present era of high prices the REDEMPTION of TRADING STAMPS and COUPONS has reached its highest record in the history of Profit Sharing. Manufacturers, eager to hold their trade, pack coupons in their goods. Retailers are alert to distribute TRADING STAMPS TO CASH CUSTOMERS. CONSUMERS appreciate the advantages received through the Profit Sharing plan that returns them so handsome a sum annually. For the same reason that they appreciate 3 per cent. interest on their savings in a bank, do they appreciate 3 per cent. discount on their purchases when they pay cash.

The "high cost of living" is doing more than anything else to convince people everywhere that profit sharing is a direct, generally applicable and sound method of promoting trade and cutting down the cost of merchandise to the consumer.

The Housewife Knows

The housewife who saves stamps and coupons and gets a ton of coal, a bag of flour, eggs, condensed milk or any one of thousands of articles, as a premium, KNOWS that through her thrift she is meeting the high cost of living and keeping down the family expenses.

A Year of Great Accomplishments

During the past twelve months, the S&H Green Trading Stamps, the Sperry Gold Stamps and the Hamilton Coupons have scored new records. They have attained a redemption basis which shows we have purchased and distributed more merchandise at higher prices than ever before. They have been adopted by thousands of new users and hold the favor of MILLIONS OF CONSUMERS.

The Sperry System Beneficial

We are more than ever convinced that the profit sharing advantages of The Sperry System are very beneficial to the small merchant as well as the large, and most of all to the consumer.

We are proud of the share we have had in helping solve the problem of living for the American home; that the saving habit, and the principle of Thrift, finds its greatest exponent in the ten million or more consumers who collect S&H Green and Sperry Gold Trading Stamps and Hamilton Coupons with their cash purchases; and that these millions of American housewives do not seek credit and are not guilty of extravagance or improvident buying.

CLEMENSON GETS FREEDOM IN 1923 BY DUNNE ACTION

Governor Commutes Sentence of Doctor Convicted of Wife Slaying to 25 Years.

The life sentence of Dr. Haldane Clemenson, Chicago physician, who was convicted on the charge of murdering his wife, yesterday was commuted to twenty-five years by Gov. Dunne. This will release the physician in February, 1923.

The trial of Dr. Clemenson in 1909, his appeals to the state Supreme court and to the state pardon board after his conviction and sentence to the penitentiary furnished some of the most sensational chapters in Chicago's crime history.

Mrs. Dora Jane Clemenson, wife of Dr. Clemenson, was found dead in her bedroom in the family home at 6832 Wayne avenue, Rogers Park, on the night of May 30, 1909.

Makes Report to Police.

The death was reported to the police by Dr. Clemenson himself, who said burglars had entered the house and administered chloroform to him and his wife, who had died. Mrs. Clemenson was about to become a mother.

Dr. Clemenson's statements, however, were found contradictory and he was arrested the next day on the charge of having killed his wife with chloroform. During his sensational trial Dr. Clemenson mentioned a "Miss Anna Schmidt" as being able to testify that he was not at home at the time the murder was supposed to have been committed. This woman did not appear at the first trial, at which the physician was convicted, but later came into the case by making a public statement that she was with Clemenson this night. She was Mrs. Anita Schmidt of 3721 North Broadway, St. Louis.

Ruled Out by High Court.

The state Supreme court, however, ruled by a vote of 4 to 3 that the testimony of Mrs. Schmidt was not admissible after the physician's conviction and sentence. Two attempts were made by Dr. Clemenson's attorneys to obtain a rehearing of the case in court, but both failed.

An attempt was then made to get the state pardon board to recommend executive clemency. This effort was indorsed by the relatives of the physician's dead wife in April 1916, who raised no objection to the man being released after fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Dr. Clemenson has two children in Chicago living with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Clemenson. Since his imprisonment at Joliet Dr. Clemenson has been acting as assistant to the prison physician and has appeared as an expert in three murder trials in Will county in behalf of the state.

Old Time Printers to Hold Annual Banquet

The Old Time Printers' association will hold its annual banquet and ball at the Hotel La Salle next Saturday. Among those expected to be present is Mrs. Emily Beaubien Le Beau, 82 years old, who attended the "running off" of the first newspaper printed in Chicago in 1833. Medill McCormick, congressman at large elect, will speak on "Contemporary Problems and the Problems of Benjamin Franklin and His Contemporaries."

Old Libertyville Church Is Destroyed by Fire

Years of planning and toil went up in smoke at Libertyville Friday night when the St. Lawrence Episcopal church and adjoining new parish house burned to the foundation stones. The fire started from a defective flue.

The structure was built in 1871 and was one of the landmarks of Lake county. The church was founded by the late Bishop Toll. Five years ago the Rev. Edward S. White, formerly of Ravenswood, took charge of the services. Late in October plans were drawn for a new parish hall to adjoin the church building. The structure received its finishing touches the day the flames attacked the church.

Beats Wife on "Golden Wedding" Anniversary

Francis Boyliss and his wife Mary have been married fifty years. They live at 2821 East Ninety-third street. He is 70 and she 72. This is Mrs. Boyliss' story of the "golden wedding" celebration, as told the desk sergeant at the South Chicago police station:

"We have been happily married for fifty years. Every anniversary we celebrated, happily and lovingly. Yesterday was our fiftieth anniversary. My husband came home:

"'Darlint,' he said, ''tis our golden weddin'. We must celebrate it.' I went towards him with a smile, and with that he lit in and gave me the best beating of my life."

BRINGS JOFFRE PORTRAIT FOR ALLIED BAZAAR

The frame is made of the silver buttons of fallen German officers. Around the inside, is a border of brass made from buttons of Gen. Gallieni, the "savior of Paris." There is a coat of arms made of glass 800 years old, taken from the Rheims cathedral after the bombardment of the Germans. The portrait is autographed by Gen. Joffre.

"I received an interview with Mme. Joffre with the help of the English ambassador in Paris," she said. "Mme. Joffre told me there was a strict military rule that no woman should go to the front. I worked under her direction with an excellent photograph. Then one day I was told that if I went to a certain place I could see Gen. Joffre.

"It was difficult to get a suitable frame, but I found a little shop, kept by two women, also daughters of officers. The inscription on the back does not state that the frame is from the silver of the buttons of German officers. The two ladies said if I should be caught by the Germans with such an inscription on the frame I should be shot."

SAY RATCLIFFE GIRL WAS KILLED BY AIR BUBBLES

Surgeons for State in Hinterliter Trial Describe Method of Infusion.

Olney, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Elizabeth Ratcliffe, for whose murder Roy Hinterliter is on trial here, died by the forcing of air into her circulation, according to two medical witnesses for the state today.

The introduction of this testimony, sworn to by Dr. Frank J. Weber, surgeon of the Olney sanitarium, where young Hinterliter took the girl the night she died, and by Dr. I. N. Martin, former coroner of Richland county, created a profound sensation during the afternoon, which had not worn off late tonight, when court adjourned until Monday.

Tells What Killed Girl.

When Dr. Weber took the stand he declared on questioning that "In my judgment Elizabeth Ratcliffe died by the forcing of air into her circulation."

When Hinterliter took the Ratcliffe girl to the Olney sanitarium, Dr. Weber declared that all of her organs were normal. The lungs, heart, and abdominal organs were examined for a cause of death.

"There was a large amount of air in the right chamber of the heart. In entering the skull the blood vessels of the brain were found to contain air.

"It is not a moot question in the medical fraternity that air in the circulation will produce death, but the amount of air it takes to cause death is in question," the witness said.

No Test for Gas.

Questioned as to whether he had made a test to determine whether the bubbles were air or gas Dr. Weber said he had not.

The plan of the defense to place the attempted operation on the girl was severely jolted by the declaration of Dr. Weber that the woman herself could not have inserted the instrument and forced sufficient air in veins to produce death.

Dr. Martin corroborated the testimony of Dr. Weber.

Announce the Progress to Date of Their

SPECIAL SALE OF 91 PAINTINGS

As Follows:

Hundreds of people have visited the galleries each day during the past week. Many of them have never been here before. The plan by which this sale is conducted is new to most of them. In many instances, ladies called and said they would have their husbands come to place bids on some of the fine works offered, or gentlemen called and said they would bring their wives back in order to help make selections. I have had hundreds of letters from people all over the central west who were interested in my last Sunday's Tribune ad. Some of them have sent me checks and money orders as a deposit upon their bids sent me. Others have written for catalogues. Many of these letters I have had not time to answer. I am using this space in today's Tribune to advise every one that is interested just what the bidding on each picture has been at the opening of business, Saturday morning, Jan. 6.

The Plan of This Sale, Briefly, Is as Follows:

The sale opened on Tuesday, January 2nd. Each picture had a fixed price printed in the catalog, and could be bought for no less than that price during last week. Beginning tomorrow morning, January 8th, there is a 5 per cent reduction from the catalog price on each picture. Tuesday, there will be a 10 per cent reduction; Wednesday, there will be a 15 per cent reduction, and so on, until every picture is sold.

Customers who attended my sale last week, left bids of 5 per cent, 10 per cent or 15 per cent, or some multiple of 5 per cent of the catalog price. These bids were recorded in the sales book open to all customers. If a customer bid 5 per cent on a picture, and another customer came who raised this bid to 10 per cent, this 10 per cent bid stood until another customer came who again raised the bid another 5 per cent or multiple of 5 per cent of the catalog price.

When a picture by the 5 per cent daily reduction plan has been reduced in price until the price equals the bid for that picture, it is sold to the bidder who has made the bid. Many who read this ad will make the mistake of thinking they can come in near the close of the sale and buy pictures at low bids. They will find that the low bids are covered long before they arrive. Your best chance to secure a picture from this sale at a low price is to come now and register your bid at once. It cannot be possible that a fine Blakelock like No. 4 will be sold for $60.00, or a Buehr like No. 10 for $50.00, or a Cameron for $60.00, or a fine work like "Chrysanthemums," by Carlsen, for $105.00. Here is a Bruce Crane with only $100.00 bid, and an Eaton of the finest quality at $240.00. The pictures by Bundy offered in this sale are as fine as he ever painted and should bring nearly the catalog price. One cannot imagine two fine works by Wilson Irvine selling at $60.00 and $75.00, nor one of Peyraud's best pictures for $60.00. Here is a George Inness, Jr., with but $40.00 bid on it. It seems ridiculous to think of a fine work by Frederick J. Waugh with only $12.50 bid on it, and a representative picture by William Wendt with $25.00 bid. Yet I have stated in the adjoining columns truly the amount that has been bid upon each picture, and for your convenience have shown you what the next higher bid must be. I believe that my gallery will be crowded on Monday morning, January 8th, by the picture-loving people of Chicago who are anxious to acquire fine works at the low prices at which these pictures promise to be sold from this sale.

The price on each picture was fixed at the amount that the artist would ask in his studio or that any reputable art dealer would ask for such a work. When you buy for less than this amount you have bought at a bargain. The one certain thing about this sale is, all works will be sold exactly as provided by the rules of the sale. If I do not receive another bid on any picture in this sale every picture will go to the present bidders, and pictures receiving no bids will be given away.

O'BRIEN SORRY HOYNE INDICTED CHIEF HEALEY

Captain Who Turned Over Records Grieved by Turn in the Case.

Capt. William P. O'Brien testified in an impassioned manner yesterday before the civil service commission of his sorrow for having testified against Chief of Police Healey before the grand jury, following which the chief was indicted.

He said if he had known the chief would be indicted by his testimony he would have preferred to have resigned from the police department.

Capt. O'Brien was testifying in his own defense on the charges of inefficiency and failure to suppress vice in the Cottage Grove avenue district by Chief Healey.

The Beaux Arts Club.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank Righeimer was conducting the cross-examination, when the subject arose about the Beaux Arts club, which place caused the break between the chief and Capt. O'Brien.

"Why didn't you close up the Beaux Arts club, captain, when you found that it was a disorderly place?" asked Attorney Righeimer.

"Well, to begin with, the chief called me to his office six weeks before the Beaux Arts club opened. Handing me a communication from the mayor, he said the Negro people who owned the Jackson club claimed they were being discriminated against. I told him the Jackson was not in my district. Now, the Jackson club was just like the Beaux Arts, and conditions were just the same.

"Seeing that the Jackson club was permitted to operate, I did not want to be hasty in taking action against the Beaux Arts, so I waited for his orders before going ahead."

The Visit to Hoyne.

"Did you turn over any files to the state's attorney?"

"That is a sore spot. I will explain that to you. I had a wife and five children going to school. My picture was in the newspapers and always up to that time I was lauded rather than condemned. The children had the newspapers and the picture and my wife was in tears when I reached home. It was more like a house in mourning.

"I had a number of friends and they came to me and wanted to know the facts. 'Go to the press,' 'Go here,' 'Go there,' 'Go see an attorney,' they said.

"I was advised by others to see the state's attorney, and at the spur of the moment I went to him. I never met him before I went to the detective bureau. I met him on two or three occasions there. I called him on the telephone at his home.

"He said he heard I was suspended. I said, 'Mr. Hoyne, I believe an injustice has been done to me, and I would like to talk to you in regard to the matter.' He told me to come to his home, and I did. I told him about the Beaux Arts club, and told him I had documentary evidence. I told him the circumstances of my suspension, and he said he thought 'it was an outrage—there was no question about it, it was an outrage.'"

"What was your idea in going to Hoyne? Was it to have the chief indicted?" asked Attorney Howard Sprogle, for the commission.

"No, sir."

Sorry Healey Was Indicted.

"Did you think the chief of police ought to be indicted on the evidence you had?"

"It was the furthest thought from my mind and is now. I wish he had never been indicted as far as I am concerned."

"You had no idea the chief was going to be indicted on what you said to the grand jury?"

"If I had known it I would not have gone."

"Was the transfer of Sergts. Winge and Melcher recommended by you because they had raided Sells & Stall's place?" asked Attorney Righeimer.

"Their raiding of the place had no bearing whatever on their transfer."

"Didn't you think you were setting a bad example to the men under you by eating and being served in Ben Collins' place?"

"No. It was not my belief that Ben Collins' place was not a respectable place. It is the one good restaurant in the district, and Ben Collins would not allow prostitutes in the rooms if he could help it."

Capt. Healy Transferred.

Chief of Police Healey yesterday made an unexpected transfer. He shifted Capt. Stephen K. Healy from the Stanton avenue district and replaced him with Capt. Wesley H. Westbrook. Capt. Healy takes Capt. Westbrook's post at Warren avenue.

After the order was out, the chief said: "Capt. Healy has repeatedly requested to be transferred to a station nearer his home. I am simply complying with his request."

In police circles, however, it was declared the chief has not been satisfied with conditions in the Stanton avenue district. Investigators have found many "black and tan" gambling resorts and the chief is said to be desirous of cleaning them out.

The chief also transferred the following lieutenants:

William L. Malone from Chicago avenue to central.

Michael Lee from Stanton avenue to Maxwell.

In addition, seven detective sergeants, fifteen patrolmen, and two policewomen were shifted.

High School Football Star and Girl Wed and "Elope"

Richard Erlitz, 20 years old, of Menominee, Mich., a high school football star, and Margaret Blon, 18 years old, were married secretly at Menominee because the parents of both objected. After the ceremony they came to Chicago and are the guests of the bridegroom's sisters, the Misses Erlitz of 968 Roscoe street. The couple were remarried yesterday at the Cathedral of the Roman Catholic church.

COLLEGE WEEK

Educational Gathering to Launch Million Dollar Campaign.

THIS is to be college week in Chicago. The college presidents of about 200 colleges will meet in the third annual session of the Association of American Colleges at the La Salle hotel, beginning Thursday evening and continuing through Saturday.

On Wednesday evening and Thursday morning the Council of Church Boards of Education, representing eighteen of the denominations, will be in council at the La Salle hotel and will adjourn to attend the college association. Several of these boards will hold a short denominational conference prior to the council meeting. At the Congress hotel the Conference of Church Workers in State Universities will be in session Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

"The focal point of all these meetings," said R. Watson Cooper, secretary of the association, "is an organized attemptd, crystallized in the Council of Church Boards of Education, to launch a nation-wide campaign in the interest of Christian education and the American college. The plan is to raise $100,000 to be used in a campaign covering the next two years and resulting in the realization of $1,000,000 for the advancement of the endowed college."

Boys on Bicycles Bitten by Dog Supposedly Mad

Albert Calidela, 12 years old, of 517 North Dearborn street, and James Nickelson, aged 10, of 615 North Dearborn street, were bitten yesterday by a dog, presumably mad. The boys were riding their bicycles when a large bull dog, owned by Joseph Reinboldt, a saloonkeeper at 35 West Illinois street, pulled the Calidela boy off of his machine and bit his arms and legs. His companion tried to pull the dog off, and it turned on him. Several men in the Ohio poolroom heard the boys' screams and knocked the dog senseless with their cues. A policeman later shot it.

RAILWAY STRIKE LOOMS UP; TEST LAW THIS WEEK

Union Heads Will Discuss Action on Thursday—Adamson Offers a New Measure.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Paralysis of the nation's railroads through a strike may be near.

"It is more than a possibility," according to official word here tonight, following a conference between Warren S. Stone, head of the engine men, and Attorney Wills, counsel and legislative agent of the Big Four brotherhoods.

Next Thursday the chiefs will meet to consider the situation growing out of the fact that the Adamson eight hour law is not operating and that its constitutionality has not yet been decided. Afterward, the leaders may call a strike, it was stated.

Adamson Proposes 8 Hour Day.

While this portentous news was being announced Repesentative Adamson introduced a resolution in the house covering President Wilson's program of railroad legislation. His resolution called for an out and out eight hour day as an amendment to the railroad safety act.

As a "safety" measure, guarding against long hours, Adamson feels it could not be attacked. The interstate commerce commission would be the judge on the matter of exceptions requiring overtime, and any overtime would be on a pro rata basis. The present Adamson law, however, pro rates overtime, and does not prevent a railroad employé from running up a sizable amount of overtime pay; hence its opponents have charged that it is a wage rather than a time law.

Proposes Inquiry Before Strikes.

Other provisions of Adamson's program are for investigation of threatened strikes, during which investigation employés will be prevented from striking, and authorization to the president to operate railroads and other public utilities in time of national emergency.

Adamson stole a march on the Newlands senate committee, taking many of its plans, after having charged that body with tarrying too long at its task.

The strike threat talk, however, overshadowed even the Adamson action. Whether the brotherhood locals have taken new action permitting the leaders to act as they see fit, even to declaring a strike, could not be ascertained. It was said, however, that the leaders still have the broadest powers under the vote from all the locals last summer.

Arguments on the Adamson law test case will be heard Monday afternoon in the Supreme court. Brotherhood chiefs, it was stated, will take no action before Thursday in any event.

TENOR SAYS WAR RUINED HIS HOME

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Bitter feeling brought about by the European war separated Ferrari Fontana, the Italian tenor, and his wife, Mme. Matzenauer, the German soprano, is the allegation of Fontana today answering his wife's suit for absolute divorce. Two prominent women of Rome and several others in this country are named by Mme. Matzenauer as co-respondents.

In her charges Mme. Matzenauer alleges that on several occasion she met three of the women named. Other charges are the result of a visit of Ferrari Fontana to Cesenatico, Italy, in the summer of 1916.

"The war in Europe caused her continually to accuse me of being responsible for the death of her people," the tenor states in his answer. "She was always quarreling with me regarding the war and accusing me."

Hurt by Fall from Train.

Michael Gabriels fell off a moving train and struck on his head yesterday. He escaped with a scalp wound. He is 37 years old and lives at 479 State street, Blue Island.

Old Man, Once Policeman, Injured by Street Car

Michael Moran, 77 years old of 6907 Yale avenue, a policeman in the old town of Hyde Park, was severely injured last night by a street car at West Sixty-ninth street and Yale avenue. Fred Moran, 35 years old, his son, is a clerk at the Englewood court.

Worn Purse Awaits Owner at "Tribune"

J. L. Keith, a resident of Kenilworth, found a purse while walking in the loop a few nights ago. He took it to THE TRIBUNE office, where it awaits the owner. The purse contains a number of bills and is badly worn.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT
PENETRATES WITHOUT RUBBING

THIRTY-FIVE years have slipped down the misty corridor of time since Sloan's Liniment was introduced. As each year went out it found this family medicine in an increasing number of homes until to-day Sloan's Liniment is the most widely sold and most popular liniment on the globe.

There is not a civilized land where it is not known, hardly a race that has not felt the magic of its touch. It is the World's Liniment.

Many Presidents have been chosen since its introduction to humanity.

The greatest industrial development took place during this period, the most wonderful inventions conceived by man were brought out or put into general use.

In the age of Sloan's Liniment these events have become history:

The Washington Monument dedicated.
The Brooklyn Bridge opened to traffic.
Statue of Liberty erected.
The North and South Poles discovered.
The first international yacht race was held.

Maud S. made her record of 2.08¾.

Queen Victoria, General Grant, Emperors Frederick, William, Popes Leo and Pius, and a long list of world figures died.

The telephone became part of the daily life. Linotype operated the modern newspaper. The electric light illuminated our cities. The Panama Canal was dug. The motion picture arrived.

Drivers of horse cars who used Sloan's Liniment for aching muscles and stiffened joints, then became motormen on the pioneer trolley cars.

In the span of years covered by this remedy the automobile has taken the place of the horse; the flying machine has carried the battles of men into the skies; wireless telegraphy has made captive the ether waves of space; the phonograph was born.

The age of concrete and steel came and skyscrapers filled the land.

Sloan's Liniment went through the Cuban war, Spanish war, the struggle between China and Japan, the Russo-Japanese war, the Boer war, the Balkan wars, rebellions in Mexico and South America and finally the most stupendous struggle ever waged between men—this World war.

It brought relief to the victims of the Charleston earthquake and San Francisco fire and the survivors of the Johnstown flood. The terrible blizzard of '88. It was popular when Oklahoma was opened to settlers and it was in nine Territories when they were admitted as States.

Baseball players were using it when Billy Sunday quit the diamond in 1889 and started upon a career as the greatest evangelist of modern times.

When Nellie Bly made her trip around the world in seventy-two days Sloan's Liniment might have been purchased in nearly every large city she touched. As the nation grew so it grew.

It saw a nation increase from 55,000,000 population to 100,000,000; wealth increase from fifty billions of dollars to nearly two hundred billions; 100,000 miles of railway lengthened to 250,000 miles; scientific farming produce billion dollar crops; modern trusts multiply millionaires; tremenduous strides in medicine; a transformation in social conditions.

It was in this epoch that Sloan's Liniment was introduced. It has proved its worth.

And time has brought its reward.

Sloan's Liniment for pains and aches of rheumatism, gout, lumbago, neuralgia, stiff neck, lame back, sprains, strains and bruises. It penetrates quickly without rubbing and gives prompt relief to sore muscles and stiff joints following exposure or over-exertion.

All druggists, 25c. 50c. and $1.00.

THE CHICAGO IDEA

Some of the Day's Divorce Court Action.

MRS. DOROTHY TAYLOR RAY didn't want to come to Chicago. Two years ago her husband was sent by his employer from their home in Orange, N. J., to Chicago, where he was to locate permanently. On Dec. 8, 1914, according to a bill for divorce filed yesterday, Ray sent her a check for $50 for traveling expenses. She cashed the check, he says, but didn't come.

DANIEL FARRELL of 6234 South Paulina street followed up his suit for $20,000 for alleged alienation of affections against Clark Hallam by a suit for divorce. He names Hallam, who is the son of Joseph W. Hallam, a lawyer. Young Hallam formerly was a student at the University of Chicago, and went to the border with the First Illinois cavalry. Mrs. Farell has filed suit for separate maintenance.

MRS. MARGARET FRANCES MEYER, who lives at the Bradley hotel when not traveling with "The Society Circus," was granted a divorce by Judge Sullivan. Mrs. Meyer will resume her maiden name, Cox.

GEORGE A. KLANER, north side undertaker, testified before Judge Thomson that Genevieve threw a water pitcher and a telephone at him. Judge Thomson indicated he would grant a divorce. Mrs. Klaner has pending a suit for separate maintenance, charging her husband with being unduly intimate with her sister, Gertrude Mason. She says he would spend his nights "joy riding."

WRONGED WIFE BELIEVES GODS FIXED HER LOT

She Ignores 24 Hour Courtship in Telling Trials with Her Erring Husband.

BY AUDRIE ALSPAUGH CHASE.

"I don't want to get divorced with my husband. I love him too much." Mrs. Sparlin was the speaker, a slender woman with birdlike brown eyes set in a fine featured face, dressed in black from head to foot.

"I love him so much," she repeated, "but what he does is go around with odder womans, and that I like not at all. He don't tell me true what he gets each week, either. He says $18 when he gets $25, and he spends what he saves out on the odder woman. I says to him, 'Now, John, it would be so much better if you would save that extra money and get you a good suit, not a second hand, and a good overcoat, not a second hand; but he don't. No, he don't drink. He just has this one bad habit."

Married Eight Years.

She twisted her black gloved fingers together.

"We've been married eight years, and have four children. I just lost one little girl before Christmas. He is 40 and I am 25."

She gave startling reply to the question as to how long they had been acquainted. "Twenty-four hours," said she.

"That's not very long to know any one, is it? Don't you think you would have been happier if you had known each other better?"

"No, no," she declared, satisfiedly. "It comes from the gods, I believe. Back in Ohio I had a good chance that I didn't take. Then I take this. It is all from the gods. And I love him very much. He's fine looking. You'd like him yourself if you'd see him now. He never worries. He leaves the worrying to me."

Crash Before Christmas.

The real family crash came shortly before Christmas.

"He said to me, 'I wish you'd crochet some lace and make three pairs of pillow cases and sheets for Mrs. Korvinsky for a Christmas gift,' and I said I don't know Mrs. Korvinsky and I don't wish to make her a Christmas gift. 'But I do,' he says."

Apparently that was an occasion where Mrs. Sparlin did not put so much trust in what the gods send, for she didn't make herself a gift giving medium. And the husband left the family without food and money for some several days.

"No, I don't want a divorce with him, I love him too much," she explained, "but I want to get the children put in a home, so I can get a job and work. Everybody has to have some trouble, you know, and this is mine."

She sat waiting patiently, a forlorn little figure in her skimpy black, waiting for what the gods would send next.

Carl Laemmle Denies He's to Sell Film Stock.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing company, yesterday denied he has any intention of selling his controlling interest in the company.

"The chief reason being that I have not heard of anybody willing to offer me enough money for my holdings," said Mr. Laemmle, who is said to control 52 per cent of the stock.

Despite the denial, it is said a Chicago banking house has a $2,000,000 option on Mr. Laemmle's holdings.

Farewell Dinner to Kingsley.

Judge Merritt W. Pinckney will preside at a testimonial farewell dinner to Sherman C. Kingsley in the red room of the Hotel La Salle tomorrow evening. The dinner is given by more than three hundred members of civic, charitable, social, and professional organizations of Chicago. Mr. Kingsley will shortly leave for Cleveland, O., where he will become executive officer of the Welfare federation of that city.

ALDERMEN PUT BACK $36,000 IN MORALS BUREAU

Finance Committee Restores to Funkhouser Selection of Investigators.

The appropriation for morals inspectors, which had been cut out of the budget by Chief of Police Healey, yesterday was restored by the council finance committee.

A total of $36,000, which will provide for fifteen or more investigators in Second Deputy Funkhouser's bureau, was appropriated.

Give Funkhouser Rule.

From Maj. Funkhouser the committee learned that Chief Healey personally has chosen the investigators since last June, and some of the aldermen said they had reason to believe these men have not been as efficient as the investigators picked by Maj. Funkhouser himself.

Accordingly, the committee again incorporated the provision that their selection should be left to the second deputy, though it was conceded the committee has no power to make the chief comply.

Clerks and Bailiffs to Go.

The Municipal court began a retrenchment program involving the discharge of ten or twelve clerks and deputy bailiffs. Six clerks were laid off by Chief Clerk Derpa and Bailiff Cermak expects to be compelled to wield the ax on an equal number of deputy bailiffs tomorrow.

The judges of the court at noon voted to reduce the budget for the year by $50,000. The council finance committee had ordered a reduction of $110,000, but the judges refused to make so large a reduction. The appropriation for the court for 1916 was $854,000.

100 Street Foremen Laid Off.

Acting Supt. of Streets Mitchell announced he has laid off 100 street foremen.

"Only the river wards, the First, Eighteenth, and Twenty-first, are being cleaned by the city at the present time," Mr. Mitchell said. "We have no men at work in other sections of the city."

Inspector Causes Arrest.

What is believed to have been a plot to "get" one of Second Deputy Funkhouser's investigators resulted yesterday in the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of Robert Mooney, a bartender in the Olympic buffet at 1260 West Madison street, of which William Dolatkoski is the licensee.

Chief Healey's investigation may have for its sequel the filing of charges against certain police officers of the West Lake street station and the revocation of Dolatkoski's license.

Tells of Gun Threat.

According to Charles Christy, the investigator, who is a Greek, he was driven out of the Olympic buffet at the point of a gun by the bartender, Mooney, after Mooney had beaten up another Greek, Joseph Apostolos, under the impression that the latter was Christy.

Christy told the police he saw Apostolos and a woman coming out of the Olympic buffet, both bleeding about the head. At Apostolos' request, Christy went back in with him, but Mooney seized a revolver, placed it at Christy's breast, and ordered them both out of the saloon.

He Wasn't Booked.

Christy and the other Greek complained to the Lake street station. Patrolman Landy then arrested Mooney and he was taken to the station, but the acting desk sergeant, Joseph H. Lynch, did not book him and he was allowed to go free. According to Christy, the police said he and Apostolos would have to go to the Desplaines street court and get a warrant. Yesterday they got the warrant, but Chief Healey wants to know why Mooney wasn't held when he was first arrested.

The license of the Olympic buffet was revoked some time ago because of immoral conditions.

COLOR SCHEMES ARE FEATURE OF HUGE AUTO SHOW

BY SHEPPARD BUTLER.

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—In a hectic blaze of color, representing every hue in the rainbow and some that nature never dreamed of, New York's seventeenth annual automobile show opened at the Grand Central palace this afternoon. Four hundred cars are distributed over four floors of the building, representing their builders' supreme efforts in motor construction, body design, and "fixin's."

The year having seen few radical innovations in the motor world, the exhibitors appear to have vied with each other in attracting attention through the bizarre tints in which their models appear. One shows a dazzling white car trimmed in pure gold. Several have burnished metal bodies that shine like so many wash boilers, scrubbed within an inch of their lives.

Blinding yellow, screaming pink, green, burnt orange, and pale blue are everywhere. Even the cushions and upholstery have caught the infection and show the weirdest imaginable colors.

Total of Exhibits 332.

Altogether there are 332 exhibits. Ninety-one makes of gasoline cars are shown, five electrics, and one steam car. The remaining 235 exhibits are devoted to accessories—everything conceivable, from closed car bodies to new fangled cotter pins. Only gasoline is omitted, and the fire department barred that.

Among the connoisseurs who know what to look for, interest centers largely on the single steam car exhibit, tucked away on the top floor. This make, new and little heralded, represents a return to a type of engine which every one thought had lost its popularity several years ago. It uses only kerosene as fuel and includes improvements which, its maker says, have eliminated all the drawbacks of the old steam cars.

Installation of a magnetic gear-shift as stock equipment on one of the long established makes has made this, too, an object of curious attention. There is no gear shift lever—only a hole where one may be fitted in an emergency, like the seldom used starting crank.

Great Range in Prices.

In price, the cars shown range from $395 to $6,000, the meekest roadster rubbing elbows in complete democracy with the most sumptuous limousine. Development of the clover leaf seating arrangement and elaboration of the convertible body type are the notable features of that part of the car back of the engine. One maker shows a single body that can be altered so as to form no less than five different types—sedan, limousine, touring car, etc.

Within five minutes after the opening hour the exhibition building was thronged from top to bottom, men, women, and children peering about eagerly for the booths of their favorites. Last year 340,000 persons attended the show and its sponsors this year expect at least 400,000 during the week.

As a starter in the matter of producing a crowd, something like 4,000 dealers and factory representatives have invaded the town from various parts of the country to throng the hotel lobbies and make things look like convention week. To keep things moving, the show managers have designated Monday as Military day, Tuesday as Pioneers' day, Wednesday as Society day, and Friday as club day. Thursday will be given over to the Society of Automobile Engineers.

Hunt Missing Persons.

Capt. Charles L. Larkin received two letters from persons in different cities asking him to find relatives. One letter was from Brooklyn, N. Y., asking him to search for the father of Walter Caroll, 30 years old, who is a druggist in Chicago. The other letter was from Mrs. M. L. Shockley, Des Moines, Ia., requesting the captain to search for her son, Jasper Shockley.

JUDGE HOLDS 4 AS PERJURERS

Judge Barrett ordered four alleged robbers held to the grand jury on charges of perjury yesterday after he had questioned each of them separately and learned that they had perjured themselves in order to save a companion. Frank Kruszynski was acquitted on a charge of robbery on the northwest side by a jury. Andrew Zurac, Leo Lackowski, and Frank Mutulski entered pleas of guilty when their cases were called several days ago. At that time Kruczynski refused to enter a plea, saying that he was innocent. He was later given a jury trial and was acquitted on the testimony of the other three, who said that he was not with them. Judge Barrett, not satisfied with the verdict, questioned each one separately and learned perjury had been committed.

G M C Trucks Win Highest Rating in City of Chicago Competitive Test for Trucks

When the City of Chicago buys Motor Trucks the Commissioner of Public Works is instructed to ask for bids and to award contracts to the manufacturer showing the highest rating based on the following points:

1—Price.
2—Service Facilities.
3—Inspection and Testing of Parts and Material.
4—Practical Experience with Truck by Others.
5—Responsibility of Manufacturer.
6—Comparative Cost of Repair Parts.
7—Motor.
8—Clutch.
9—Transmission Gear Set.
10—Final Drive.
11—Axles.
12—Frame.
13—Springs.
14—Wheels and Size of Tires.
15—Brakes.
16—Steering Gear and Arrangements.

The trucks are given a comparative marking on the basis of 100 points made up from the above sixteen important features.

The last three purchases of motor trucks by the City of Chicago were awarded to the General Motors Truck Company over all competitors because G M C Trucks showed the highest number of points on this basis of rating.

Highest Grade—Reasonable Price

Business men who look into the real merits of motor trucks make the same decision. They find G M C Trucks superior in quality to lower price trucks, and lower in price than other high grade trucks.

As a business man you want trucks that are not only right in price, but trucks that will do your hauling at the lowest cost per ton mile over a period of years. That means trucks that are easy to care for and operate, trucks that are dependable under all load and road conditions, trucks with greatest pulling power, trucks that can be easily and quickly adjusted or repaired when necessary—G M C Trucks.

Read again the features in which G M C Trucks receive the highest rating by the City of Chicago—then investigate G M C Trucks for yourself.

G M C Trucks are made by the oldest and strongest exclusive motor truck company. We build nothing but motor trucks—and we know how to build good trucks.

A series of advertisements will follow in this paper, one each Sunday, which will go into details of G M C construction. Watch for them or ask us to mail you proofs of the series. You Always Travel First Class in a HUDSON Super-Six Touring Sedan

In fair weather or foul, it is a comfort car. With windows and ventilators open, it is the coolest, airiest car imaginable. By closing the windows—as easily done as you close the windows of your home—you are protected from the heaviest rains or coldest temperature. It is the ideal car for all uses and for all seasons.

No road is too rough, no hill too steep, no journey too long, no requirements too particular for it. When a fine closed car is required for the theatre or shopping, it meets every demand of comfort and attractiveness.

No car will give you greater satisfaction in touring. It is just the car to take to the mountains, sea shore, or on a transcontinental tour.

Then when winter comes, it will meet every requirement as a luxurious, beautiful, family town or country car. It seats seven, with two comfortable seats which fold out of the way when not required.

The Hudson Super-Six Touring Sedan fills a wider range of uses than do any of the eight different types we build. It is the type most of the men who build the Hudson Super-Six use as their personal cars.

Equipped with the Super-Six Motor

The chassis is the standard Hudson Super-Six construction with the patented Super-Six motor.

New records for endurance have been made by the Super-Six. It has proved longer wearing and greater safety qualities than were ever demonstrated by any other car.

Official records have been made for the greatest distance in 24 hours, the fastest speed, the quickest acceleration that have ever been shown by stock cars.

These tests prove endurance, and insure the life of the car. And no other car has the qualities which make these things possible, for the Super-Six motor is a Hudson creation, patented by Hudson.

Ever had a "hunch" that you'd like to become an ADVERTISING MANAGER?

Ever turn through the pages of The Chicago Tribune or the Saturday Evening Post and think how much the writer of good advertisements got and wish you could break into the advertising game?

If you have, come and talk with our Vocational Director. He is an experienced personal analyst and will tell you if you really are qualified to succeed as an Advertising Manager.

Be an Advertising Manager

If you are eligible for admission we will register you for our Extension Course in Advertising right now. We have no vacancies in our resident class and will have none until the next term begins, next October. We now have a big waiting list for next year—nearly enough to fill our resident classrooms.

The Extension Course covers exactly the same work as our resident course. If you live in Chicago you may attend the resident class lectures without additional cost.

Our course is under the personal direction of some of the best known advertising men in Chicago. Not "professional" teachers, but men who are engaged daily in managing sales and advertising campaigns involving the expenditure of millions of dollars. You may clip off at least ten years of hard work by profiting by their experience.

Come and meet our instructors and talk to our students. See for yourself what remarkable results we are accomplishing.

POLICE REGARD MODEL MURDER AS CLOSED CASE

But Philadelphia Wonders at Lack of Evidence Against Bernard Lewis.

BY MARK WATSON.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The Philadelphia police have practically abandoned all effort to find evidence implicating others in the murder of Maizie Colbert. They are contented to stand on the present record and to point to the suicide of Bernard W. Lewis, "the man in the taxi," as evidence that the mystery is solved.

In this view District Attorney Rotan agrees, holding that there are "only a few more points to clear up."

There is still something of an effort to prove that Lewis had known Maizie Colbert for some time. This effort is stimulated by the criticism against the department for its habitual willingness to get rid of mysteries by the easiest way.

Motive Not Yet Proved.

Up to date the police have failed to substantiate the motive they have assigned for the murder of the artist's model at the hands of Lewis.

It has not been proved that they knew each other except by a couple of Maizie's acquaintances, whom the police produced triumphantly this afternoon. It has not been proved that Lewis entered the model's apartment or even that he entered the building in which her apartment is situated. The scratches on his hand, the blood stains, show that he had been in some sort of a fight in the last week or ten days, but nothing more. The suicide of a panic stricken man, aware that his arrest on another charge was at hand, and that disgrace was ahead of all his connections, is the strongest piece of circumstantial evidence the police have.

Evidence Breaks Down.

More of the corroborative evidence assembled by the police to pin the crime on the dead man was found today to be far from the fact. The telephone number penciled on a memorandum in the dead man's effects proved to be not that of Maizie Colbert's apartment. The window cord found in his pocket and at first asserted to have been ripped from the curtain of the model's apartment proved to be nothing of the sort. The "woman's undershirt" similar to Maizie Colbert's which Lewis wore proved on examination by some one other than the Philadelphia sleuths to be an ordinary athletic shirt such as is worn by any number of athletes. The perfume similar to the kind the suspect used found on the famous shirt seized in the apartment proved to be the odor acquired by that shirt by its contact in a suit case with the dead girl's wearing apparel.

But They Nailed Him.

The one outstanding and unchanging feature of the still mysterious circumstance is the frantic eagerness with which the police seized on Lewis' suicide as proof of his guilt. The circumstantial evidence against the dead man is strong, but it is only circumstantial.

It is not the first time the police have been charged with a desire to get rid of an embarrassing mystery rather than solve it. Only a few months ago a body was found in one of the parks, a bullet wound obviously the cause of death. The police solemnly asserted it was a suicide and began arraying circumstance after circumstance to show that the victim had reasons for ending his life. Investigators outside the department called attention to the fact that no weapon was found near the body and inquired how the suicide had disposed of the gun after killing himself.

"Somebody Got the Gun."

This somewhat strange feature the resourceful sleuths disposed of by averring that some one must have passed there before the police arrived and removed the weapon without notifying any one of the fact that a body was there.

The suicide of Lewis has relieved not only the police but the numerous Philadelphia males who had been intimates of the famous beatuy. They had been subjected to examination by the police and one by one their names were being made public.

Belated Portable Church Seems Lost in Transit

Churches have been burned, blown down by cyclones, or otherwise wrecked, but it remains for the Windsor Park Congregational church, Yates avenue and Seventy-fourth street, to meet the fate of being strayed or stolen.

Last October circulars announced the dedication of the new church, which was to have been shipped from an eastern factory as a portable church building. The building did not arrive, and the dedication was postponed. Favorable word was received later, and the dedication was to have been on Thanksgiving, but had to be again postponed. Eight successive telegrams have been received by the Rev. H. I. Parrott, pastor, announcing either the church was being loaded on the cars, or had been shipped, or would arrive at a certain time.

Restaurant Man Defends Immaturity of His Eggs

David Pedden sniffed one of the soft boiled eggs served him in a restaurant at 616 West Madison street and remarked succinctly, "twelve years old," a phrase not unknown in those regions but seldom applied to eggs. George Corey, owner of the restaurant, defended the youth of the egg with a billiard cue. Both men were arrested.

Woman Falls or Leaps to Death Out Window

Mrs. William Campbell, 38 years old, wife of a railway clerk, died in the Garfield Park hospital of a fracture of the skull incurred yesterday when she either fell or jumped from a rear window of her home on the third floor at 24 South St. Louis avenue. She was found unconscious on a walk in the rear yard. The Fillmore street police said she may have jumped while despondent over ill health.

WOMAN CHARGES "SPIRIT" FRAUD; ARREST SEERESS

Supposed Victim Says Medium Got Her Property at Order of Dead Husband.

Necromancy is a business of quivers and shakes, incense and whispers, and a few thin, lean whispers from the spirit land. But it's costly, says Mrs. Sophia Beckman, aged, 38, of 4336 Park avenue.

Mrs. Beckman yesterday caused the arrest of Mrs. Mona Allen, a seeress, and her husband, Robert Allen, who live at 2755 West Jackson boulevard. She told the police that Mrs. Allen, interpreting directions from Mrs. Beckman's dead husband regarding the disposition of her money, secured $400 at one time, a tract of land at another, and various sums ranging up to $20 at still others.

His Spirit Talking.

"The spirit of your dead husband is talking to you" is the message that would precede these directions, according to Mrs. Beckman.

A room burdened with incense, oppressive and mystical with luxurious trappings, laid the rigor of hypnotism on Mrs. Beckman, she says. Then Mrs. Allen would flip over, roll her eyes, quiver and shiver, and quake and shake.

Then from a tin funnel in some heavy tapestries the thin spiritual voice would come. Nearly always it ordered Mrs. Beckman to turn over to Mrs. Allen certain sums of money for investment.

Ready to Leave City.

Mrs. Beckman says that Mrs. Allen was preparing to take her to California, there to teach her necromancy so that she could talk ad lib and infinitum to her dead husband.

The executor of the Beckman estate, which was worth about $20,000, suspected something, and had Mrs. Beckman followed. They were found by detectives yesterday in the center of the oriental room. Mrs. Allen was just about to go into a "study" when arrested.

Confidence game was charged against her and her husband. Mrs. Allen denies that she obtained money wrongfully. She says she borrowed it and intends to return it.

A book, it is said, containing more than 100 names of "clients" was discovered and will be used at the trial.

Among the "fees" charged by Mr. Allen were a Christmas and a New Year's turkey. Seeing is—well, it's a living anyway.

Socialists' Factions Fail to Effect Amalgamation

New York, Jan. 6.—After an all day conference between committees representing the Socialist party and the Socialist Labor party, it was said tonight that the proposed amalgamation of the two wings of the Socialists, for which the conference was called, was no nearer than when the committees met. The discussion will be continued tomorrow, however.

Dr. Robertson to Take Vacation Without Pay

Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson today will begin a four days' vacation without pay as part of a plan to reduce the expenses of the department 25 per cent, in accordance with the edict of the finance committee. In turn all the employes of the department will do likewise, the "vacations" being for three or four days.

ELEANOR IS 15 AND A BURGLAR, POLICE ASSERT

She Was Caught Packing Valuables Into a Bag, Her Captor Says.

Eleanor Rogala, 15 years old, 2645 Hillock avenue, was locked up at the stockyards police station yesterday as a burglar. The police say she entered at least two south side homes, but she didn't get much, they assert.

"I got trouble enough—let me alone," she said when an effort was made to have her tell her story.

Caught in His Flat.

She was captured in the home of Peter Machucewski, 4715 South Wood street, Friday afternoon. He returned home unexpectedly, he said, and found her going from one room to another, stuffing what she could lay her hands on into a large handbag. She had collected $150 worth of clothing and inexpensive jewelry, he alleges.

Machucewski seized the girl and took her to the New City police station. He threw the handbag of loot on the sergeant's desk as evidence.

Admits Other Theft?

Juvenile Officer Robert Magner of the New City station said the girl admitted to him that she also entered a flat at 4757 South Lincoln street.

"I wasn't stealing," the girl said, when questioned later in the day. "I have been told not to talk. I'll tell everything to the judge."

Reo

Reo Bearings Are "50% Oversize"

HEREWITH WE SHOW THE BEARINGS—Timken and Hyatt "Quiet" types—that go into Reo the Fifth.

NOT FULL SIZE HOWEVER—space doesn't permit. Cuts show them less than ⅝ actual size.

YOU KNOW WE SAY we put "50 per cent oversize" in all vital parts of Reos—such as engine, crank shafts, cam shafts, axles, driving shafts, gears, bearings—yes, even the spokes in the wheels.

WELL, HERE'S SOMETHING interesting in that connection.

RECENTLY WE MADE a little investigation—comparisons between the bearings we use in Reo the Fifth and bearings used in other so-called "five-passenger" cars selling for about the same and lower prices.

NOW THERE WASN'T 25 PER CENT difference in price between the lowest and Reo—not 10 per cent in the case of some others. But—

WE DID FIND—and it surprised us too, even as it will astonish you—that Reo bearings were not only "50 per cent oversize"—50 per cent greater in carrying capacity according to the makers' own standards and estimates—but that, in practically every case, the difference was as 2 is to 1, and in others 3 to 1, 4 to 1, 5 to 1, and even 6 to 1!—in favor of Reo.

AND THE SAME IS TRUE of the New Reo Six by comparison with the light, flashy, "flimsy" Sixes of which you hear so much nowadays.

IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE they are "light" just compare the size of bearings they use with the great big bearings (Timkens, and Hyatts too, each where best calculated to do the work) you'll find in the $1250 Reo Six.

PRICE IS SUBJECT to increase without notice—but Reo quality never changes. From the first it has been and always will be "The Gold Standard of Values."

Uncle Sam Offers Health to the Nation

at the Hot Springs of Arkansas. When you come here for your rheumatism, gout, Bright's disease or stomach trouble you're not putting yourself into the hands of private, commercial exploiters of a health resort. You are under the wing of Uncle Sam—you're bathing in the radio-active waters that he recommends for you and that he depends upon for curing his own army and navy men. He even regulates the prices of the baths and the conduct of the bath-houses. He looks after your health—we of Hot Springs, Ark., look after your comfort and your recreations. And we are wise enough business men to know and act on the truth of the fact that the prosperity of Hot Springs, Ark., depends upon our reasonableness in treating our visitors.

That's why those who come and are cured the first visit come back the next year for pleasure.

Come—whether it be for health or pleasure, rest—we offer you all.

For complete information covering the baths and your ailment if you're ailing, or our facilities for your enjoyment if you're seeking a winter playground, write us—filling out coupon.

RTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

HERE ARE TAXES BEING PROPOSED TO MEET DEFICIT

List of New Levies and Changes Planned by Congress Presented by "Tribune."

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The complete list of possible new taxes from which the ways and means committee of the house expects to meet the threatened deficit in the treasury and the amount to be raised under each tax have been obtained by THE TRIBUNE.

This list, which has been closely guarded, has not been given out heretofore, although a few of the items in it have appeared from time to time. The data included in it have been collected by both treasury experts and by experts working under the committee and is for the sole guidance of the committee in writing the new revenue bill.

If all the taxes on the list were imposed the receipts of the government would be increased by more than $632,000,000. This would be about twice the amount needed to meet the threatened deficit, which is estimated at $300,000,000 by July 1, 1918.

List Still Under Consideration.

None of the taxes mentioned in the list actually has been proposed to the committee, and the committee has given no intimation that any of the taxes will be included in the bill, but it is regarded reasonable to suppose that many of the taxes mentioned in the list will be imposed to raise the required revenue.

The list is composed of three principal classifications. These are:

1. Internal revenue taxes.
2. Duties on imports which hitherto been on the free list.
3. Increased duties on imports on which a duty is now assessed.

The articles in the list and the amount that each tax would raise are:

INTERNAL REVENUE.
Tax on excess profits	$200,000,000
Restoration of stamp taxes	40,000,000
Increase of inheritance tax	22,000,000
Increase of 15 cents a gallon on distilled spirits and elimination of outage allowance	50,000,000
Increase of 25 cents a gallon on fermented liquors	14,000,000
Tax of 5 cents a gallon on near beers, soft drinks, mineral waters, etc	42,000,000
Additional tax on cigars and tobaccos	27,000,000
Tax of $1 per horse power on internal combustion engines [automobiles]	30,000,000
Straight tax of 8 cents a pound on oleomargarine	4,000,000
Tax on copper, pig iron, petroleum, and aluminium	81,000,000
Tax on motion picture films	6,000,000
Tax on glucose	15,000,000
Tax on advertising bilboards and advertising placards on street cars	2,000,000
Tax on candy	2,000,000
TARIFF CHANGES.
Duty of 3 cents a pound on coffee	30,000,000
Duty of 10 cents a pound on tea	10,000,000
Duty of 10 cents a pound on cocoa	3,000,000
Duty of 10% on crude rubber	15,000,000
Increase of 5% on manufactured rubber	30,000
Duty of 10% on raw silk	12,000,000
Duty of 10% on cotton bagging and burlap	3,000,000
Duty of 10% on raw wool	11,000,000
Increase of 10% on manufactured wool, except laces, etc	1,000,000
Increase of 5% on manufactured cotton, except laces, etc	1,000,000
Duty of 10% on bananas	1,200,000
Duty of 10% on lumber, laths, and shingles	2,000,000

Excess Profits Tax Unique.

In addition to these a tax on all freight shipments at one time was mentioned, but there is no possible chance of its adoption.

Of the taxes mentioned above possibly the most revolutionary is the tax on excess profits. This would be assessed on all corporations in the United States. The tax proposed is 5 per cent of all the profits earned by the corporation in excess of 8 per cent.

So far as known such a tax has never before been proposed in the history of the United States, although some foreign nations have such a tax. It would bring in a greater amount of revenue than any other tax and would stand among the revenue producing taxes along with the liquor tax and the income tax.

The restoration of the stamp taxes would mean a reversion to the same taxes that were imposed by the emergency revenue law of October, 1914, passed shortly after the outbreak of the war, and partly rescinded in the last revenue bill just previously to the opening of the presidential campaign.

Change in Inheritance Tax.

The increase of the inheritance tax would entail, it is understood, a reclassification of the tax so that the federal government would collect even the state's inheritance taxes with the understanding that the government would return to the state its share of the tax. Practically every state now has an inheritance tax.

The increased taxes on liquor have been proposed many times, but the tax on near-beers, mineral waters, soft drinks, etc., has never before been proposed. This tax probably would include medicinal waters.

The tax on internal combustion engines, which is another way of stating a tax on automobiles, was talked of last year, but was not seriously considered at that time. It is understood the committee may give serious consideration to this tax this year.

OBITUARY.

COL. NATE M. REID, who died on Thursday, will be buried at 10 a. m. today from the Western Casket company, Randolph street and Michigan avenue. The Press club, which has charge of the funeral, has selected the following members to act as pallbearers: R. H. Murphy, Edward White, Dr. William F. Nutt, Frank Dunham, Edward Clipson, and Leo Saltiel. Dr. W. B. Norton, the club's chaplain, will preside. Many members from Old Glory post and the Loyal Legion, of which Mr. Reid was a member, will be present. Burial will be in the Press club lot at Mount Hope.

JOHN S. CURLY, 85 years old, a pioneer resident of Chicago, died yesterday at his home, 5508 Fulton street. He was born Dec. 28, 1831, in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and came to Chicago in 1851. Mr. Curly, after coming to Chicago, engaged in the packing business with Charles Dupee & Co., and in the mercantile business with Thomas Lonergan & Co. In the early '80s he was a prospector in the west, and was associated with the father of William Randolph Hearst. He is survived by two daughters, Mary A. Curly and Helen Curly.

HAROLD H. THEEL, 32 years old, editor of a Swedish publication with offices at 207 North Fifth avenue, collapsed while at work yesterday and was dead before medical aid could be summoned. He was unmarried and lived at the Newberry hotel, 813 North Dearborn street. Recently he underwent an operation for the removal of a goiter. An attack of heart disease is supposed to have caused his death.

A. O. HANNON, president of the Pioneer Portrait company, is dead after a three day illness at his late residence, 6116 South Wood street. He was born in Chicago Feb. 17, 1873. He is survived by a widow, four children, his mother, and three brothers. The funeral will be held today from the residence to the People's Liberal church. Burial will be at Mount Greenwood.

Detroit Electric

Save Yourself Starting Troubles by Driving a Detroit Electric

Winter is here. So are days of starting troubles. Frozen radiators, chilled cylinders and choking carburetors are the common bane of most motorists. How can these difficulties be overcome or avoided?

The answer is a practical and proven one. It is found in the Detroit Electric.

On the coldest winter days, while most men are nursing their cars back to life, the Detroit Electric owner jumps in his car, turns on the power and is right off.

And there is no "bucking" or jerking on the "get-away"—the Detroit Electric runs easily and evenly from the minute you turn the lever.

The power-flow is perfect. It is ample to pull up high hills and through drifted snow and heavy going.

Daily demonstrations are proving these statements true.

Try the Detroit Electric yourself. We will call for you gladly any day and drive you to or from your office.

Prices range from $1775 to $2375

1917—And Bartlett!

BOUNTIFUL with its favors was nineteen sixteen to the House of Bartlett. The year just drawn to a close has set for us a real estate sales record that we believe stands without parallel in the annals of the business. Four millions of dollars in subdivision property alone—nine great subdivisions—hundreds upon hundreds of acres of choicest realty, the equivalent of over fourteen thousand 25 ft. city lots. This is our 1916 achievement—judged by any, every standard a proud and praiseworthy performance. For it all thanks are due our patrons and our friends. To them we owe a debt of gratitude that we now again publicly acknowledge.

WITH Bartlett, to make a new record is to set a new pace. Progress is resistless. It countenances no let-ups, brooks no set-backs, admits of no excuses. This year must surpass last, and next year this. Experience, business wisdom, foresightedness each plays its part in progressively successful accomplishment.

WE are keenly alive to our responsibilities. Constantly with us is the thought that our very existence hinges upon our ability to make money for those who put their faith in us, their money in our properties. On this our success will always depend, on this it has always depended. It governs our every transaction, has established the rock-ribbed Bartlett policy now become famous throughout the land: To buy the best properties for cash at bottom-level figures; to sell these properties at unbeatable bargain prices, allowing ourselves but a modest profit per parcel, seeking gain solely in huge volume and speedy sale.

ADHERING closely to this policy, and remembering how hard a taskmaster is Progress, we have prepared a 1917 program that will rouse Chicago's realty investors as nothing ever has before. To the public at large full facts cannot now be given. We publish below, for the first time, some few details; Chicagoans familiar with past Bartlett operations may gather from the following that something startling impends. But only those who mail the coupon, or who call or phone for further facts on this greatest-of-all Bartlett property, will learn in advance the true and amazing significance of our complete fact-story. And we earnestly advise you not to invest a single dollar in Chicago real estate until you do get the story.

The Bartlett Program for 1917—Just an Inkling

ALL our properties have been disposed of, or practically so. Our decks are "cleared for action" on a new and stupendous undertaking—easily the biggest of its kind ever launched in Chicago. We mean to concentrate the combined energies and efforts of our 500-man-power organization on the one project—the first and most important in our present year's selling plan. And it may be said without fear of contradiction, that never before have Chicago realty buyers been offered such a magnificent investing opportunity.

"A Model Modern City Within the City of Chicago"

A Four Million Dollar Bartlett Development—Only 24 Minutes from Downtown

A RECENT decision of the Supreme Court enabled Bartlett to gain possession of a wonderful piece of property that has been held intact under private ownership for nearly half a century. Close to 400 acres there is of it—a tract that is by long odds the most remarkable inside the city limits.

¶ It is located less than twelve miles from the City Hall. At its front door is a self-supporting, tremendously thriving, thoroughly developed district. Right on the tract are two stations of a railroad that provides 24-minute service to and from the Loop. And four separate street car lines are at hand, with 5-cent fares to downtown.

¶ Consider the above facts, one at a time. Think what each must mean to the future of a piece of property. Then weigh carefully the influence of ALL taken together. And remember that you have yet to hear things about this marvelous development that are of even more vital importance. The coupon brings them to you—each and every one.

¶ This property will not be opened to the public until next Spring. Complete facts will be withheld from all but advance inquirers until the sale is announced. But meanwhile hundreds of thousands of dollars in improvements will be installed—worth-while, value-increasing improvements—sidewalks, sewers, water, electricity, gas, etc.

¶ Because this tract came to us through a legal decision its purchase price was forced down to an unbelievably low figure. Bartlett's huge Spot Cash buying power forced that figure down still lower. This makes bargain prices possible—lower even than the usual Bartlett prices—prices which in the aggregate represent about what a smaller real estate operator would have had to pay at WHOLESALE! And Bartlett easy terms besides!!

Coupon Brings You Advance "Ground-Floor" Facts

¶ You incur not the slightest obligation in mailing us the coupon. And, on the other hand, you put yourself in position where you can have all the facts placed before you long in advance of the general public. You can learn (if you are further interested when you know the entire story) just why you double your chances for profit by "getting in on the ground floor"—by making yourself a preferred customer of the Bartlett organization and earning the special privileges that always go to our preferred customers. Mail the coupon today—get all the facts—let us help you make 1917 YOUR big year!

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

To encourage skating, not only for boys who already are provided for by THE TRIBUNE's second annual speed and fancy figure tests, now in progress at the various playgrounds, but among the city's best performers as well, THE TRIBUNE announces its first annual skating Derby, to be held at Humboldt park Jan. 28. It will be a two mile event, with one mile heats, if necessary. The winner will receive a pair of solid silver skates.

The race has been sanctioned by the Western Skating association, which assures the speed stars of Chicago. Secretary Timothy Cruise of the west park board has issued a permit for the use of the pond. Men prominent in the athletic world have volunteered their services as officials. Everything appears propitious, except possibly the weather, and the weather man has a habit of being kindly at that season of the year.

Remember Hans Brinker?

This is the first event of its kind attempted in the United States. The thought reverts to "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates," a book which nearly all of us have read at some time in our career. The intention is to make the Silver Skates race a classic in the skating world. In future years it is possible the officials may see fit to open the entry list to stars of other cities.

Hans Brinker, as you remember, was a poor boy in Holland. He practiced hard, and finally won the great Silver Skates race on the frozen dike. His speed and skill attracted great attention among prominent persons and won for him the hand in marriage of a beautiful girl.

You Never Can Tell!

THE TRIBUNE Derby, of course, was not planned to promote matrimony, but if the winner follows the example of Hans Brinker—well, who will object?

Jan. 28 was selected because some of the best skaters in this section will leave for the east to take part in the national and international championships the following week. President H. Erland of the Western Skating association is enthusiastic over the new event.

"THE TRIBUNE is doing real good in promoting skating," Mr. Erland said yesterday. "The promotion of the boys' tourney and the Silver Skates Derby are what we need. As president of the Western Skating association, I will do everything possible to make skating as popular in winter as baseball is in summer."

Eck Also a Volunteer.

Tom Eck, veteran trainer of bicycle riders, now coach of the cross country team at the University of Chicago, volunteered his services to help lay out the track on the morning of the event. Charles A. Dean, former president of the Central A. A. U. and a skating authority, also has volunteered to help. Others interested are: William Howe, Roy Davis, F. W. Blankley of the Illinois A. C., Robert Hunter and Martin Delaney of the C. A. A., Everett C. Brown of the South Shore Country club, and Dr. Searle, Harry Haselhurst, and H. G. Van Ostrand of the Hamilton club.

The winner of second place in the derby will be presented with a pair of nickel plated racers and the winner of third place a pair of bronze racers. Those wishing to compete are requested to send their entries to the Skating Editor of THE TRIBUNE. Entries must be in on or before Jan. 25.

The foregoing is a preliminary announcement. Other details will be announced from time to time. Watch THE TRIBUNE for full information.

Posts $5,000 for Mitchell Battle with Fred Welsh

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 6.—Five thousand dollars was posted with a local fight fan today by Billy Mitchell, manager of Richie Mitchell, as a sign of good faith that Mitchell means business in his efforts to get Champion Freddie Welsh in a title match. If Welsh agrees to a bout Mitchell will let the $5,000 stand as a side bet. The money was posted on advices from New York that Welsh wouldn't consider giving Richie a title match until "the Mitchells made good their bluff to post $5,000 as a side bet."

Welsh Asks Second Bout if Mitchell Floors Him

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Before Harry Pollok signed articles today for a match between Freddie Welsh and Richie Mitchell in Milwaukee on Jan. 24, he insisted that he be guaranteed a return match for the title in the event of a knockout. Pollok said he demanded this as protection to Welsh, due to reports of Mitchell's punching power of late. Welsh will start training at once. Les Darcy met Promoter Tom Andrews today, but reached no decision regarding a match, although offered a guarantee of $20,000.

G. CARPENTIER MUST STAY TILL WAR ENDS

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Georges Carpentier, heavyweight champion of Europe, will remain in France until after the war is over, according to word received from the French capital today. "The Sportsman," one of the most prominent authorities on boxing in England, said today that it was most improbable that the necessary leave of absence would be granted by the war department of France to enable Carpentier to leave the country.

This news practically kills whatever hope may have lingered in the breasts of the promoters of boxing in America to have the dauntless Frenchman cross the Atlantic and take part in any boxing match or series of matches. It was planned to have Carpentier box with Jess Willard, the world's heavyweight champion, for the benefit of the French Red Cross. Later, when Les Darcy, the Australian, landed in America, some thought that he would make a better match for the hero of France.

The French people would be glad if Carpentier were able to go to America to box. They believe that he is the master of the world. Cooler judgment, however, does not agree with their enthusiasm. Carpentier has been out for a long time. He has had no time to train and his nerves must certainly feel the strain of the terrible experiences he has undergone. It would probably require much time for him to condition.

Risk Firm Pays $25,000 to Those Hurt at Fight

Denver, Colo., Jan. 6.—Twenty-five thousand dollars is being paid by local attorneys, representing a casualty company, to persons injured when a section of the grandstand at the Welsh-White fight at Colorado Springs, Colo., collapsed last Labor day. Three lives were lost. This sum represents the amount of a policy taken out by the club which staged the fight. Suits filed against the club to collect injury claims totaled $225,000.

MONTH'S DRILL FOR CUB TEAM AT COAST CAMP

Few Games to Be Played on Way Back—Card for Regulars Completed.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Three weeks in Pasadena and ten days in San Francisco is the training plan for the Cubs on the Pacific coast next spring. With the exception of booking a few games for the second team on the homeward route, the schedule for the de luxe tour is complete.

It is the intention of President Weeghman and Manager Mitchell to keep the entire squad intact during all the time spent on the coast, with the exception of a few short trips of one day's time, and in this way the new manager will have a full month to look over recruits, as well as old timers.

Play Angels and Vernon.

During the three weeks' stay at Pasadena games will be played with the Los Angeles and Vernon clubs of the Pacific coast league, some of the games in Pasadena and others at the Los Angeles and Vernon parks. After the squad has had about one week of preliminary work the games with the Coast leaguers will be started. It also is possible that one club will run down to San Diego for an exhibition.

While in San Francisco five games will be played against the Frisco team and five against Oakland, the plan being for the first team to play one set while the seconds are playing the other. Not until the departure from California will the Cub squads be separated. The regulars will return by the southern route and the second team will come back through Colorado.

Meet Sox on Way Back.

On the return trip the finishing touches will be put on the first string men by playing a pair of games in Kansas City against the association club and another pair in St. Paul and Minneapolis, the last two taking place on April 7 and 8, the Saturday and Sunday preceding the opening of the season. In the Twin cities the Cubs will conflict with the White Sox, the Cubs exhibiting in St. Paul on Saturday while the Sox are in Minneapolis. On Sunday the Cubs will hold forth in Minneapolis and the Sox in St. Paul.

Probably no club ever undertook as expensive a training trip as the one mapped out for the north siders. Secretaries Williams and Craighead have figured things out in a general way and estimate the cost at about $350 per man. As it is planned to take at least thirty-five players, the party going under the expense of the club, will number about forty persons with trainer, secretaries, and president, which would bring the total expense of the tour up to $14,000.

Hendricks Wants Cub Players.

Manager Mitchell yesterday had a conference with Manager Hendricks of the Indianapolis club. The latter is after three of the Cubs for his Hoosier team.

After two days of deliberation over the list of Cub players, Manager Mitchell decided yesterday on the eleven names to be dropped before the spring training trip begins in order to trim the squad to thirty-five men. Consequently waivers were asked on eleven of the Cub players, but neither the manager nor President Weeghman would give the names of those to be dropped. Some of them are likely to be claimed by other National league clubs, some may go to the minors, and some may be released outright.

Barry Signs to Manage Red Sox for One Year

Boston, Mass., Jan. 6.—John J. Barry, captain of the world champion Boston Americans, became manager today when he signed a contract for the coming season.

It is understood this term was his own choice, President H. H. Frazee having offered him a choice up to three years. The salary Barry will receive was not announced. Unofficial reports placed it at $10,000, with additional provision for a bonus if the team again won the pennant.

Barry will begin his duties actively next week, when the tendering of contracts to players and details of the spring training trip will be arranged. Only Ruth, Shore, and Agnew are at present under contract. Few if any salary reductions are contemplated by the new owners of the club, and no holdouts are anticipated.

St. Louis Cardinals Want Fred Snodgrass, Brave

Boston, Mass., Jan. 6.—The Boston Nationals are considering an offer made by Manager Miller Huggins of the St. Louis club to trade either Bescher or Wilson, both outfielders, for Snodgrass, center fielder of the Braves. It was said here today that no final decision will be made until word is received from Manager Stallings of the local club, who is at Haddock, Ga.

Donlin May Manage Memphis.

New York, Jan. 6.—Mike Donlin, former Giant star, may be the next manager of the Memphis Southern association club. The Tennessee club's owners are dickering with Donlin and he is ready to accept terms.

DATES SET FOR BASKET EVENTS AND TRACK MEET

BY JACK PROCTOR.

Arrangements for the National and Central A. A. U. basketball championships and the Central A. A. U. track and field meet were announced yesterday by Chairman Charles A. Dean of the C. A. A. U. championship committee. The National basket contests will be held at Second Illinois Infantry armory March 15 to 17. The Central junior and senior track meets will be staged at the same place March 30 and 31. The Central basket tourney will be decided at the Illinois Athletic club Feb. 19-21.

The national basket meet is expected to attract teams from all over the country. Utah university, holder of the title, has promised to defend its honors. Efforts are being made to induce one or more crack eastern college teams to compete. There is a good chance that the Olympic club of San Francisco, which defeated the I. A. C. for the title in 1915, will come east to attempt to regain its lost laurels.

Accommodations for 4,000.

The soldiers' armory was selected for the basket and track events because it offers accommodations for from 3,000 to 4,000 spectators. The Central track games have been held at Northwestern university for the last two years.

Junior and senior title meets on successive days are something of a novelty for Chicago. This arrangement was made largely with the hope of new records at the soldiers' track, and because of the facilities offered for spectators. The juniors will battle for title on Friday, March 30. The senior events will be held the following day.

Dean Inspects Auditorium.

Chairman Dean of the championship committee inspected the west side auditorium yesterday and discussed the seating possibilities with an expert in that line. It was on his approval that the Second was awarded both basket and track championships.

The national basket meet will be under the supervision of the Illinois Athletic club and the track events under the direction of the Second. The Central basket tourney at the I. A. C. will be taken care of by that club.

Wants Olson to Manage Vernon Team on Coast

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—Ivan Olson, shortstop last season with the Brooklyn Nationals, was named tonight as the choice of the Vernon Pacific Coast league club officials for manager in 1917. Thomas Darmody, new owner of the Vernon franchise, said Charles H. Ebbets, owner of the Brooklyn team, had not yet agreed to release Olson but was expected to do so. Olson will take charge of the team at once if released.

John McGraw and 'Matty' Go to Cuba for Vacation.

New York, Jan. 6.—John McGraw, manager of the Giants, and Christy Mathewson, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, sailed today for Cuba, where they will spend several weeks. They will be joined later by Mike Donlin, who will try to get a team of Giant recruits for baseball games.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

CRAZY KENNEDY, DETECTIVE.

CHAPTER 1.

The old saw has it that it's an ill wind that blows no good to nobody. But for the tragic and, at the time, mysterious death of William Gilroy, I might never have enjoyed the personal friendship with Crazy Kennedy, which, in the three weeks I have known him, has banished the dull boredom of a reporter's existence and made mine a life of thrills.

It was on a Saturday night, three weeks ago, that the financial editor called me into his sanctum.

Crazy Kennedy

"Morrison," he said, "there is a big mystery story over on State street. The head and shoulders of a man have been found in the east gutter, just south of Madison. Rush over there and get all you can about it."

Stopping only for my portfolio and pen and ink, I hastened over to the scene of the tragedy. There had been developments even since my editor had received the tip. The trunk of a man had been discovered in the middle of the street car track and a pair of lower limbs located in the ditch at the west side of the street.

Detectives Walsh and Dougherty of the central detail were on the ground. They knew me well.

"This looks like a big story, Morrison," said Detective Walsh. "Three men have evidently been murdered."

"Murdered!" broke in Dougherty. "You jump to conclusions, Walsh. Is it not more likely that these three unfortunates were the victims of a shipwreck on Lake Michigan, and that their organs have been washed up here?"

"Possibly, possibly," said the other impatiently, jealousy of his colleague making itself evident in his tone. "The important thing now, though, is to collect these fragments and cart them away before they are noticed."

"Where would you cart them?" I inquired.

"To the laboratory of Crazy Kennedy."

"Crazy Kennedy," I repeated. "I have never heard the name."

"It will be on every tongue ere long," rejoined Detective Walsh. "The boy, for he is only past his majority, has taken up the solution of crime as his hobby, and although I cannot say that I approve of his methods, he certainly hits the bull's eye in the nose."

"Time for explanations later," interrupted Dougherty. "We have work to do that must be done fast."

Borrowing a go-cart from a passing bum, the three of us hastily filled it with the débris and soon were tiptoeing north on State street, toward the river.

CHAPTER 2.

We delivered our burden in a rather dimly lighted room above a saloon just north of Lake street. At a table in the corner I could see a crouched figure bending over some playing cards. The figure straightened at our entrance, and I looked for the first time at Crazy Kennedy. His pointed chin, nose, ears, and eyes bespoke indomitable will power.

"Mr. Kennedy," began Detective Walsh, but the specialist interrupted him.

"There has been a tragedy on State street near Madison," he said. Then, smiling at our astonished faces, added: "I read it in the afternoon papers."

"Three men have been murdered," mumbled Dougherty, "and we have brought you remnants to aid you in a solution."

Without a word Crazy Kennedy examined the contents of the go-cart. He seemed to be talking to himself, or chewing fine cut. At last, when I thought I could bear the suspense no longer, he spoke:

"This is all one man, separated."

"One man!" screamed Detective Walsh.

Crazy Kennedy was again making investigations. He had extracted from the corpse's inside coat pocket five letters and an insurance company's identification card. All the letters were addressed to William Gilroy, and the card read: "Name, William Gilroy, Address, 5332 Prairie avenue."

"I wonder who he could be," wondered Detective Dougherty.

Crazy indulged in a wan smile.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this poor man's name was William Gilroy, and he lived on Prairie avenue, between Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth."

"But how was he killed?" I howed.

"How do you think?" howed Crazy.

"He was shot," I hazarded.

"He was poisoned," guessed Walsh.

"He was paralyzed," ventured Dougherty.

"You are all of you right," said Crazy, "and in that condition he fell on the street car track in front of an on coming car."

Dougherty and Walsh looked foolish, and I felt slightly impatient at my own stupidity. It all seemed so simple now that it was explained.

"Gentlemen," said Crazy Kennedy, "there is but one more little matter that needs attention. Do you remember which car track the abdomen was found on?"

We all answered at once:

"The east track!"

Crazy went to a cupboard at the far end of the room and soon returned with a small, cylindrical instrument that looked something like a watch or a pedometer.

"This, gentlemen," he said, "is one of the latest inventions in science. It is what is called a compass. I place it flat on this unfortunate man's chest," suiting the action to the word, "and now," picking up the compass, "our mystery is solved to the last detail."

"What do you mean?" we whatted.

"Gentlemen," said Crazy Kennedy, "William Gilroy was killed by a north bound car."

(The next Crazy Kennedy story will appear next Sunday.)

ELI AND PURPLE NATATORS PROVE FINE SPORTSMEN

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

"Fine sportsmanship of a type which makes college athletics worth while" is the opinion the C. A. A. athletic committee holds of action by the athletic authorities at Yale and Northwestern universities and by members of the swimming teams from these two institutions. The Cherry Circle committee has just finished its labors of adjusting the difficulty which developed from the relay race for the Richard Fitzgerald trophy and medals in the C. A. A. tank last April.

For a time the C. A. A. found itself in possession of a set of four gold medals which it did not know what to do with. These medals were awarded the Yale team, which won the relay for the Fitzgerald trophy, Northwestern university's team finishing second.

Freshmen Used by Yale.

Later the point was raised by the editor of the University of Chicago Alumni magazine—who could bring up the point because the Maroons finished third and were not directly affected—that Yale had used freshmen, contrary to precedent and the previous understanding, and had secured an unfair advantage over the western teams, whose rules forbade freshmen competition.

Several open letters followed between the Yale manager and the Maroon editor, and the question finally came before the Yale board of athletic control. Although the race was not conducted under intercollegiate conference rules, the guardians of the Eli athletic policies decided to settle the moot question by returning the medals with the statement that Yale swimmers did not want any medals, concerning the winning of which there was any question, technical or otherwise.

Purple Declines Medals.

The medals then were intrusted to a C. A. A. special committee, consisting of J. B. Barchard, chairman; L. A. Ferguson, whose son is a member of the Yale swiming team, and Athletic Director Delaney. The medals were offered to Northwestern. In behalf of his swimmers, Coach Tom Robinson said his pupils did not wish to accept medals won on a technicality and would keep the silver emblems for second place.

This put it up to the committee to decide what to do with the medals. In announcing its decision the committee paid a high tribute to the sportsmanship of Yale and Northwestern and directed:

> That the set of medals returned by Yale and an additional set of medals should go to winners of the Fitzgerald trophy swim in the C. A. A. pool this winter, the medals of last season to go to the winner if the race is won by either Northwestern or Yale, or, if some other team finishes first, to the Purple or Eli team which finishes ahead of the other.
> Same Rules Regarding Cup.
> That if Yale or Northwestern wins, its team shall have two legs on the cup; or, if some other team finishes first, that team shall have one leg and one leg shall be held by Northwestern or Yale, whichever finishes in advance of the other.

The Cherry Circle athletic committee closed the case by sending letters of appreciation to the athletic authorities at Northwestern and Yale.

MAROONS BEAT HAWKEYE TEAM IN FIRST CLASH

Spurt at Finish Insures Victory—Final Count Is 22 to 15.

Chicago burst open the conference basketball with a 22 to 15 victory over Iowa in Bartlett gymnasium last night. It was a close defensive battle all the way. Neither team was more than two points in the lead until the middle of the second half, when the Maroons spurted for three baskets and took a comfortable lead.

Capt. Townley opened the scoring with a couple of free throws, then Capt. Bannick of the visitors scored the first basket. The count see-sawed back during the half, each basket putting the tossing team in the lead. Just before the half ended Gorgas jumped the ball into the ring, and Parker caged one from the center of the floor, giving the Maroons a 10 to 7 advantage. The lead was held by Page's men in the second half. Iowa cut it down to one point, but a Maroon spurt made things safe.

Both teams played better defensive basketball than on the attack. After the first half Iowa gave up trying to slip past the rugged defense of Rothermel, Townley, and Gorgas, and fed Capt. Bannick the ball in the center of the floor. The little Buckeye leader scored five ringers, mostly from long range.

Bent and Parker scored in spurts for Chicago, each making three baskets. Dutton and Gorgas chased each other all over the floor, using defensive tactics, and each center held the other to a single basket. The game was free from the rough work that marred the Chicago-Iowa game last year. Townley fared better than Bannick on free throws, caging four of his five tosses. Lineup:

Illini, 28; Purdue, 24

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 6.—Illinois defeated Purdue in a hard fought basketball game tonight, 28 to 24. Illini had the edge on Coach Lambert's men, but the Boilermakers gave the visitors the fiercest kind of competition. Ray Woods and McKay were the stars for Illinois. Smith scored sixteen of Purdue's twenty-four points.

Illinois started out with a rush and the first half ended in its favor, 19 to 16. Purdue rallied and tied the score, then took the lead. But the Illini rushes overcame the lead. Toward the end Purdue was able to muster a stone wall defense, but could not score the necessary points to tie. Lineup:

Badgers, 30; Ohio, 22

Columbus, O., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Superior passing and basket shooting enabled Wisconsin to open the Western conference basketball season with a 30 to 22 win over Ohio. Close guarding featured the start. Capt. Norton of the Buckeyes tossed the first field goal after seven minutes of play. With Levis leading, the Badgers rushed toward a 13 to 6 advantage at half time.

Hemming of Wisconsin led the scoring in the second half. Capt. Levis was retired for four personal fouls at the close. Levis, Hemming, Norton, and Davies starred. Lineup:

Ohio [22].		Wisconsin [30].
Norton [capt.]	L. F.	Levis [capt.], Myers
Leader, Bast	R. F.	McIntosh
MacDonald	C.	Hemming
Bolen	L. G.	Olson
Davies	R. G.	Carlson, Simpson

Baskets—Norton [2], Leader, MacDonald [3], Olson, McIntosh [2], Levis [5], Hemming [5]. Free throws—Davies [2], Leader [8], Hemming [4]. Referee—Schommer, Chicago.

Badger Students, Alumni, to See Purple Contest

University of Wisconsin students and alumni will be on hand tomorrow night at the Northwestern gymnasium to see their champion Badgers play Northwestern in the second conference game of the season. The classes at Wisconsin do not open until Tuesday morning, and arrangements were accordingly made with the Northwestern railroad to have a special train take the students to Madison after the game, which starts at 8 o'clock.

New York Yanks Escape Reductions in Salary

New York, Jan. 6.—The New York American league club, which sent out its 1917 contracts today, announced there had been no reduction in the salary of any player, and that four of the men had been granted increases. Nine of the leading players have contracts.

ROWLAND GETS JOB OPEN FOR JOHN M'GRAW

Named as Sox Boss Because Comiskey Could Not Land Muggsy.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

White Sox rooters probably have wondered why President Comiskey waited until almost Christmas before announcing that Clarence Rowland would be retained as manager. It wasn't at all like the Old Roman. Ordinarily he would have declared himself one way or the other as soon as the season of 1916 was over, because he knows baseball and the baseball public and realized the effect of the delay.

Comiskey risked handicapping his manager in the eyes of the public on the chance of getting John J. McGraw to succeed Rowland. It was a slim chance, but a chance, and Comiskey took it.

The National league might have reprimanded the Giant manager for his action in the final series with Brooklyn last fall so severely that it would have been up to President Hempstead of the New York club to get a new pilot; but the Tener league, so far as known, took no notice of the incident.

Decision After National Meeting.

If you remember, President Comiskey waited until the annual meeting of the National league was all over and the club owners had gone to their homes, then he announced his decision to retain Manager Rowland. There was no explanation of the delay. None could be made, but this is it, and it is based on the best of authority.

It also explains the verbal controversy of the early fall between Presidents Johnson of the American league and Tener of the National over the McGraw incident. Tener declared the McGraw affair a "closed incident." Johnson declared the American league never would let a thing like that pass unpunished on account of its injury to the good name of baseball. Tener suggested that the National league could handle its own affairs in its own way. Johnson insisted the American league was interested in the McGraw mistake because it affected baseball as a sport.

More than a year ago it was reported McGraw was going to seek his release from the New York club's contract and hook up with Messrs. Ruppert and Huston, new owners of the New York Yankees, who are personal friends of his and among his stanchest admirers as a manager. Apparently McGraw was unable to acquire the freedom that would enable him to pilot the Yankees.

Commy's Friend for Years.

Comiskey and McGraw have been friends for a good many years. Both were players, and that means a lot. Their friendship was cemented during the world's tour made by two teams of players just before the European war.

McGraw has had American league experience. He was part owner and manager of the Baltimore American league club in 1901, 1902, and part of 1903. He did not like it then. Having learned his baseball in the old Baltimore National league school, which taught that the surest method of winning was to browbeat and intimidate the umpires, McGraw attempted to apply those methods in the American league. As a result he was barred from his own ball park a good deal of the time by order of Ban Johnson, who saved baseball from disrepute by restoring his umpires to the autocracy from which diamond arbitrators had been dethroned by men from whom McGraw learned baseball.

Tried to Wreck League.

So little did McGraw like the Johnson system that he tried to wreck the American league by selling out the majority interests in the Baltimore club to join John T. Brush of New York in midseason of 1903.

The American league survived and entertained anything but a warm regard for McGraw. But the Giant manager has changed tremendously in the years that have intervened. From one of the worst umpire baiters in the major leagues he has reformed himself until today he seldom molests an umpire, and then only in the matter of interpreting a playing rule or a ground rule. His players now direct all their efforts toward beating their opponents instead of toward getting a shade from the umpires.

The McGraw of today would be as amenable to American league discipline as he was opposed to it before his conversion. Otherwise, you may be sure, Comiskey would not have entertained the hope of obtaining him to manage the White Sox, because President Johnson would have opposed strongly the return of an unreconstructed and unreformed McGraw to the American league ranks.

Two Swedish Track Stars Invited to Compete Here

New York, Jan. 6.—With the idea of encouraging international competition, the Amateur Athletic union has invited A. Bohlin and J. Zanders, two of Sweden's best runners, to compete in the national senior indoor A. A. U. championship games in this city March 17. George F. Pawling of Philadelphia, who sailed today on the steamer Kristianiafjord for Stockholm, carried the invitation of the A. A. U. officials to the Swedish Athletic association, together with an offer to defray expenses.

Bohlin and Zanders are star performers whose records compare favorably with those of the best amateur runners of the world. Bohlin, as a rule, confines his running to the 400 and 800 meter races, which correspond with the American quarter and half mile events. Zanders, while he sometimes competes at these distances, is better in the longer contests, ranging from 3,000 to 5,000 meters.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

THE FISH THAT GET AWAY.

If some sweet singer of Posey county would seize his bloomin' lyre and tear off a dirge on "The Fish That Get Away," he would, as the ads say, fill a long felt need. For it is just these fish that do not remain ours that are responsible for the reputation that fishermen have for trifling with the truth.

Let an angler come home and tell a tale of the fish he almost got and his circle of listeners grin indulgently in his face and har har up their sleeves behind his back. If he gets peeved when they laugh they accept the fact as proof that he is prevaricating. If he pretends not to notice it they clearly see he realizes he is talking to a clever bunch and decides he cannot get by with a "fish story."

A certain class of anglers—what we might term the highbrows—since the days of Walton, have been satisfied with the fact that the Lord chose his disciples from among fishermen. But supposing some doubting nonangler should say: "Well, I supose they needed it more than the other people." Perish the thought, but what could you say? Echo answers: "What could you say?" Of course, no nonangler has ever suggested the question because nonanglers, as a rule, are not smart enough to have thought of it. But what if they would?

There is only one way to get even with a doubter. Invite him to go fishing with you some time. Choose a big windy lake where the rowing is hard, seat him in the boat where the oars are, and then remark casual like: "Now, one of us will row and I will fish."

As a matter of cold, hard fact, fishermen are not any more untruthful than any other class. Surprising things do happen when one is fishing, and we will give a few incidents to show how truth may, unwittingly, be fractured.

Friend wife and the writer were casting one evening last summer on a Michigan lake. She dropped her bait under an old pier and bingo, just like that, there was a swirl that almost rocked the boat as a fish rose and missed the hook. We saw just a flash of bronze and a sizable dark shadow, and from the swirl we were justified in believing it was a whale of a bass, and probably would believe so to this day had she not made another cast into the same spot and hooked and landed a six pound dogfish. On the same lake we accidentally snagged a ten inch bass amidship and he put up such a terrible fight we would have delivered an ultimatum, if not a declaration of war, on any one who even hinted, while we were playing it, that it was not a five pounder.

Labor day, on the St. Joe river, my good friend Herb Daniels battled a half hour with a "fish," which, when landed, proved to be a big leather back turtle. Had it got away without being brought to the surface we all would have said, and believed, that it was at least a twenty pounder, even though the St. Joe is not one of those streams where there is a notary every mile making a living selling affidavits.

Often there is tragedy in the Fish That Get Away. For instance, my good friend Jack Schney of V. L. & A. was fishing at Little St. Germain last fall. After a week of hard work and no results, while casting from shore one day, he hooked a nice muskie. He played it awhile and when it was ready to land he yelled: "Get a gaff!" A noninnocent bystander hearing this cry for hellup, yanks out his automatic and nearly shoots the line in two right in front of the bait. Moral: If you want a gaff hook say "gaff hook"—"gaff" sounds too much like "gat."

Just a word of advice, my son, and we are through. Make your estimates conservative. Remember a hooked fish always looks and fights bigger than he really is. A versemaker covers it thusly:

A three pound pull and a five pound bite,
An eight pound jump and a ten pound fight;
A twelve pound bend of the pole—
but alas!
When you get him aboard he's a half pound bass.

CUBS WILL TRY OUT COAST SOU'PAW WHO STOPPED WHITE SOX

BY WARREN W. BROWN.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Dutch Reuther, Walter for short, will report to Boss Fred Mitchell of the Cubs next spring. From a raw college left hander Dutch sprung into prominence at a bound by holding the White Sox to three hits in 1913, while pitching for the St. Ignatius university team in San Francisco, the writer being the first baseman on the same team.

Through no fault of his own Dutch blew that game. Critics who panned the collegian center fielder for muffing a fly ball at a critical moment completely overlooked the fact that just before the muff Babe Borton, with the count three and two, looked at the next ball as it cut the plate, tossed away his bat, and started for the bench, only to hear Umpire Bush drone "Ball four."

May Face Sox Again.

If there is such a thing as a break in a ball game, that was it. The Ignatians were leading, 2 to 1, and one was out when Bush missed that third strike. The error in center field followed, and then Buck Weaver's smashing drive, which evaded the left fielder and gave Buck a homer, cleared the paths. The game was gone, but the lanky left handed German lad won the glory. Even Umpire Bush's decision could not deprive the youngster of that. Now Dutch may get another crack at the White Sox in a city series.

Since leaving college Reuther has served with Los Angeles, in the Coast league; went from there to Pittsburgh, back to Sacramento, and thence to Salt Lake, where he completed his tour of the Coast league. Wildness was the big hurler's main fault—wildness in more ways than one.

A Southpaw with Control.

Two years' service in the Northwest league, one with Vancouver and one with Spokane, fitted Reuther for his second trial in the big show. Dutch has learned to stay along the straight and narrow, and he has mastered the art of getting the old baseball across the platter when the notion strikes him. Dutch is ready, and Manager Mitchell of the Cubs will soon discover it.

Reuther finished the recent season with Portland in the Pacific Coast league and displayed unusual ability in the pitching and hitting lines.

Indiana Plans Courses for Coaches in Summer

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—For many seasons past Indiana university has conducted a school for athletic coaches during the summer sessions and now comes the physical education department with a statement that it is going to put on three new courses at once to be conducted by Coach Whisman, Coach Cohn, and Coach Krause. The courses are "baseball technique," "track and field athletics," and "playground and gymnastic games." The old gymnasium is taxed to its capacity with large classes in light, heavy, and corrective gymnastics, wrestling and swimming. The additional courses will be given when the new $225,000 gym is occupied next week.

Hundred Skaters Named in Garfield Park Races

The Northwest Skating club will hold its annual derby today at Garfield park lagoon with thirteen events on the program and more than 100 contestants entered. A hurdle race, barrel jumping contest, and 220 yard backward race are on the card.

Opportunity A. A. Officers.

The Opportunity Athletic association has elected the following officers: President, Alfred Ginsburg; vice president, David L. Levinson; recording secretary, Melvin W. Sherman; financial secretary, Max Zimmerman; treasurer, Sam Abramovitz; sergeant at arms, Philip Schlacht. Louis H. Levinson retained as athletic director.

NO CHANCE TO STEAL JOE BENZ' MOTOR CAR

If one is a prominent citizen, he need have little fear of his motor car being stolen by auto thieves. Joe Benz, pitcher for the White Sox, is one of Chicago's prominent citizens. Joe drives a car. The other day he loaned his car to a friend who wished to make a hurried trip downtown.

The friend was rolling down Michigan avenue when a tall traffic policeman demanded a halt.

"Where you going with Joe Benz's car?" demanded the officer.

"Downtown," replied the driver. "You see, Joe and I are pals and he loaned me his car."

"That may be all true and again it may not," said the officer. "We'll just drive back to the garage and call Joe over and find out."

The driver there proved his identity and was allowed to proceed.

OAK PARK BEATS EVANSTON TEAM IN TANK EVENTS

Oak Park High school defeated Evanston High school, 31 to 29, yesterday in the Evanston Y. M. C. A. tank. Stifler of Evanston was the star performer, scoring fifteen points, taking first in the forty yard swim, sixty yard backstroke, and fancy diving contest. The outcome of the meet was in doubt until the last event, the relay, which gave Oak Park the meet. Summaries:

Plunge—Won by Kraft of Oak Park; Robertson of Evanston, second; Penfield, Evanston, third. Time, :46.

40 yard swim—Won by Stifler of Evanston; Gale, Oak Park, second; Standish, Oak Park, third. Time, :20 4-5.

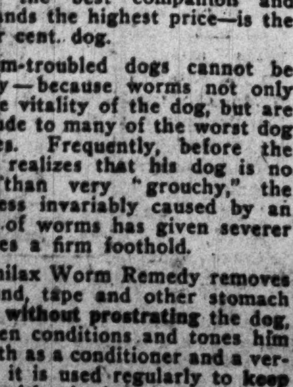
100 yard breast stroke—Won by Penfield of Evanston; Robertson, Evanston, second; Musselman, Oak Park, third. Time, 1:24 2-5.

60 yard back stroke—Won by Stifler of Evanston; Kraft, Oak Park, second; Chase, Oak Park, third. Time, :43 4-5.

100 yard swim—Won by Standish of Oak Park; Gale, Oak Park, second; Knight, Evanston, third. Time, 1:03.

Fancy diving contest—Won by Stifler of Evanston; Stahl, Oak Park, second; Mills, Evanston, third.

160 yard relay—Won by Oak Park; team, Gale, Standish, Kraft, and White. Time, 1:31 1-5.



HAVE A 100% DOG

The dog that is "live"—active bright-eyed and "clean" looking, makes the best companion and commands the highest price—is the 100 per cent. dog.

Worm-troubled dogs cannot be healthy—because worms not only sap the vitality of the dog, but are a prelude to many of the worst dog diseases. Frequently, before the owner realizes that his dog is no more than very "grouchy," the weakness invariably caused by an attack of worms has given severer maladies a firm foothold.

Vermilax Worm Remedy removes all round, tape and other stomach worms without prostrating the dog, and then conditions and tones him up. Both as a conditioner and a vermifuge it is used regularly to keep dogs healthy, by breeders and owners of dogs in every part of the country.

This and other Vermilax Supreme Dog remedies are sold by Buck & Rayner's six stores; Public Drug Co., and other druggists. Also for sale by Von Langerke & Antoine, Kaempfer's Bird Store, and Atlantic & Pacific Bird Store. Wholesale Distributors, Fuller-Morrisson & Company.

SIX DAY RIDERS TO RETURN HERE FOR CYCLE RACE

Local Promoters Will Hold Event at Dexter Park Pavilion in February.

BY JOHN ALCOCK.

They're coming back.

It was a cinch they would, but the matter was not decided for publicity purposes until yesterday. They'll furnish a lot of fun for the funny men, but for folks who like that sort of thing the show is just the sort of thing they will like. In fact, they have proved they like it.

We were speaking of the six day bike riders.

This time the Paddy Harmon-Paul Cooper combination, which controls the Riverview and Dreamland roller rinks, and which was responsible for reviving the bike game in Chicago, will stage the entertainment. The scene will be Dexter park pavilion at the stockyards. The second week in February is favored as the time. The pavilion is open that week, the riders will be at liberty, and there is hardly a chance that the date will be changed.

Two Factions in Field.

There has been considerable of a battle for the privilege of putting on Chicago's 1916-1917 race. The Harmon-Cooper combine, the regulars, have been opposed by a Coliseum crowd, of which Tommy Convey has been spokesman.

This time the grind will be a regulation affair, with twenty-four hours of riding every day for six days. A variation of the two 144 hour races seen here will lend new excitement to the proceedings, however. There will be a Berlin finish every night, which means there will be a series of desperate sprints to top off the day's sport.

Signs Twenty-two Riders.

News that the race would be held reached here yesterday in the shape of a telegram to Harmon from Johnny Chapman, eastern representative. Chapman wired he had signed twenty-two of the premier riders of the country for the endurance test. Most of those who won favor with Chicago fans in previous distance contests here will be back to bid for applause. Francisco Verri, who with Oscar Egg won the first six day race at Dexter park, is signed to compete. McNamara, who won the twelve hour race with the aid of Spears, also is entered.

About the only element missing will be Carlo Lantiari, alias "Big Steef." Carlo had a hand in running all three previous races here. Carlo now is back in Italy, or wherever his particular Italian regiment is stationed—unless he has passed out. The last word from him was a postal saying he was to join his regiment next day.

Badgers to Lead Campaign for Return of Michigan

Madison, Wis., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Madison alumni of the University of Michigan, fifteen Wisconsin faculty members and former Michigan students at Wisconsin, receiving cards from the Michigan alumni, asking, "What is the matter with athletics at Michigan," announce their efforts toward the return of Michigan to the western conference, will be concentrated on Wisconsin representaitves to the Big Nine, whom they declare must lead the campaign. As he already has declared, Wisconsin stands ready to welcome Michigan, Prof. J. F. A. Pyre has urged the Michigan crowd to have Ann Arbor petition for reentry.

Soccer Players to Banquet.

The College-Prep Alumni Soccer league will hold its annual dinner and meeting at the Mystic Athletic club on Friday night at 6:30.

CORBETT SAYS HE WILL RACE STABLE OF NAGS

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—James J. Corbett, former champion pugilist of the world, tonight announced he had determined to enter the thoroughbred racing game. To this end he today visited John E. Madden's Hamburg Place farm here and took options on three of the most promising youngsters, which will be trained during the summer months for fall racing.

Corbett said he was connected with friends in New York and New Orleans, who were not ready to have their names given out but who owned eight thoroughbreds. The firm will campaign the string on four Kentucky tracks, New York, Havre De Grace, and New Orleans.

Corbett declares he has signed a contract to appear during the summer in motion pictures, the film to be acted near Cincinnati, for which he is to receive a salary of $20,000 a month.

Racine Hockey Players Meet Harmons Today

Harmon's All Star roller hockey team is ready for its clash with the Racine champions this afternoon at Riverview rink. The Racine outfit dropped into Chicago two weeks ago and handed the All Stars a 4 to 1 defeat. Harmon immediately went out to strengthen his club and believes he has succeeded. He brought on Brannigan, a Boston star, and Whiting, who also starred in the east. He will select his team from Brannigan, Whiting, Eglington, Colston, Cioni, Anderson, E. Schwartz, and Woodward. The game will be called at 4:30 p. m.

Pirates Drop "Specs" Hill.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 6.—Pitcher Carmen Hill, who for the last two years has shared with Lee Meadows of the St. Louis Cardinals the distinction of being the only players in major league baseball wearing eye-glasses, was released by Pittsburgh to Birmingham of the Southern league.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST by A. R. Metcalfe

The 1917 laws of the Whist Club of New York include only one change of any importance, and that concerns the bid out of turn.

Formerly this gave either opponent the right to call for a new deal. In the new code either adversary may cancel or accept the bid. When a declaration out of turn is canceled the player whose turn it was to declare bids, and the partner of the offending player may not thereafter participate in the declaration.

When a declaration out of turn is accepted it becomes the turn of the player at the left of the offending player, and the partner of the offending player retains the right to participate in the declaration. If a player double or redouble when it is his partner's turn to declare, either adversary may accept the double or redouble or demand a new deal.

A new game—pirate bridge—is being extensively advertised. Curiosity may give it considerable vogue, but to switch from auction to pirate looks very much like a change from golf to croquet.

West secured eight tricks and lost 200 points.

In the original play west was obsessed with the idea of leading from dummy through the heart strength indicated in the south hand. In an attempt to secure this doubtful advantage he sacrificed the magnificent offensive strength of the club suit in dummy. Had he played as the second diagram indicates the result would have been almost a certain eleven tricks.

BROTHERS' MEET FOR BOWLERS AT RANDOLPH TODAY

Brothers will bowl against rival family pairs for twelve solid hours today at the Randolph alleys, 29 West Randolph street. Secretary Peter Howley's schedule shows twelve squads of two men teams, each composed of a pair of brothers. The opening shift will start at noon, with the last one going on the alleys at 11 p. m. One hundred and twenty teams are entered.

Prominent among the pairs billed to roll are Sykes and Fred Thoma, the Goldammers, who won the first brother meet two years ago; George and Billy Dernbach, who are the Knights of Columbus two men champions, and the Karteisers, former state champions. Joe and Frank Florian, who won last year, were not entered up to a late hour last night.

The first woman's bowling league, organized along the lines of the men's circuits, will be formed Tuesday afternoon at Leffingwell's alleys, 1014 Wilson avenue, if plans framed by Mrs. Gertrude Dornblaser mature. Applications for a place on the schedule have been received from four clubs, two being from Leffingwell's place.

A sweepstakes for women bowlers, which will be made a monthly event, will be held at Leffingwell's tomorrow afternoon. Over fifty women are expected to take part. An entry fee of $1 will cover the cost of bowling. A mixed doubles tournament also is planned at the same place for a week from Saturday. The women players will draw their partners by lot, instead of choosing them.

The LARGEST Single Order for Touring Cars
Ever Placed in Chicago

THE AMERICAN AUTO & TAXI CO., intending to further enlarge and improve their equipment to meet the demands of their business, after months of the most thorough investigation, placed their initial order with us for ONE HUNDRED STANDARD

Abbott

CARS, equipped with wire wheels. Read the reason why 100 ABBOTTS were purchased, by Wm. Wyers, President:

This is the Standard Abbott Car. The same car we sell to you. Purchased by men who know the essentials of a reliable car. They know from actual experience—from a dollar and cents standpoint.

Do you need any better proof as to which car will give you the satisfaction and service you desire?

Gentlemen:-

In giving you this order for 100 Abbott's, it gives me pleasure to say that I did so after the most thorough investigation of their merits. It is extremely important that for our service we have a car well built, possessing power as well as speed, economical in use of gasoline; in short, the best car and chassis possible to secure. It is my intention to furnish to the public the very highest grade and best equipped taxi service anywhere in the United States, and for that reason finally selected the Abbott car. I was somewhat influenced by the fact that among our present equipment we have 47 Abbott's which have been constantly in service and none of which I have run less than 250,000 miles, and I have found them to require less repairs, cost less for upkeep and more economical in operation than any other.

I apprehend that this is only an initial order as I expect that with the service we will be able to furnish that our business will continue to increase to such an extent that we will before long have from 500 to 1000 Abbott's in daily service.

Wishing you a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I remain

Sincerely yours,

William Wyers

STAR TOSSERS OF I. A. C. ROUT KNOX QUINTET

Club Team Runs Count of 80 to 23 in Clash with College Boys.

Shooting thirty-eight baskets from almost every position, Illinois Athletic club tossers smothered the Knox college five of Galesburg in an avalanche of ringers, 80 to 23, in the club gymnasium last night. At half time the score was 40 to 13. Knox injected every player it brought along on the trip into the game during the second half, but could not stop the accurate work of the locals.

Scoring honors were divided by Cochrane and Elliott, each making ten ringers. Elliott played guard during the first half, but in the second half, from a forward position, he scored eight times. Griesel ran a close third by registering eighteen points. McWilliams featured for the losers with eleven. Lineup:

Chandler M. E. Takes Lead in Hamilton Park League

Chandler M. E. took the lead in the Hamilton park lightweight league by defeating Wakefield M. E., 20 to 16, at Parker High school. Evans was hurt early in the game and unable to do much after that. Chandler led, 11 to 5, at half time. Ingleside and Normal Park had a rough contest, in which Walker was ruled off for slugging. Fourteen personal fouls were called. Ingleside won, 18 to 9. Englewood defeated Auburn Park M. E., 38 to 8, in a practice game, the losers not having a full team and filling up with substitutes. Lineups:

TRAINING ON GRID HELPS BASKET MEN; GAMES NOW ALIKE

BY MAROON.

Football players are at a premium on conference basketball floors this winter, say the football coaches. Basketball players did very well this fall on the gridiron, say the basketball coaches. The fact remains that football and basketball are growing more similar every year.

The rugged physique of the football player, his dash and drive, are just what the basketball coaches are looking for, just as the football mentor welcomes basketball men on his gridiron squad because they possess a peculiar knack of manual agility that is so essential in the new open football game. There is not a conference basketball team that does not have football players among its quintet, and in the opening games last night the fans saw a fast and rugged type of game.

Badgers Play Bruising Game.

At Madison Dr. Meanwell has developed what is called the bruising game to a science. The Badgers use a shot passing game and sweep their opponents off their feet by the force of their play. The Wisconsin basketball team occupies the same place in the conference as does the Minnesota football team—always on top, or near it. Meanwell has won three championships in the last four years.

Capt. Haas, a forward, and Smith, all conference guard, gradutaed from last year's championship Badger team. Levis, leading point scorer of the Big Nine, will captain the team until he graduates in the middle of the season. After that date Olson, the football half back, will lead the five, and Bill Chandler, star center of last year, will become eligible. In Meyers and Carlson, the former football end of fame, Meanwell has two good men, and with his big squad he should have another fast quintet.

Illinois Team Looks Strong.

The real high light in the conference should be the Illinois team, unless Coach Jones' teach hits some kind of a snag. With the two Woods brothers, the midget stars of the conference, Capt. Alwood, a fine center, and Felmey, Otto, Applegran, and Elwell of last year's team, Jones has a wealth of veteran material.

The Chicago team will not set the Big Nine afire, but should do better than last year. The loss of Schafer, the star offensive man, was a big blow, but there is a good chance he will be eligible later in the season. Coach Page has, in Townley and Rothermel, two fine defensive guards, but neither has shown much skill in hte passing and basket shooting departments.

Parker Aggresssive Forward.

Parker is a rugged forward who tears things up when he has a good night, and watches the game from a sitting posture if covered by a strong guard. Gorgas, a giant sophomore center, has cinched his berth and looks like a coming star. McGaughy, Bent, and Orr are fighting for Schafer's berth if he is declared ineligible.

John Schommer, a former Maroon captain who officiated in the Purdue-Wabash game a few days ago, says Purdue will give any team an awful battle.

From Minnesota, Iowa, Indiana, and Ohio State come hopeful predictions, but it looks like a fight between Illinois and Wisconsin, with the possibility of any one of the other seven teams pushing hard.

Penn, 18; Dartmouth, 14.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 6.—The University of Pennsylvania basketball team defeated the Dartmouth five, 18 to 14, in an intercollegiate league game tonight.

Basket Games Wanted.

The Monarch basketball team of Arlington Heights, averaging 135-140 pounds, wants games. Address L. B., 121 Arlington Heights. Phone Rogers Park 620, ask for John Vohasek.

Duquoin High, 18; Sparta, 12.

Duquoin, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Duquoin Township High school basketball squad, champion of "Egypt," trimmed Sparta High last night, 18 to 12.

BOXING BILLS UP TO SOLONS OF TWO STATES

BY RAY PEARSON.

Unless the plans of those interested in pugilism miscarry, the game of glove wielding will receive a big booming in the dear old United States of America the year just started. With a bill already framed to be presented to the lawmakers at Springfield this month, which if passed would mean legalized sport in Illinois, another already has been drawn up in Nebraska to be presented at the next session of the legislature in the Cornhusking state.

What legalized boxing would mean to the central west in the event the measures to be offered in Illinois and Nebraska are passed is easily to be conjectured, for the sport undoubtedly would be more popular than ever.

New Ideas in Bills.

Considerable has been written about the bill to be presented at Springfield, which is being sponsored by the Second regiment. This bill is different from those in effect in New York and Wisconsin, and the measure to be offered in Nebraska also is in many ways unlike the ones which have made the sport legal. The Nebraska bill is the latest, and only a few days ago did Gene Melady of Omaha, the man who drafted it, give it out for publication.

In some ways the Melady bill is unique. For one thing, it calls for the appointment of a commission and fifteen round bouts to a decision. But this decision will not be given by a referee. There will be no referee, but instead the merits of the performers will be judged by an umpire and two judges.

Provision for Decisions.

> The commission shall appoint an umpire and two judges for every contest or exhibition held under this act. Said judges and umpire so appointed shall render judgment as to the merits of the contestants after each contest or exhibition. The judges and umpire shall make a report of their judgment of the merits of the contestants to the state athletic commission. The judges and umpire appointed by the commission shall receive as compensation a sum designated by the commission, which shall be paid to them by the commission from the general operating fund of this act.

This system of naming winners and losers will be new to this country in the professional game, although it is generally used in amateur boxing. It also has been tried with more or less success in English rings. Just how well it will work out remains to be seen.

Another feature of the Nebraska bill concerns the amount of money to be paid to the state. In the first place, every club would have to be incorporated and have a membership of at least one year's standing. These clubs would then be permitted to apply for permits to hold contests only after they had paid a license fee of $100. Then after this formality had been attended to, the commission would deduct from the gross gate receipts of every show the amount of 10 per cent.

Of this 10 per cent not all would go into the state treasury, as does the 5 per cent in New York or Wisconsin, but half of it, or 5 per cent, would be used for the sake of sweet charity, the Melady measure stipulating that 5 per cent must go to the state tuberculosis fund. The other 5 per cent would go to the state treasurer to pay the operating expenses of the commission and any remaining money to the state's account.

Regiment Percentage Too Strong.

The popular idea these days, judging by the two most recent bills drafted, seems to be to hand something to charity, which is most laudable and certainly will bring pressure to bear on the lawmakers when they get down to the task of summing up the good and bad of the measures.

The Second regiment measure specifies that 25 per cent is to go to the state treasury to be dispensed for charity and operating expenses. There are those who believe that 25 per cent is too much, but those sponsoring the bill in Chicago do not believe it is, and hope to prove the right of their contention by the actual operation. The writer always has believed that 10 per cent would be about the proper amount for the state, and the plan of Melady seems a good one.

According to the Melady bill the amateurs would not be affected the same as the professionals. For A. A. U. bouts no license fee would be charged. It also is stipulated in the bill that no boxing on Sunday would be allowed.

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

The decisions of "The Tribune" representatives are:

At Brooklyn—Bill Brennan knocked out Jack Hubbard (2).

At New York—Bob McAllister beat Bert Kennedy (10).

At Philadelphia—Kid Rector beat Irish Patsey Cline (6); Young Ritchie beat Frank McManus (6).

MYSTIC A. C. BEATS WHITING.

Mystic A. C. players nosed out the Whiting Owls, 30 to 28, in one of the best games staged at Whiting this season. At half time the score was 14 all, and at no time were the winners more than four points in the lead. Colby featured for the Chicagoans and Girard and Vater for the home team. Lineup:

DARCY DEMANDS RICKARD SECURE MATCH IN HURRY

Peeved by Delay in Getting Action Here—Plans to Join Canuck Regiment.

New York, Jan. 6.—Les Darcy, Australian pugilist, is getting his peeve up. He wants to fight and he wants to do it inside of six weeks. Tex Rickard has been informed, so Darcy's manager, Tim O'Sullivan, said today, that unless he produces a match the two will get busy and accept some offer by another promoter.

"The people want to see Darcy in action, and we're going to please them, if it is possible," O'Sullivan said. "Rickard has been putting us off with promises of a match with Carpentier until we can't wait any longer. He must do something else."

Darcy Has Plenty of Chances.

Darcy would have no trouble in getting a match for almost any price, but it is hardly probable Rickard will let the bout slip past him. Although he has no place in which the fight might be staged, he has been figuring for some time on the erection of an arena in New York.

Darcy, who left his native land flat on its back in the midst of war, today picked the battalion he probably will join when he gets ready to do or die for his king and country. Responding to an invitation from Capt. Bobby Kerr, commander of the 205th Sportsmen's battalion at Hamilton, Ont., he said he would be greatly pleased to enter the organization. Tim O'Sullivan backed this by saying he, too, probably would join that battalion.

Kerr a Noted Sprinted.

Kerr won the 200 meter race at the Olympic games when they were last held in England, and for many years has been Canada's champion sprinter. When war broke out he began to organize a battalion composed entirely of men prominent in sports of some sort. Darcy, he believes, would make a fine addition.

Bill Brennan Knocks Out Jack Hubbard in Second

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Bill Brennan, the big Chicago Celt, made short work of Jack Hubbard of Philadelphia in the main bout of the Broadway Sporting club's show tonight, knocking out the Quakertown man in the second round of a scheduled ten round bout. Hubbard, who a short time ago gave Billy Miske a stiff battle, was no match for the big westerner, who went at his opponent with the ferocity of a tiger, knocking him down eight times.

The Westcott Six

The Car for the Entire Family

THE Westcott Sixes are generous, roomy, comfortable cars, with big, spacious compartments fore and aft; wide aisle between front seats; deep, luxurious upholstery and every convenience that could add to the ease and pleasure of the family party en tour.

When Dad drives he can go the limit on speed and do all the stunts that any man can do with any car. The Westcott will always have a reserve of energy that even Dad will not dare to draw upon.

But the man of the house will have no monopoly of the Westcott. Milady can drive it. The daughters can control its giant motor and make it creep or leap, with never a thought of fear and never a moment of worry about complicated mechanical parts.

We have a little book which tells about the Westcott as a Woman's Car. It will repay a careful reading. A copy awaits you.

COUNTRY CLUB GOES FORWARD ON HUGE PLAN

Hope of $400,000 Quarters at Olympia Fields Is No Dream Now.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Perhaps a $400,000 house for a country club may appear a visionary scheme to many, but such is the ultimate aim of the Olympian Fields Country club. When this organization announced its intention of constructing four golf courses, and possibly a fifth for women players, it was considered by many a chimerical project.

Abiding faith in the future of golf, coupled with persistent effort by the little coterie of players that fathered the idea, brought a steady stream of converts, and today the club can boast a membership close to 500, with three courses actually laid out and the first big payment on the 670 acres of land completed.

It undoubtedly is the biggest venture of its kind in the history of sport and another tribute to the "I Will" spirit of Chicago.

A. A. Stagg Again President.

Among those who were impressed by the possibilities of the organization was A. Alonzo Stagg, who was elected president. At the annual meeting held last night at the South Shore Country club the Maroon athletic adviser was reelected, and with an exceptionally strong directorate and a representative board of governors the future of the club is assured. The list of officers follows:

President, A. A. Stagg; first vice president, W. C. Nimmons; second vice president, R. J. McLaughlin; third vice president, J. W. Fulton; fourth vice president, H. D. Critchfield; secretary, Charles Beach; treasurer, Dr. C. L. Frame; board of governors, Everett C. Brown, Frank T. Brown; James P. Gardner, Capt. R. W. Hunt, Lloyd Maxwell, H. R. Newlean, E. E. Petters, F. H. Ralston, C. M. Smalley, W. A. Waide, Harry P. Weber, Lawrence Whiting, C. S. Winston.

As practically 500 members have been secured, it was decided to raise the initiation fee to $100, effective Feb. 1.

Three Courses This Season.

The first golf course, which was temporarily constructed and used last season, has been remodeled by Tom Bendelow of Chicago and William Watson of Los Angeles. Course No. 2 was laid out by Watson, and course No. 3 by Bendelow. The fourth course is being planned by Donald Ross. Efforts will be made to have the first three courses in shape for play this season, and to finish the fourth by the end of the season.

The first section of the clubhouse, a locker wing, will be started early in the spring. This calls for an investment of $30,000. The main building and another wing will be added later. Two large farm buildings are being moved near the site of the permanent clubhouse, and these will be used for temporary locker room quarters.

One hundred and thirty-five members of the South Shore Country club have joined, President Everett C. Brown being among the number. R. J. McLaughlin, second vice president, is president of the Illinois Athletic club.

EVANS-GARDNER BEATEN IN MATCH

Three hundred members of the Union League club saw Jim Donaldson of the Glen View club and Al Lesperance of the Union League club defeat National Champion Charles Evans Jr. and Robert A. Gardner, 1 up, in a four ball match at the gymnasium yesterday.

Distances of the Flossmoor course were used. The putting was done on a strip of new carpet, making it an equal deal for all four players.

Scores:

Evans-Gardner	5	3	4	4	5	3	3	4	4	35
Donaldson-Lesp'ce.	5	3	5	3	5	3	3	3	4	34
Evans-Gardner	4	3	5	3	4	6	5	4	5	39
Donaldson-Lesp'ce.	4	3	6	3	4	5	4	5	5	39

James Brophy, the Cincinnati professional, who for many years has been unable to talk distinctly on account of a defective palate, recently underwent an operation at St. Joseph's hospital. Dr. Truman W. Brophy inserted a silver palate, and Jim was around golf headquarters yesterday, able to talk much better than before.

G. W. PECK HEADS LOCAL SHOOTERS

Three Chicago marksmen have qualified for efficiency medals offered by the American Amateur Trapshooters' association. George W. Peck of the Metropolitan Gun club leads the local winners by breaking into the 90 per cent division. Twenty certified scores of 45 or better in fifty bird races are necessary to qualify in this class. Peck broke 932 of his 1,000 targets, an average of 93.2.

C. A. Hardy of the South Shore Country broke into the medal class in the 85 per cent division. Ten certified counts of 43 are needed. Hardy's total score was 447 and his average for 500 targets was 84.0 per cent.

In the 80 per cent class, which requires ten scores of at least 40 at fifty target events, Dr. J. L. Hooper of the Lincoln Park Gun club won a medal with an average of 86 per cent. He broke 430 of 500 targets. Competition in all divisions was restricted to scores made in regular club shoots.

TABERSKI PLAYS MATURO FOR CUE TITLE THIS WEEK

The first championship cue event of the year is billed for this week, when Frank Taberski of Schenectady, pocket billiard champion, defends his title against the challenge of James Maturo of Kansas City. They will start Wednesday night at Pittsburgh, playing 150 balls each night.

Taberski, since winning the Brunswick emblem from John Layton of Sedalia, has defended it against Ralph Greenleaf of Monmouth, Ill., and Edward I. Ralph of Hightstown, N. J.

Maturo has made several tries for the championship. In 1912 he finished second to Ralph in the tournament at Philadelphia, and in January, 1914, at Seattle he was defeated by Bennie Allen, 600 to 587. In December of the same year at Kansas City Maturo again fell before Champion Allen, 600 to 493.

Chicago League Opens Tomorrow.

Tomorrow night Chicago's most pretentious effort in the three cushion line will be launched when President Charles Le Gros meets Charley Ward in the opening game of the first annual tournament of the Chicago Billiard league at Leffingwell's room. With ten clubs in the circuit and a strong field of players it is expected the league will furnish the three cushion fans with plenty of excitement the next few months.

Former champion Charles Ellis, now representing Smith's arcade at Milwaukee, furnished the fireworks in the Interstate Three Cushion league last week when he defeated Harry Cooler of Indianapolis, 50 to 23, in thirty-seven innings at Milwaukee. This tied the league record, made by himself last March against Frank Jones at Philadelphia.

Moore on Trip This Week.

Shea Wins Mussey Tourney.

James Shea, who won the class A tournament at Mussey's last week, won the final series, in which the three winners in classes A and B competed. He finished with 4 wins and 1 loss, giving him a record of 13 wins in 14 games in the whole event. Charley Ward [47] won second prize by defeating Ehlen [43] in the playoff of their tie. Perry and Lewis tied at 2-3, and Forrest was last, 1-4. This week a team tournament will be started with ten pairs.

KEOGH DEFEATS OTIS.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Jerome R. Keogh of this city tonight defeated Charles Otis of New York in an Interstate Three Cushion Billiard league match, 50 to 36, in 80 innings. High runs: Keogh, 7; Otis, 4.

Otter Wins Shoot Event at Lincoln Park with 49

The regular weekly program of the Lincoln Park Gun club brought out thirty-two shooters. Otter won the feature with 49 targets. A strong southwest wind made it hard to connect with the elusive clays, but good scores were made. Scores:

25 targets, 16 yards rise—H. W. Shroyer, 25; H. Otter, 23; J. A. Rhodes, 24; E. L. Brokaw, 24; G. A. Smith, 23; J. Lino, 23; E. E. Hall, 23; Dr. W. E. Little, 23.

Yale Will Limit Overton to Three or Four Dashes

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 6.—Johnny Overton, Yale's star sprinter, will be allowed to start in only three or four races this winter, according to the Yale faculty in an edict handed down today. Overton's strenuous work last winter is believed to have prompted the action.

Bouts at Crown Tuesday.

Greco-Roman wrestling will be introduced to west siders at the Crown theater, North Ashland and Division street, Tuesday when Renato Gardini, Italian heavyweight champion, tackles Joe Gestout in a finish match. Johnny Meyers, world's middleweight titleholder, and Steve Latchke are down for a finish at the regulation style. Ernest Kartje and Charley Ahlinas meet in a third bout.

Morningstar Beats Opponent Who Poses as Jake Schaefer

BY JOE DAVIS.

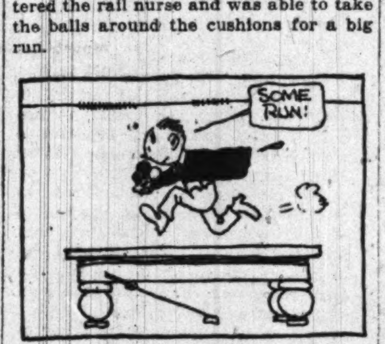
Morningstar's father owned a saloon with a small annex containing two billiard tables. An ordinance was passed forbidding any form of amusement in connection with a saloon and, as that end of the business was more profitable, the billiard tables were covered up, it not being possible for Morningstar even to practice on them.

A former railroad man named McCreery opened a four table room and there the young man who was to become famous in the billiard world did his practicing. At that time he had mastered the rail nurse and was able to take the balls around the cushions for a big run.



McCreery had large lithographs of three players around his rooms and opposite the first table was one of Frank Ives, Jake Schaefer being opposite the second, and George Slosson opposite the third.

It was early springtime and Morningstar, clad in overalls, soft shirt, and wide brimmed hat, had returned to the saloon with a big catch of sunfish. He was seated in a chair when in came McCreery, who by a short cut from the back of his billiard room could easily reach the Morningstar establishment.

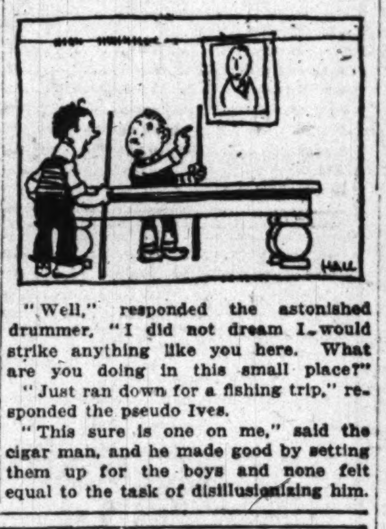
"Jake Schaefer is over at my room," said McCreery, "and already has beaten Henry Lewis and I want you to come over and play him."

Morningstar, who had met both Schaefer and Ives on one of his trips to Chicago, was a little dubious as to the identity of the newcomer, but went over with McCreery. By this time there was quite a crowd in the room.

"Here's a man who will play you," said McCreery to Schaefer, forgetting to mention Morningstar's name. Ora won the bank and soon had the ball on the rail. He turned the corner and had counted up to 36 when Schaefer remarked, "Say, my name is Schaefer, but I am not Jake Schaefer, the billiardist. I am a cigar salesman and thought by playing a little billiards I might make a few sales."

"That's enough," he remarked when Morningstar completed his fifty points.

Then, remembering he had not heard his new opponent's name, he asked: "Who are you?" Without cracking a smile Morningstar answered, "That's my picture over the table there. I am Frank Ives."



"Well," responded the astonished drummer, "I did not dream I would strike anything like you here. What are you doing in this small place?"

"Just ran down for a fishing trip," responded the pseudo Ives.

"This sure is one on me," said the cigar man, and he made good by setting them up for the boys and none felt equal to the task of disillusionizing him.

K. C. Basketball League to Start Season Today

South side councils of the Knights of Columbus have organized a basketball league which will open today with three games. All the league contests will be decided at Normal Arts High school, Sixty-eighth street and Stewart avenue. Today's schedule is: St. Philip Verri council vs. McHale; Englewood vs. Father Perez; Thomas Aquinas vs. Leo XIII. First game called at 1:30 p. m.

Basketball is a new venture in the athletic field for Chicago K. C. organizations, but with a supply of stars from playgrounds and high school floors it is expected to prove successful and eventually take rank with the baseball and indoor league. A schedule has been arranged and play will be conducted just as it is in other K. C. leagues.

Business Men Purchase Racetrack at New Orleans

New Orleans, La., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The Business Men's Racing association has decided to buy the fair grounds race track for $400,000 from the new Louisiana Jockey club. The business men will pay for the track in installments of $25,000. They now own both the Fair grounds and City park, having bought the last named from S. D. "Curley" Brown for $350,000. Owning both tracks the business men will not have to fear any further opposition. The business men will turn City park over to the city of New Orleans for a children's playground.

The secret of the great international success of the modern "Neal Way" is that it DOES MORE for the Drink user in from three to seven days or the Drug user in from seven to fourteen days by the use of harmless vegetable medicines taken by MOUTH ONLY than can be done by the "Old Way" in several WEEKS OR MONTHS. It is more "economical" in both time and money to get a PERMANENT CURE by the modern "Neal Way" than the TEMPORARY effect of frequent trips to mineral springs and "BATHS."

Jack Curry, New Orleans Sportsman, Passes Away

New Orleans, La., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Jack Curry, famous sportsman, who bore the reputation among gamblers of never having tolerated a crooked card or gambling game in his establishment during his whole life, died today after being ill three weeks.

In his younger days Curry associated with several minstrel troupes, and often talked of his associations with Haverly's and other great traveling combinations. He has been keeper of a public bathhouse here six years.

Leroy Campbell to Run in Boston A. A. Contests

Boston, Mass., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The Boston A. A. received a letter from Leroy Campbell of Chicago, the sensational University of Chicago half mile champion, asking to forward entry blanks as it is his desire to compete in the B. A. A. games on Feb. 3. Campbell probably will compete in the 1,000 yard handicap or the hunter mile. Campbell said he has run two or three time trials recently, and on account of his showing is confident that he would have to be reckoned with in either the 1,000 yard or the hunter mile.

A. A. F. MAT MEET ATTRACTS FIELD OF 150 NOVICES

Twenty organizations, represented by 150 grapplers, will meet in the second annual Amateur Athletic federation novice tournament, to be held two nights this week. The preliminaries are scheduled for Tuesday night at Chicago Hebrew institute, with contests in seven weight divisions. The finals are set for Thursday night in West Side Y. M. C. A.

The institute will be represented by the largest number of entrants, thirty-four. Hull house follows with fifteen, Gary Y. M. C. A. with twelve, and the others as follows: Christopher playgrounds, eight; Sinai social center, seven; Northwestern university, six; Blue Bird A. C., five; Homan A. C., five; Cornell square, five; Robey street playgrounds, five; West Side Y. M. C. A., five, and Sears Roebuck Y. M. C. A., four. Several others have entered only one wrestler.

Because of the huge entry list, which exceeds last year's total by thirty-two, and the short time at the disposal of the committee to stage the contests, four mats will be in operation on the preliminary night. All contestants are expected to be weighed in by 7 o'clock and be examined by one of a half a dozen physicians of the institute.

Four referees, all of them well known in the mat game, have been selected by Chairman Harry Berz. They are Ernest Kartje, Ben Reuben, Nick Malloy, and John Nemec.

PURPLE RECORD FOR LAST YEAR PLEASES FANS

Northwestern university students caught the spirit of the annual sport reviews and during the holidays did a little compiling of their own, with the result that stock in Purple athletics seems to be above par. During the year just closed the Purple was runner-up for the conference title in both basketball and football, while in swimming Coach Robinson's men held the Big Nine bunting. Northwestern did not fare so well in baseball and track, but was represented by fair teams.

The present year holds a brighter outlook for the Purple than 1916 in every sport excepting basketball. Football shows prospects of a much stronger team, while in track and baseball Coaches Omer and McGill expect to have teams that will rank in the first division of the conference.

Coach Robinson believes he has another championship aggregation of natators and is even casting his eye eastward with an idea of trying conclusions with some of the Atlantic coast swimmers.

Coach Murphy's basketball tossers will open the season in Patten gymnasium tomorrow night against Wisconsin.

Murphy's five has but one veteran, Capt. Underhill. The rest of the squad, while they have shown development, are inexperienced, and none has yet shown with sufficient glamour to be ranked a star.

Sioux A. C. Names Officers.

The Sioux Athletic club's annual election of officers was held at its clubhouse. The following were chosen: President, Wilfred Le Fond; vice president, Bernard Cunningham; secretary, James Shields; treasurer, Hiram Brown. The Sioux would like to arrange basketball games with any 120-130 pound team in the city. For games call Kedzie 7840 after 6 p. m., or write Bernard Cunningham Jr., 4339 West Park avenue.

Buy Goodyear and You Buy Satisfaction

GOODYEAR
GOOD YEAR
AKRON
Service Station

The aim of the Goodyear factories and the desire of the average tire-buyer meet perfectly in Goodyear Tires.

Both seek the same goal—maximum mileage at minimum cost.

The Goodyear factories work toward this end by putting into their product the best of materials, under the best of methods and the best of manufacturing conditions.

The tire-buyer does his part by paying a price that will allow such selection and construction.

That this price should not appreciably exceed ordinary tire prices is, of course, largely due to Goodyear manufacturing economies — to compact and intensive organization, to expert and effective effort, to the elimination of wastage wherever possible.

But it is also greatly due to the part the average tire-buyer has had in the development of this institution —to his consistent and increasing patronage, which has built up our present tremendous volume.

For great volume is the parent of manufacturing economy.

So both parties who seek high virtue in a motor car tire, maker and buyer, have helped to put it in the Goodyear Tire.

And a third party, until now unmentioned here, has helped as well.

The Goodyear Service Station Dealer.

You will find him in the obscure villages, in the larger towns, in the tremendous cities of America, always within easy reach.

His interest is the same as ours — that you shall have maximum mileage and satisfaction from Goodyear Tires.

His purpose is identical with ours—to hold your business by getting your friendship, by giving you service.

He does it, first, by selling you Goodyear Tires, and second, by helping you care for them.

He is an essential in the Goodyear "greater mileage triangle" of maker, user, dealer.

Go to him the next time you want a tire. He is foregoing extra discounts that he may sell you better tires. He is a good man for you to know and to deal with.

*Of this amount $12,000,000 is a bond issue loan to the Cudahy Packing company.

A PROPOSED remedy for the evils incident to overloaning and overbuilding, including padded leases and fictitious values, was presented at the monthly meeting of the Chicago Real Estate board on Wednesday by the valuation committee of that body. In brief it is that valuations made by this committee be made a basis for bond issue building loans. After a protracted discussion, the matter was referred back to the committee with instructions to obtain the opinion of the attorney of the board as to the right of the committee so to act under the by-laws of the board.

If the opinion is favorable to such action, the committee is to report back at a special meeting of the board with recommendations as to the best form to be used to protect both the board as well as investors.

Doubt as to Procedure.

While it was universally admitted the evils complained of called for the application of some effective remedy both in the interest of real estate securities as well as the entire real estate investment market, particularly apartment and outside business buildings, there was much difference of opinion as to the practicability and propriety of such action, apart from the point raised as to the right of the committee so to act under the by-laws of the board.

As it would be impossible to give in detail the arguments presented pro and con the following expressions of opinion from Harry Goldstine of the committee, who brought the matter before the meeting, and Edgar M. Snow, who opposed the proposed plan, may prove interesting:

Statement by Goldstine.

After calling attention to the evils in question and the benefits which would come to the real estate interests by their elimination, and to the point raised against the proposed plan that it is impossible and inadvisable to make a valuation on a building in accordance with the plans and specifications where the building is not erected, which he terms fallacious, Mr. Goldstine says:

"The majority of the members of the committee feel they are competent to value the land and building for its best use, and if there is any doubt it is a simple matter to call in the services of an expert builder to consult as to the cost of the structure.

Certificate of Value.

"It is proposed to make the valuation certificate read plainly that it has its value when the building is constructed in accordance with the plans and specifications on file in the offices of the board, and, as a further precaution, it may be deemed wise to have the loaning company file with the board a certificate of conformity when the building is completed that it is constructed in accordance substantially with the plans and specifications.

"I believe it to be the duty of the board to shoulder the responsibility which now faces it, and at least try to work out a solution of this fast multiplying, unhealthy condition. If this experiment proves successful, and I believe it will, the time is not distant when it will be as necessary to back up a real estate loan with a committee valuation as it is with a guarantee of the title."

Mr. Snow's Contentions.

After a reference to the points made by those favoring the plan, Mr. Snow said:

"In my opinion there are so many contingencies involved in connection with building loans that no adequate safeguard can be provided whereby an unscrupulous person obtaining such a valuation from the committee might not use it to the detriment of the bond buyer.

"The point was made at the board meeting that some buildings might never be erected according to the plans and specifications submitted to the committee, and that the public would be inclined to be influenced in the purchase of such securities merely by the valuation of the committee, published by the seller of the security, without further looking into the qualifications provided in the written valuation.

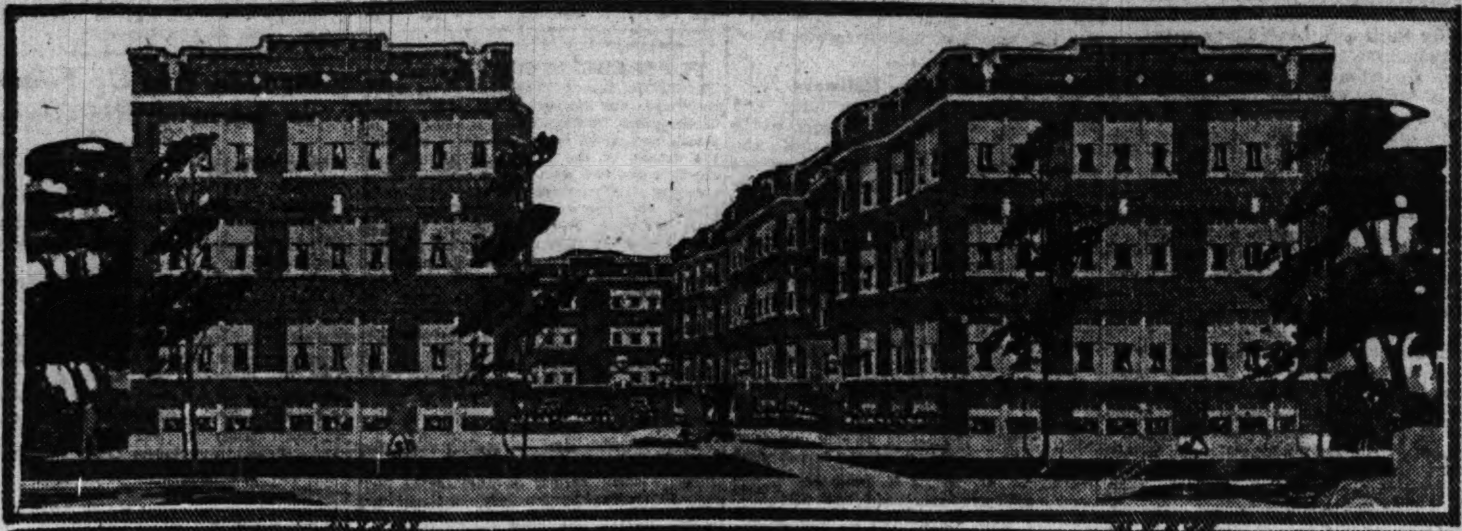
"I am satisfied that the more conservative and experienced element of the board look upon it as a most questionable experiment on the part of that organization, fraught with danger to its prestige as well as those investors who may rely upon its name as a safeguard against possible loss."

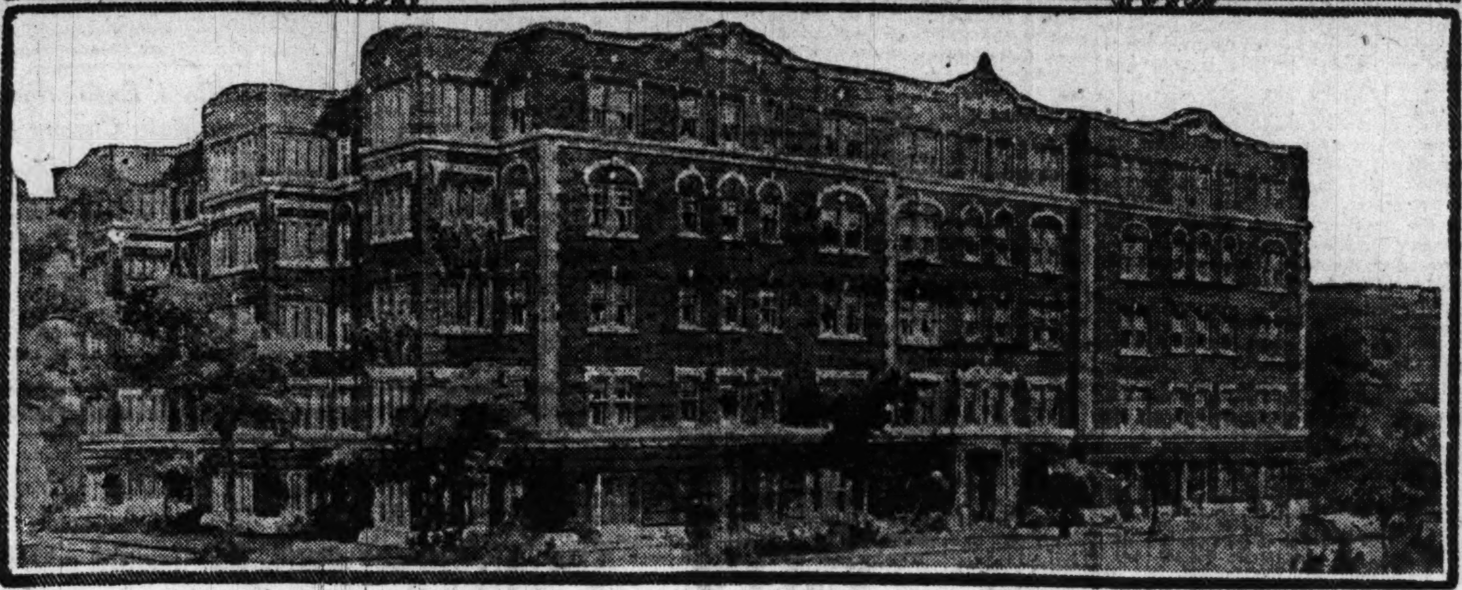
Buys Land in Galt Avenue.

James A. [illegible], who has been operating extensively in north shore property, has purchased from A. T. Galt the vacant land in Galt avenue, 180 feet east of [illegible] street, south front, 180x125, for [illegible], giving back a purchase money note for [illegible].

THE ROSTANG—THE HIGHLANDS

New Apartment Building Just Completed, and Apartment Hotel, with Chinese Open Air Garden, Now Being Finished.





The new Rostang apartment building now completed at 925-35 Cornelia avenue, between Rokeby street and Wilton avenue, is the latest and in some respects the most notable of the new row of apartment buildings under construction on Cornelia avenue. It was designed by B. J. Bruns and will contain thirty-six apartments of three, four, and five rooms, each with sun parlors, in-a-door beds, and kitchen cabinets. The building was constructed for Thomas Rose and H. A. Stange at a cost of $125,000.

Charles F. Henry, a north side builder, is just completing the Highlands apartment hotel [shown below] at the southeast corner of Greenview and Birchwood avenues. It will occupy a lot 150 feet on Greenview and 100 feet on Birchwood avenue, is five stories high, and strictly fireproof. It is colonial in design. The apartments are of one, two, three, and four rooms, each with kitchen and connecting bathroom and dressing closet. On the main floor there will be a lounge, reception room, ladies' parlor, ballroom, and dining room. A feature will be a Chinese open air summer garden. The ground and improvements are said to represent an investment of over $300,000.

AGREE TO ERECT MILL STRUCTURE

McCormick Heirs to Construct Building for Currier-Lee Co.

Two important building projects were reported late in the week. In one of these the McCormick estate is to build for the Currier-Lee company a seven story heavy mill constructed building to cost $140,000 on the estate's remaining vacant land in Erie street west of Orleans street. The building will occupy 128x100 feet of ground about 200 feet west of Orleans street and will contain 100,000 square feet of floor space. It has been leased to the Currier-Lee company for twenty years at a total net rent of $300,000. Ballard, Rowe & Whitman represented all parties.

S. I. Cooper to Build.

S. I. Cooper of S. I. Cooper & Co. will erect an apartment building to contain fifty-one apartments of two, three, and four rooms on 150v189 feet at the southwest corner of Central avenue and Fulton street, Austin, which he has just purchased from Mrs. Anna F. Kahl for a reported figure of $24,500. The front part of the English basement will be divided into social rooms and maid quarters. The total investment, including the land, will approximate $210,000. Both parties were represented by Seymour Marks, who will manage the property.

Erect Two Apartments.

George C. Bour & Co. sold for Joseph D. Wood to John R. Johnston the 80x134 feet, west front, in Euclid avenue, between Seventy-first and Seventy-second streets, for a reported consideration of $5,000. It is stated the purchaser will improve with two high grade three apartment buildings to cost about $15,000 each.

John Hewitt Buys More South Side Property

In addition to the five parcels acquired by John Hewitt on Wabash avenue, which have been filed for record during the last two weeks, he also has purchased from Anna Manvel of Washington, D. C., the southwest corner of Fifty-first street, 50x160 feet, and the southeast corner of the same streets, 99x160 feet, consideration nominal. He also has acquired from William O. Johnson the vacant 50x160 feet, 250 feet south of Forty-eighth street, adjoining the property which he purchased from Mrs. Rutter of New York. Sherman & Winefield were the brokers.

Foundry Company Gets Site for New Building

The Reder Foundry company has purchased from J. G. Moore and the estate of H. J. Moore of Houston, Pa., 36,000 square feet southeast corner of Oakley avenue and Thirty-fifth place, back to the Chicago and Alton railway, for $9,000, and will erect a foundry to cost $50,000. Robert B. Smith represented the Moore estate and Callistus S. Ennis & Co. the foundry company.

Wells-Fargo Co. Buys Land to Erect Garage

Wells, Fargo & Co. have taken title to 72x108 feet in Fifth avenue, 388 feet south of Polk street, west front, which was acquired some time ago, title at that time having been taken by the First Trust and Savings bank. This adjoins the large warehouse of the company, which will erect on the plot purchased a ten story warehouse and garage.

James J. Parker Quits J. Grafton Parker Firm

It is announced that James J. Parker has resigned his partnership in the firm of J. Grafton Parker & Co. Mr. Parker, who has had entire charge of the sale of the residence properties since his connection with the firm, will retain the offices now occupied by J. Grafton Parker & Co., 69 West Washington street. The business will be conducted under the name of James J. Parker & Co. Ralph C. Hefter, who for the last five years has been connected with the firm of Mark Levy & Bro., is now associated with Hool & Goodman and will continue the renting and selling of business properties.

A. R. Barnes Acquires Tract of Fifteen Acres

Albert R. Barnes has purchased from the Fuller & Warren company of Troy, N. Y., fifteen acres on the north side of West Nineteenth street, running from Lombard avenue to Ridgeland avenue, reported price about $24,000, or $1,600 an acre. The sale was negotiated by William A. Bond & Co., who will subdivide and place the property on the market. Lombard avenue is the present terminus of the Douglas Park branch of the elevated railroad, but it is to be extended in the near future into Berwyn.

President Surghnor Picks Committees for the Year

President Surghnor of the Chicago real estate board named the special committees of the board for the coming year at Wednesday's meeting. Preston M. Nolan is chairman of the house committee, Joseph K. Brittain of the national and state organization committee, Adam Lang building ordinances, and Frederick S. Oliver railway terminal and rapid transit. He reappointed the committees on legal forms, harbor and river improvement, zone committee, and good roads committee.

New Officers Installed by Cook County Board

The Cook county real estate board at its annual meeting Tuesday evening installed its new officers: Paul Kraemer, president; Mark Levy, vice president; John P. Carney, secretary; Emil J. Dirks, treasurer. The board now has a membership of 1,407, made up of 669 active members, 511 associate members, class A 65, comprising insurance agents and brokers; class B, composed of lawyers, and 18 real estate owners. There were 207 new members enrolled during the year.

PROPERTY ON OUTSIDE MOVES

Week's Transfers Make Better Showing—West Side Has $150,000 Sale.

Outside business property made a somewhat better showing last week than during the previous one.

A notable deal in west side business property made a matter of record was the sale by George E. Spry to Frederick W. Matthiessen of La Salle, Ill., of the property in West Van Buren street, 325 feet east of Aberdeen street, lot 78x167 feet, north front, improved with a seven story and basement building erected two years ago at a cost of about $150,000. The sale is subject to incumbrances, amount not named, and to a lease to Strauss Bros., expiring Dec. 31, 1929.

William H. Lewis, vice president of the F. J. Lewis Manufacturing company, bought from the United States Gypsum company the property at the southwest corner of Robey street and the Burlington tracks, 318x366 feet, for an expressed consideration of $70,000. A part of the property is improved with a three story warehouse, a part of which is occupied by the purchasing company.

Get Big Warehouse.

In another transaction in that general neighborhood Kate B. and Lucy M. Buckingham have acquired from F. A. Brown and others the warehouse property at the northwest corner of West Harrison and Desplaines streets, 50x112 feet, a nominal consideration being given.

The store and flat property in Milwaukee avenue, 240 feet southeast of Wood street, south front, lot 72x100 feet, has been sold by Frank Rabinovich and others to Irma B. Cahn for $10,000, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000.

Another transaction covered the property at the northeast corner of Fisk and Twenty-second streets, 190x200 feet, which was purchased by the D. W. Baird Lumber company from Anna Kumner for an expressed consideration of $50,000. The Baird company is now occupying the property.

Buys Brick Stores.

A. W. Hannah has sold to Barney Goldstein the property at 3348-52 Lawrence avenue, near Kimball avenue, 50x125 feet, improved with a building containing three one story brick stores, for a reported consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $13,000. Gordon, Lapin & Co. represented both parties.

The Lion Varnish company has acquired by quitclaim from Karel De Leeuw the 230x85x250 feet in Crawford avenue, 133 feet north of Palmer avenue. Consideration nominal.

G. H. Shank to Build Four Story Warehouse

George H. Shank, who has purchased from the Union Stockyards and Transit company the vacant plot, 196x104 feet, in Federal street, ninety-nine feet north of Fortieth street, east front, will improve it with a four story warehouse to cost $150,000, to be occupied by the Advance Fireproof Warehouse and Van company for storage purposes. Mr. Shank made a loan some time ago on this property of $85,000, with interest at 6 per cent.

Protest Central Avenue Boulevard.

The Chicago real estate board at its monthly meeting adopted a resolution, presented by Albert F. Keeney, protesting against the boulevarding of any part of Central [Fifty-sixth] avenue, now being considered by the city council. It is a section line.

Real Estate Transfers.

There were filed for record yesterday 226 transfers, distributed as follows:

SEVERAL DEALS IN VACANT LOTS ARE REPORTED

Several interesting transactions in vacant property are reported, in one of which Frank A. Case of Sears, Roebuck & Co. purchased from William G. McBroom, vice president of the First National bank of Geneseo, Ill., the vacant frontage of 387 feet in North Clark street, at the northwest corner of Howard street, extending west to the Chicago and Northwestern railway, price withheld. The purchaser has given back a trust deed to secure a part purchase mortgage of $27,000. It is said that the Chicago, Fox Lake and Northern Interurban railroad is seeking a part of this tract for a terminal. E. Orris Hart & Co. represented Mr. McBroom, while Mr. Case was represented by Edwin G. Reilhen.

Record was made of the purchase by William F. Whitman from Emma B. Sherwood of a tract of five acres in Newhall ravine, between Sheridan road and the lake in Glencoe, for an expressed consideration of $37,500, subject ton an incumbrance of $15,000. It is understood Mr. Whitman plans to improve eventually with a handsome country home.

Record also was made of the purchase by Samuel Hutchinson from Edward Hines of the vacant 75x198 feet, west front, in Sheridan road, 146 feet south of Rosemont avenue, adjoining Mr. Hutchinson's home. It gives him 150 feet frontage.

The Fifty-ninth Street Lumber company has purchased from the South Side Lumber company 268x262 feet, south front, in Fifty-ninth street, between Lowe avenue and Wallace street, price not disclosed.

A. Murray Turner of Hammond, Ind., has acquired from Niels Nielsen a tract of acres comprising 1,320x1,320 feet, northeast corner of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street and Avenue O, and other property for an indicated price of $10,500, subject to $15,000.

HEAVY DEALING IN APARTMENTS AT BIG FIGURES

La Salle Building in Kenwood Avenue Among Many Large Transactions of Week.

Transactions in apartment house property made up the bulk of the week's business, although there were a number of highly interesting deals represented, notably the sale of the Chapin property at Goethe and Stone streets, which is to become the site of a colony of handsome residences to be erected by prominent Chicago men. There also was a fair movement of outside business property, but manufacturing property did not cut the conspicuous figure it has recently.

Transactions in apartment buildings were numerous and included an unusual number of large deals. Conspicuous among these was the sale by Keidel & Moran, the builders, to Hyman S. Flaxman of the La Salle building at the northwest corner of Fifty-third street and Kenwood avenue, lot 150x100 feet. The building, which was erected only two years ago, contains six stores and thirty-one apartments. The reported consideration was $165,000, subject to a bond issue loan of $76,00. The apartments contain one, two, and four rooms, and the building is said to have a gross annual rental of over $18,000. Five parcels on Ashland avenue, having a total value of $57,500, were given in part payment. L. J. Bliss of Mark Levy & Brother was the broker.

Twenty-four Flat Building.

William H. Barry sold to Rose Faraco the new high grade twenty-four flat building, lot 100x150 feet, on the southeast corner of Michigan avenue and Forty-second street for a reported consideration of $150,000, subject to $72,500; also to the same grantee the twenty-four apartment building on the southwest corner of Sixty-fifth place and Blackstone avenue for a reported consideration of $100,000, subject to $41,000, the purchaser taking in exchange a farm of 1,280 acres near Rensselaer, Ind., improved with thirty sets of building, at a valuation of $192,000. George W. Stewart represented both parties.

William Hill has sold to Elizabeth Burns the new eighteen flat building on the southeast corner of Sixty-first and Laflin street for a reported consideration of $70,000, subject to $36,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed five stores and four flats on 66x125 feet at the southeast corner of Irving Park boulevard and Forty-fourth avenue, subject to $14,000 incumbrance, and other property. H. G. Howard & Co. were the brokers.

Twelve Flat Building.

The twelve flat building, northeast corner Wayne and Rosemont avenues, has been sold by Fellows Jones to Nicholas Kalteux at a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to $30,000. Roy E. Knauer & Co. represented both parties.

George W. Ballard sold to Charles F. Hunt the high grade six flat building at 910-12 Glengyle place, 60x140 feet, for a reported consideration of $42,000, subject to $24,000. J. M. Hammer of Spelz & Walson was the broker.

The fifteen flat building at 3515-25 West Fifteenth street at the corner of Clifton Park avenue has been sold by C. J. Croff to Charles Mangold for a reported consideration of about $35,000, subject to $18,500, frame improvements being conveyed in part payment. Gallagher & Fendl and J. C. Ficklin were the brokers.

Big North Side Deal.

In a big north side deal closed late in the week Robert M. McNair sold to E. H. Uhl the high grade fifteen apartment building on 80x144 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Magnolia avenue and Montrose boulevard, subject to an incumbrance of $37,000, and the high grade eighteen apartment building at the northeast corner of Malden avenue and Montrose boulevard, lot 105x150 feet, subject to an incumbrance of $45,000. The combined annual gross rental of the two buildings is stated to be about $17,000.

A tract of land at Winthrop Harbor aggregating 184 acres was conveyed for the equity in the buildings. W. H. Mulholand & Co. in connection with McGuire & Orr were the brokers.

M. D. Harris Buys Flats.

Thomas A. Collins et al. sold to Morton D. Harris the high grade six flat of seven rooms, lot 52½x150 feet, at 5836-38 Harper avenue for $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $22,000, vacant land valued at $12,000 being given in part payment. George C. Bour & Co. were the brokers.

Ellsworth T. Martin has sold to David Levi the sixteen flat building of four and five rooms at 6033-39 South State street for a reported $35,000, subject to $15,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment the property at the southwest corner of Paulina and Congress streets, subject to $6,000, and $7,000 in cash. Both parties were represented by John F. Graham of Oak Park.

F. B. Malcolm has sold to E. P. Clarage the six flat building, 3217 Washington boulevard, reported price $36,000. The property is said to yield a yearly rental of $5,200. A. L. Powers of W. F. Kaiser & Co. negotiated the transaction.

Mrs. Eleanor B. Savoie has purchased from Murray Wolbach the six apartment building, 5638-40 Calumet avenue, 50x160, stated price $27,000, subject to $20,000, giving in part payment the vacant, 97x121, northeast corner of Seventy-fifth and Euclid avenue. The gross annual rental of the apartment house is said to be $8,240. James Adams negotiated the transaction.

The apartment house property at the southwest corner of Yale avenue and Sixty-sixth street, lot 50x187 feet, has been purchased by William C. Carr from E. H. Johnson, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $37,500.

Leases and Loans.

IN a review of the sales, ground leases, and loans in the central business district during 1916 R. D. Hill & Co. say:

"The loan market during the year 1916, while showing a larger number of loans made in the central district, there being 83 against 62 last year, has not produced an aggregate amount of business much in excess of 1915. The bulk of the business has been at 4½ per cent, although numerically it has been divided between that rate and 5 per cent.

"While the rate of interest at the present time is 4½ per cent for the best downtown business, there has been up to the last thirty days quite an indication of softening in the rate, suggesting a posible return to the old rate of 4 to 4½ per cent. If the termination of the great war should come by July, 1917, with it undoubtedly would come a wide expansion of buying of central real estate in Chicago, and we look for large increase in the aggregate amount of mortgage business incident to an increased demand for downtown property.

"Money at present can be obtained in large amounts at 4½ per cent, and at this rate we believe liberal options of repayment can be included in the contract, which would put the obligation at the call of the borrower at interest periods after two years on reasonable notice."

An important lease in the downtown district was that in which Willis & Frankenstein leased for Edgar A. Buzzell to the Tucker-Kenworthy company the third, fourth, and fifth floors of the building at 501-505 South La Salle street, containing 30,000 square feet, for a term rent from May 1 next of $98,000.

Ballard, Rowe & Whitman have leased for the Potter Palmer estate, through Oliver & Co., to the Simons Motor Car company the display room at 2207 South Michigan avenue for five years at a term rent of $21,600.

They have also leased for Harry Branstetter to the Packard Motor Car company the new garage at 4357 South Wabash avenue, 100x162 feet, at an annual rental of $5,250.

Abe Sackin has leased to Dan Theodore the store at the northwest corner of Twenty-sixth street and Crawford avenue for a term from Jan. 1, 1917, to May 1, 1925, at a term rent of $12,500.

The Lambert Tree estate has leased to the H. Walter Brown company the four story and basement building at 160-162 West Lake street for five years from May 1 next.

Recorder's Office Shows Good Beginning for 1917

The new year is making a glad beginning, according to the figures given out by Recorder Joseph F. Haas. There were filed for record last week a total of 931 transfers, of which eighty-five were under the Torrens system, with a total stated consideration of $1,492,073, as against 786 for the corresponding week in 1916, including sixty-one under the Torrens system, with a stated consideration of $1,068,526. The recording of a loan of $12,000,000 to the Cudahy Packing company is responsible for the big total of trust deeds.

Property Quitclaimed to Mrs. Bass.

The Western News company has quitclaimed to Clara F. Bass its interest in the property in West Madison street, 140 feet east of South Franklin street, 46x180¾, consideration nominal. Mrs. Bass owns the land.

HANDSOME GROUP OF NEW HOMES IN GOETHE STREET

Chapin Property Transaction Reveals Plan for Residence Colony Near the Drive.

The most important feature of the week's market was the closing of the deal involving the establishment of another small colony of handsome private residences in the exclusive district on the north side between Astor street and the Lake Shore drive.

An additional interest is imparted to the transaction by the fact they will occupy the Chapin property at 61 East Goethe street, at the southwest corner of Goethe and Stone streets, where report a short time ago had located two big apartment buildings of the cooperative character, one of which was to be the owners' building to be occupied by the eight owners of the two buildings and the other the lessee building, which was expected to produce sufficient revenue to pay for the entire expense of running the two buildings.

Deal Falls Through.

This deal fell through, however, and in another one closed last week by Paul Steinbrecher & Co. the property has been sold by Mrs. Charles A. Chapin to George A. McKinlock, Francis C. Farwell, and Arthur L. Farwell. The property, which fronts 178 feet, with a depth of 130 feet, is bounded on the west by the "little park" at the southeast corner of Astor and Goethe streets.

It was the only piece of vacant property that was available in the district north of Division street and east of Astor street and is improved with the Chapin house, formerly the W. C. Goudy residence, one of the residential landmarks in that exclusive residential district.

Will Be Torn Down.

It will be torn down to make place for the first installment of two residences to be erected by Mr. McKinlock and Francis C. Farwell, the designs of which are to be prepared by J. Gamble Rogers of New York and formerly of Chicago. The east seventy feet of the property will be occupied by these two residences, while the west 108 feet, it is announced, has been sold to men prominent in the business and social life of Chicago whose names for the present are withheld, and also will be improved with three exceedingly attractive residences, the whole to constitute one of the most important developments in the way of high class residential construction in recent years.

The price paid Mrs. Chapin for the property is withheld, but it is said to have been held at $140,000, and the actual price is said to have been close to these figures.

Bulls carried the day in the wheat pit yesterday, the market starting out sharply higher and increasing in strength later. Some reaction occurred near the close under free realizing sales, but May finished 4⅛c higher for the day, while new crop months were up 2½@3c. Buying was heavy and quite general in character and was stimulated principally by the warlike message of the kaiser to his troops, as well as by President Wilson's statement that he had decided to send a new note on peace. The fact that both the gulf and seaboard reported more tonnage available for shipment of grain also influenced the trade.

No export business was reported, but bids were said to be on a firm basis. The seaboard intimated that the foreign governments had already purchased large quantities of grain.

Longs Reinstate Lines.

Many of the local longs who recently disposed of their wheat were reinstating lines yesterday, and the character of the buying was best in some time. Some of the strong houses also sold wheat around top levels. The movement of wheat from the country continued to be on a moderate scale and receipts at primary markets yesterday totaled 834,000 bu, against 1,543,000 bu a year ago. Kansas and Nebraska are still without much snow covering and colder weather is promised for all of this territory. Eastern sections of the winter wheat belt have had fairly good moisture in the last day or so.

Liverpool spot wheat was nominal, offerings being light. Broomhall says Manitoba and winter wheat cargoes are in increasing demand, but are sparingly offered. Australia shipped 1,600,000 bu wheat this week, against 1,032,000 bu a year ago, while India exported only 152,000 bu, against 16,000 bu a year ago. Clearances from the seaboard were again liberal at 1,400,000 bu, against 1,147,000 bu a year ago.

Foreign Buying of Corn.

May corn reached $1.00 yesterday, the best price on the crop and highest in many years for this delivery. The market was strong from start to finish, although receding moderately toward the end under profit taking sales. Net advances of 1¼@1⅝c for the day were shown. Foreigners were credited with purchasing corn futures on a large scale and there were also rumors of big export sales. Farmers are reported as willing to part with their corn at present prices and sales to arrive were said to be large. On the other hand, the shipping demand was reported equal to any increase in the interior offerings.

Cash corn was 1½@2c higher, with shipping sales reported as 15,000 bu here. Clearances from the seaboard were fair at 112,000 bu. Local corn receipts this week were 2,381,000 bu, while 506,000 bu were shipped. Liverpool spot corn was unchanged. Primary receipts totaled 1,107,000 bu, against 1,093,000 bu a year ago.

Oats Make Good Gain.

Oats were higher with wheat and corn, final figures showing net gains of 1@1⅛c. Commission and cash houses were buying oats on a liberal scale, while the offerings were light. Country offerings of oats to arrive were said to be most liberal in some time, but a corresponding increase in shipping demand was also claimed. Cash oats were 1@1½c higher, with local shipping sales 105,000 bu. Clearances from the seaboard were small at 55,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 605,000 bu, against 441,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 1,250,000 bu, while 633,000 bu were shipped.

Provisions were strong and closed around best figures. The market was helped by the strength in grains and higher prices for hogs at the yards, and shorts covered freely. There was also good buying of an investment character and the liberal realizing sales were easily absorbed. Cash trade still reported as slow. Western markets received 607,300 hogs this weeg, against 641,000 last week and 978,000 a year ago. Liverpool spot lard was 1s 3d higher, bacon 6d@2s higher, and hams 1s higher. Local meat shipments for the week were 15,125,000 lbs, against 19,517,000 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 5,536,000 lbs, against 9,783,000 lbs last year.

Rye Quiet but Firm.

Rye was firm, with No. 2 quoted $1.46 nominal and No. 3 selling at $1.40. Receipts were 4 cars.

Barley ruled 2c higher. Malting was quoted $1.09@1.32 and sold $1.10@1.30; feed and mixing quotable $1.00@1.07 and sold $1.02; screenings were quoted 50c@$1.00 and skimmings 70@75c, with no sales reported. Receipts, 12 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet. March, $5.80 bid and $6.20 asked; cash lots sold $3.00@4.80. Cloverseed held steady, with cash quoted $12.00@17.00.

Flaxseed closed 1¼c higher, with cash quoted $2.84@2.88½ nominal; Duluth was ¼@2c; Minneapolis, 1¼c, and Winnipeg, 1¼c higher respectively.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

The action of the wheat market yesterday indicated that the heavy selling of futures on Friday had been absorbed by strong interests. Commission houses were good buyers yesterday and there was not much pressure except from profit taking. The fact that there is no difficulty in selling any wheat offered to foreigners is the main bullish factor, with the continued advancing tendency in premiums. Little wheat is being offered from the country, and with larger clearances it is expected the visible will show rapid decreases. The fact that old No. 2 hard is steadily advancing in price relative to the May reflects the demand for all kinds of wheat with milling needs increasing. Mills are obliged to compete with the export buying, agents for the allies setting the pace in making prices.

Old No. 2 hard wheat sold yesterday at 2@6c under May in store. Mills are understood to have bought considerable of this wheat recently, and with othsr wheat selling at such high premiums the old wheat is likely to find a broader market. Local sales reported were small at 5,000 and the export demand was not quite so keen as recently, although the bids for No. 2 hard were 21c over Chicago May track Baltimore, the highest basis so far. According to seaboard reports, foreign buying agents are taking all the wheat offered. There have been liberal sales of Duluth No. 1 northern recently from Buffalo and gulf wheat has been taken freely.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 31 cars; corn, 103 cars; oats, 104 cars; rye, 4 cars; barley, 12 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 62,000 head, and for all next week, 275,000 head.

May corn was quoted officially yesterday at $1.00. A few days ago it was reported on the curb as selling at $1.00, but the top official quotation that day was 99⅝c. The price of $1.00 has not been reached before since the Coster-Martin deal in 1892, when there was a corner in May corn, the price being forced up to the dollar mark, with a subsequent smash to 50c when the corner collapsed. W. H. Martin, who was one of the firm that ran the corner in 1892, has been a heavy operator in grains the last few years, and is credited with being one of the big winners recently.

It is understood that there are enough boats now at gulf ports to take the bulk of the grain in store at Galveston and New Orleans. Yesterday's clearances from the gulf were 616,000 bu. It is expected Baltimore clearances will be heavier the coming week. There is supposed to be an enormous amount of grains in transit and on tracks around the eastern ports, which will require some time to be loaded out. So far there has been little relief to traffic conditions east of Chicago, but with more liberal clearances this condition will be gradually remedied.

Buying of corn, supposed to be for foreign account, has been conspicuous for several days, and yesterday it was claimed there was buying of over 1,000,000 bu May corn for foreigners. This buying has served to tighten up the market materially.

George E. Marcy, president of the Armour Grain company, returned from an eastern trip yesterday. He found the buying demand for grains urgent, with buyers not inclined to haggle over prices.

W. A. Gardner left for St. Louis last night to attend the inauguration of his brother, Col. F. D. Gardner, as governor of Missouri.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 30,000 bu for one day.

No. 2 hard wheat at Kansas City sold at $1.95 yesterday.

METALS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The copper market has continued unsettled during the last week, with business quiet. The larger agencies have been practically out of the market, and have not reduced their asking price of around 32.50c for the third quarter, which is, of course, entirely nominal. Resellers, however, have offered nearby copper at further concessions, quotations ranging around 28.00@28.50c for electrolytic, while it was rumored today that a small lot of March was available as low as 27.00c. Iron was unchanged.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 6.—LEAD—Dull, at $7.50@7.75. SPELTER—Dull, at $9.75.

DRY GOODS.

New York, Jan. 6.—Cotton goods closed the week steadier. Yarns were quiet and irregular. Burlaps for future delivery were firm. Linens also were firm. Knit goods were quiet with requests numerous for delivery on past orders. Wool goods were firm.

Why Railroads Lack Equipment.

The 1,200,000 or more holders of railway securities in the United States who thus far have refused to organize and protect their property can feel a little grim satisfaction over the present situation. Their railroads, though working to capacity, cannot handle the business offered and are compelled to declare temporary embargoes on various classes of freight so that accumulations may be cleared away. The general business of the country is impeded by these embargoes.

The difficulty is due principally to lack of locomotives and cars, and they are wanting merely because the railways were half strangled two or three years ago by combined government and state regulation. Locomotives and cars could be bought then at comparatively low prices. Railway managers were certain that within a very few years much equipment would have to be acquired, and probably at higher prices. The advantage of making purchases at that time were obvious, but how could a railway buy cars for the future when it was not allowed to earn interest and dividends for the present?

Applications for permission to raise rates had been refused, or delayed indefinitely, and taxes were increased. A number of roads were forced into bankruptcy. The result of these difficulties of two years ago is that now, when traffic is the heaviest in the history of the country, facilities for moving it are limited. And this is only a sample of the inevitable consequences of such a policy. Peak loads of traffic come every few years. The next one may not only find the roads with insufficient equipment but the country with not enough railways. If investors are allowed a fair return in good times only and their property is put in peril or ruined in periods of depression, they will refuse to furnish money to build new lines.

Owners of railway stocks and bonds are vitally interested in this matter and they now have an opportunity to start an effective "campaign of education" for the benefit of their investments.

City and Connecting Railways.

M. A. B.—The Chicago City and Connecting railways is a trust which owns most of the stock of the Chicago City railways, all that of the Calumet and South Chicago, and various stocks and bonds of other south end lines. These securities are all pledged under $21,790,000 of City and Connecting railways bonds. Dividends received go first to pay bond interest and any surplus goes for dividends on the 250,000 preferred and 150,000 common participation certificates of the trust. The preferred is entitled to $4.50 a share cumulative before common receives anything. Formerly full dividends were paid on preferred and $2 a year on common. Then dividends on the common stopped and payments on preferred were reduced. In the last year street car earnings have increased and the City railway paid 1¼ per cent extra in December, making 9¼ for the year. This enabled the City and Connecting railways to declare a semi-annual dividend of $2.25, payable on preferred certificates Jan. 1. There are still $4.75 of back dividends unpaid. Future payments depend solely on earnings of the surface lines. They fluctuate within narrow limits as general business conditions vary.

United States Gypsum.

E. H. W.—The United States Gypsum company makes public its annual reports only. Last year it issued $1,500,000 of new preferred stock, offering it at par to stockholders. The plan was to use the proceeds for additions and improvements. The question whether these improvements have increased earnings as expected will be answered when the report for 1916 is issued. The few remaining first mortgage bonds were called and paid at 105 last September. There is an issue of $1,200,000 of notes maturing April 15 next. Back dividends on preferred were adjusted by a distribution of 43 per cent in common stock over a year ago and regular 7 per cent cash dividends have been paid since. There has been no distribution on common.

Stock Fully Paid For.

W. H. W.—The stock that you had paid for in full, but which was still in the possession of your New York broker when he failed, is legally yours. However, the probability is that the broker had illegally used your stock as collateral and that you will be unable to recover it. He has been arrested, charged with fraud. It is said that the receiver found but $100 of assets in his office.

Brief Answer

J. J. H.—The Tennessee Copper and Chemical corporation will have twice as many shares as the Tennessee Copper company. Each holder of a share in the latter will receive one of the former in exchange and he will have the right to buy one share at $16. With the new stock selling "when issued" at $15.50, the old is worth $15.

S. C.—Hecla stock is highly speculative. The company produces lead and war prices for that metal make dividends of 60 per cent a month possible. When the price of lead declines dividends will drop.

To Careful Investors

We are now offering, subject to prior sale, the remaining portion of the $400,000 issue of 7% preferred stock at par in the Mandel Corporation with a bonus of 50% in common stock. Par value $10 per share.

You are invited to visit our factories and to fully investigate the following statements before you decide:

The investment represents about $600,000 in net assets, not including patents, trade names, good will, etc

We operate three factories at Chicago, Forest Park and Benton Harbor, Mich., making special patented cameras, photo paper and high grade phonographs. These plants are now considerably behind on orders.

In 1907 the net profits were a little over $9,000.00. Last year they were over $92,000.00—an increase of about 1,000%. This year's profits are estimated at over $ 0,000.00, which would earn on the common stock over 35%, in addition to the 7% on the preferred.

Every statement made here will be proved to the satisfaction of prospective investors. Our plants and our records are open for inspection. Those who cannot visit our plants should write for prospectus and information.

WANTED

General Works Manager and Factory Executive

SOMEWHERE in America there is a factory executive—a general works manager—who is doing big things. He is now the executive head of a manufacturing organization of not less than one thousand people, manufacturing machines requiring close, accurate work on interchangeable parts, such as adding machines, typewriters, etc.

¶ He shoulders responsibilities. He knows the hows, whys and wherefores of skillful manufacturing—all the little short cuts and fine points. He knows how to develop and maintain high production. He knows how to keep down manufacturer's costs. He knows how and where to get men, machinery and materials. He is more than an engineer. He is more than an efficiency expert. He is more than an executive. He is a rare combination of all three and, in addition, a rabid economist.

¶ We realize there are not many who will answer this description, but somewhere there is at least one—possibly several. We want such a man to take complete charge of our big and rapidly growing factory.

¶ This is an extraordinary position. It offers extraordinary opportunities. Only an extraordinary general works manager with an unimpeachable record of results and achievements can hope to qualify.

¶ Write fully. The man we want cannot tell what he has done on a half page. State age, describe experience fully, references, send photograph, and say how soon you could arrange to come with us. All applications treated in strictest confidence. No inquiries made without your consent.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The plethora of money continues, but discount rates were a shade harder today. The stock market was quiet and steady and, apart from speculation regarding the details of the new loan, dealers were chiefly concerned with further calling to the colors of eligibles from their already depleted staffs. Business was confined to the old war loan, exchequer bonds, Chinese bonds, home rails, and a few gold mines at steady prices. American securities were uncertain and lower in sympathy with Wall street.

Bar silver, 36½d per ounce. Money, 3½ per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 5@5¼ per cent; three months, 5¼@5¾ per cent.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—Prices were firm on the bourse today. Rentes, 62 francs. Exchange on London, 27 francs 31½ centimes. Five per cent loan, 88 francs 40 centimes.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Buying of late months by houses with European connections caused a further advance in the market for coffee futures here this morning. The opening was 2@8 points higher, and active months sold 7@10 points above last night's closing figures shortly after the call, with May touching 9.04c and September 9.20c. Reports of small offerings from Brasil and expectations of an improved spot demand before the end of the month seemed to encourage the buying movement, but there was considerable realizing, and prices reacted 2@8 points late in the morning. The close was 3@7 points net higher. Sales were reported of about 43,000 bags. Closing bids: January, 8.79c; February, 8.85c; March, 8.90c; April, 8.96c; May, 9.03c; June, 9.06c; July, 9.08c; August, 9.13c September, 9.19c; October, 9.25c; November, 9.31c; December, 9.36c. Spot coffee firm. Rio 7s, 10c; Santos 4s, 11c. No fresh offers were reported in the cost and freight market, their absence being attributed to the increasing uncertainties of ocean freight. The official cables reported no change in the Brazilian markets except for an advance of 50 reis in Santos futures. Brazilian port receipts, 36,000 bags; Jundiahy, 21,000 bags. Rio cleared 20,000 bags for New York and 29,000 for New Orleans.

CRUDE OIL PRICE AGAIN ADVANCED

Independence, Kas., Jan. 6.—Crude oil, with an advance of 10 cents posted here today by the Prairie Oil and Gas company, went 5 cents above what operators said was the previous highest price ever paid in this field. Today's advance sent oil up to $1.60 a barrel.

Magnolia Company Lifts Price.

Ardmore, Okla., Jan. 6.—Effective Monday, Jan. 8, the Magnolia Petroleum company announced today, the price of Healdton crude oil will be advanced 5 cents, to 85 cents a barrel.

Litigation Ties Up Funds of Denver & Rio Grande

New York, Jan. 6.—The Denver & Rio Grande Railroad company was restrained in a temporary order by the federal court today from removing from this jurisdiction about $2,000,000 cash on deposit here.

The action was taken in foreclosure suits brought by the Equitable Trust company against the Denver and Rio Grande and the Western Pacific Railway company, whose bonds the Denver and Rio Grande some years ago guaranteed as to interest under a traffic contract. Upon default of the interest in 1915 litigation followed to enforce the bondholders' claims against the Denver and Rio Grande.

The Equitable Trust company, the holder of the Western Pacific mortgage, charged the Denver and Rio Grande had already removed from the jurisdiction of the court securities of large value.

Seek to Block Extinction of Trimountain Copper Co.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 6.—United States Senator Willard Saulsbury of Delaware and Michael Foley of Houghton, said to represent minority stockholders in the Trimountain Mining company, today began suit designed to restrain the Copper Range Mining company, majority stockholder of the Trimountain, from terminating the existence of the Trimountain as an individual property.

Cicero Citizens Oppose Sale of Electric Plant

A massmeeting will be held in Cicero today under auspices of the Cicero Taxpayers' Protective association to seek to defeat the sale of the town's electric light system. It is understood the prospective purchaser is the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois.

The meeting, which will be held at Liberty hall, will be addressed by Milton L. Johnson, president of the Chicago Penny Phone league; Ald. Robert R. Buck of the Thirty-fifth ward of Chicago, and Ald. John C. Kennedy of the Twenty-seventh ward.

The officers of the association are R. Conrad Carlson, president; O. M. Schantz, vice president; and Frederick T. Hooker, secretary. The association has secured the services of Clarence Darrow to institute legal proceedings to stop the sale, according to William Delese.

Southern Pacific Income from Other Road Is Taxed

New York, Jan. 6.—The government's right to collect an income tax of $183,611 from the Southern Pacific company on dividends of $18,361,597, received by the company from the Central Pacific Railway company in the first six months of 1914, was upheld by a decision in the federal court here today. The decision was rendered in a test suit brought by the Southern Pacific to recover the above amount assessed against it by the collector of internal revenue.

Iron Company Cuts Melon of 35 Per Cent in Stock

Cleveland, O., Jan. 6.—Directors of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company today declared a stock dividend of 35 per cent on the present outstanding capitalization, which calls for the distribution of $2,580,000 in new shares and a quarterly cash dividend of 2½ per cent, amounting to $170,000

WOOL.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A miscellaneous selection of 6,800 bales was quickly absorbed at the wool auction sales today. Greasy merinos hardened and slipes sold the best in crossbreds.

OFFERING This issue is for the purpose of increasing present earnings by the purchase of oil wells of settled production.

PROPERTY The company owns a modern petroleum refinery at Bristow, Okla., with pipe lines covering about 35 miles from the refinery to the Cushing oil fields. This refinery has a capacity of about 2,000 barrels daily, and has recently been handling about 40,000 barrels of crude oil per month at a profit of approximately $18,000 per month.

Earnings are at the rate equal to about nine times dividend requirements on the preferred stock and are in excess of 20% on the capitalization of $1,000,000.

The company estimates that its profits will be at the rate of $500,000 annually when production which it intends to purchase shall have been acquired.

The present estimated annual earnings show that the privilege of converting the preferred into common stock is one of large probable value.

The books and accounts of the company have been audited by W. H. Mainwaring and Mainwaring, Raffel and O'Brien, Public Accountants.

Subscriptions accepted subject to prior sale.

Reservations may be made by wire or letter, subject to receipt and examination of particulars which will be sent on application.

NEW YORK BANKS ADD $23,000,000 EXCESS RESERVE

The New York bank statement made a favorable exhibit with an increase of over $30,000,000 in cash. There was, however, a gain of $38,900,000 in deposits so that the surplus reserve increase was $23,000,000. This brings the item up to $140,441,440.

Loans showed a moderate expansion. There has been no clear statement as to the continuous, but small increase in loans in the face of the known liquidation in the stock market since Dec. 12. The figures follow:

More Bank Elections.

Stockholders of the Wendell State bank have elected directors as follows: Edward Morris Jr., C. M. Macfarlane, William J. Rathje, Raymond Cardona, H. E. Herrick, J. A. Wendell, Hugh McNeff. Officers for the year are: President, Raymond Cardona; vice presidents, H. E. Herrick, J. A. Wendell; cashier, Hugh McNeff. Deposits have increased $400,000 in year and dividends of 20 per cent have been paid. In addition 57 per cent on the capital stock has been added to undivided profits, making total earnings for the year of 57 per cent.

Morris Berger, assistant secretary of the Illinois Trust and Savings, who was reappointed to office by the directors Friday, was inadvertently left out of the list yesterday morning.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

The stockholders of the Southern Railway company approved the creation of the new refunding and improvement mortgage providing for a maximum bond issue of $500,000,000. The plan provides for the exchange of series A of the new bonds bearing 4½ per cent interest and maturing in 1999, for the outstanding development and general mortgage 4s; and series B of the new bonds bearing 5 per cent interest, for the development and general 4s in the company's treasury.

In Wall street attention is being directed to the point that of the $325,000,000 disbursed Jan. 1 in dividends and interest, only a small portion will be remitted abroad because of the fact that the United States absorbed such a large volume of interest bearing and dividend paying securities in 1916. Most of the $325,000,000 will go, therefore, to American holders.

The Cerro De Pasco company's December production totaled 5,500,000 pounds of copper, against 5,700,000 in November, 6,000,000 in October, and 5,800,000 in September.

It is announced that oil yielding 47½ per cent gasoline, the highest yield found in this country, has been struck in two of the Sinclair Oil and Refining company's new wells located in its 12,000 acre tract in the Garber district. Oil was found at the same depth as the Discovery well, which is about 1,100 feet. According to oil experts, this field ultimately may prove to be one of the largest yet discovered.

It was announced that Canada is sending one of the biggest consignments of gold on the present import movement. It is believed the amount will be at least $25,000,000. Should this estimate be correct, the total imports of gold since Jan. 1, 1916, will approximate $695,000,000.

According to one source of information, the conspicuous weakness in Canadian Pacific has been due in part to a great deal of German stock which has not been a good delivery, and this has been selling from 10 to 20 points below the regular stock.

New business gains of all the Byllesby properties in December are reported to have continued in satisfactory ratio. The week shows an increase of 13 per cent in electric energy put out over the corresponding week one year ago.

Salt Lake Route Expenditures.

The 1917 budget of expenditures for the Salt Lake route represents an outlay of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. New equipment is scheduled for $1,800,000. The next largest item is $1,500,000 for approximately 200 miles of ninety pound rails.

A new branch line from Pico, Cal., to Santa Ana, Cal., a distance of twenty-four miles, will be completed at a cost of $1,400,000. The company will also spend $390,000 for the installation of an automatic block system over 230 miles of their line. The equipment orders will be placed immediately, the improvement work to be started as soon as weather conditions will permit.

New Southern Acquisition.

In confirming the acquisition of the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad President Fairfax Harrison of the Southern railway says:

"By a transaction made possible through the wish of the directors and other security holders of this English company to assist the British government in securing American exchange, the Southern Railway company has consolidated its investment by the acquisition in direct ownership of the controlling stock of the New Orleans and Northeastern, heretofore held by the English company, and at the same time has parted with all interest, direct or indirect, in the Alabama and Vicksburg and the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific by sale of its holdings of the shares of the Junctions company, which are now held abroad.

"In consequence the New Orleans and Northeastern will hereafter be operated as a part of the Southern Railway system, thus affording the Southern's lines a direct entrance into New Orleans, as well as physical connection with the extensive terminals of New Orleans Terminal company, of which the Southern has been for some time the sole owner."

DULL AND NARROW MARKET.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Except for its relatively strong undertone today's dull and narrow market presented no feature of especial interest. Recoveries of 1 to 3 points from yesterday's lowest levels, some of which were later forfeited, resulted almost wholly from the closing of traders' contracts.

The attendance of members on the floor was characteristic of the post-holiday period and public interest was again lacking. United States Steel and the usual specialties, comprising the equipment and munitions groups, contributed more than half to the insignificant total. Metals also were substantially better with shippings, but rails were apathetic.

Foreign affairs evoked little interest aside from the announcement of another large gold importation for account of the British government. Exchange on London was firm, but rates on Paris, Berlin, and Rome shaded slightly.

Raw Products to Go Down?

Domestic trade reports indicated a slight halt in mercantile lines, based on peace discussion and the probability of an early reduction from present high levels for some of the leading raw products.

Firmness ruled in bonds, with an active demand for Southern railway general 4s at a full point gain. International bonds also denoted a better inquiry.

Government bonds were slightly more active during the week, United States 3s advancing a slight fraction, while Panama 3s yielded a point.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The cotton market showed increasing activity and strength this morning, with May contracts selling up to 18.68c, or 45 points above Friday's close and more than $11.15 per bale above the low level of last month. That delivery closed at 18.60c, with the general list closing steady at a net advance of 25 to 38 points. Local brokers were inclined to attribute the advance to a gradual revival of confidence and a moderate improvement in trade demand, combined with continued firmness in the interior spot markets. Business in Fall River continued light, sales of print cloths for the week being estimated at only 50,000 pieces, but no accumulation of goods were reported and manufacturers were said to be maintaining prices. Fertilizer interests report that sales for this year's cotton planting have been heavy so far, with indications pointing to a larger use of fertilizer than for any year since 1914. Good rains were reported east of the Mississippi yesterday, but no further precipitation occurred in the southwest, where rainfall up to the end of December was below normal. Port receipts today, 25,639; for the season, 5,061,589; exports today, 20,085; for the season, 2,260,869. Stock, 1,500,806. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 6.—A bulge of almost $2 a bale resulted in cotton here today from a demand stimulated by reports of an increased inquiry for spots in the belt at rising prices. Trade houses representing spinning interests and spot people were set down as the heaviest buyers of futures. The close was very steady at a net rise of 24 to 39 points. Futures:

Hog receipts of 17,000 head met with a brisk shipping and packing demand at Chicago yesterday and prices were advanced 10@20c, closing strong at the high point for the week. Sales were made up to $10.65, with the bulk at $10.10@10.55. Shippers were after light hogs and paid mostly 15@20c higher for them, although they comprised the bulk of the supply. Pigs were 10@15c higher for the day.

Final prices made hogs 15@20c higher than a week ago and pigs mostly 15@25c higher. The average price of hogs this week was $10.20, compared with $10.85 last week. Receipts for the period were nearly 207,000 head, showing an increase of 10,000 for the week, but aggregating 127,000 less than a year ago.

CATTLE.

Beef steer prices at Chicago this week closed unchanged to 15@25c higher than a week ago, with the good to choice steers showing the advance. The latter continued scarce and in urgent demand, while the less desirable grades were in more liberal supply, receipts for the week showing an increase of nearly 10,000 head. Best steers offered reached $11.70, against $11.80 the previous week and $9.50 a year ago, but they were not of fancy finish. Cows and heifers were unchanged to a shade lower, while calves were mostly 25c higher as compared with a week ago.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 170,700, against 108,600 the previous week, 162,000 a year ago, and 151,000 two years ago.

SHEEP.

New high record marks were made in the market for sheep and lambs and prices finished at the high point, strong to 25c higher than a week ago. Lambs made a new record at $13.75 for fed westerns and $13.60 for natives. Sheep sold up to $10.40 for a new mark and compared with $10.25 for the best last week. Prices were about $3.00 higher than the corresponding time last year. Receipts showed a slight increase, which was offset by a larger outward movement. Feeding lambs were in urgent demand and highest on record.

PEACE PROPOSER AND PEACE DISPOSER—Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg of the German empire, who announced the preliminary terms on which Germany was willing to make peace, and David Lloyd-George, new premier of Great Britain, who announced in a speech before parliament that England was not ready to consider peace negotiations until Germany "made reparation to Belgium and offered guarantees for the peace of Europe." The German chancellor wears his military uniform on almost all occasions.

BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR

This is the only practical window ventilator ever devised. It is the only one that opens and closes with the window. It is the only window ventilator that admits fresh air, but prevents drafts and excludes dirt, rain, snow, and burglars: It is:

FOOLPROOF	CLEANLY	BURGLAR PROOF
SIGHTLY	INDESTRUCTIBLE	EASILY INSTALLED

A scientific test was made recently in one of the big new Chicago schools equipped with a ventilating plant costing $8,000 to install, and $1,500 per year to operate. It showed 72% to 123% more carbon dioxide in the rooms relying on this ventilating system than in rooms in which a few simple, inexpensive Berry Ventilators had been installed.

Selling direct to the consumer from our Chicago store we sold ventilators to homes, offices, schools, hospitals, factories, libraries, etc., in 455 cities in 33 states, between October 9th and December 9th, 1916. Of the hundreds of Chicago firms who bought ventilators 90% gave us repeat orders. This shows what those who try the BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR think of it.

The death rate shoots upward in winter because people shut themselves up in stuffy homes and offices and breathe stale, foul, poisoned air. BERRY WINDOW VENTILATORS are saving thousands of lives. Closed windows mean bad air and tuberculosis and pneumonia. Open windows mean drafts and colds and rheumatism. The Berry Ventilator means Fresh Air and health. A BERRY VENTILATOR may save your life!

Order It Now! Call or Phone or Write.

Representative will call anywhere in Chicago with demonstrating model.

How to Take Measurements

To determine size of ventilator needed, close your window and measure (with rule, not tape measure) from window stop to window stop on inside of sill close up to window. The "window stop" is the perpendicular strip that holds the window in place. Any size in this table will fit window openings any part of three inches wider than the length of the ventilator.

Size	Price	Size	Price	Size	Price	Size	Price
17 in.	$1.36	32 in.	$2.56	47 in.	$3.76	62 in.	$4.96
20 in.	1.60	35 in.	2.80	50 in.	4.00	65 in.	5.20
23 in.	1.84	38 in.	3.04	53 in.	4.24	68 in.	5.44
26 in.	2.08	41 in.	3.28	56 in.	4.48	71 in.	5.68
29 in.	2.32	44 in.	3.52	59 in.	4.72

EACH SIZE ADJUSTABLE TO THE NEXT.

In ordering by mail add 25 cents for each ventilator for delivery outside of Cook County.

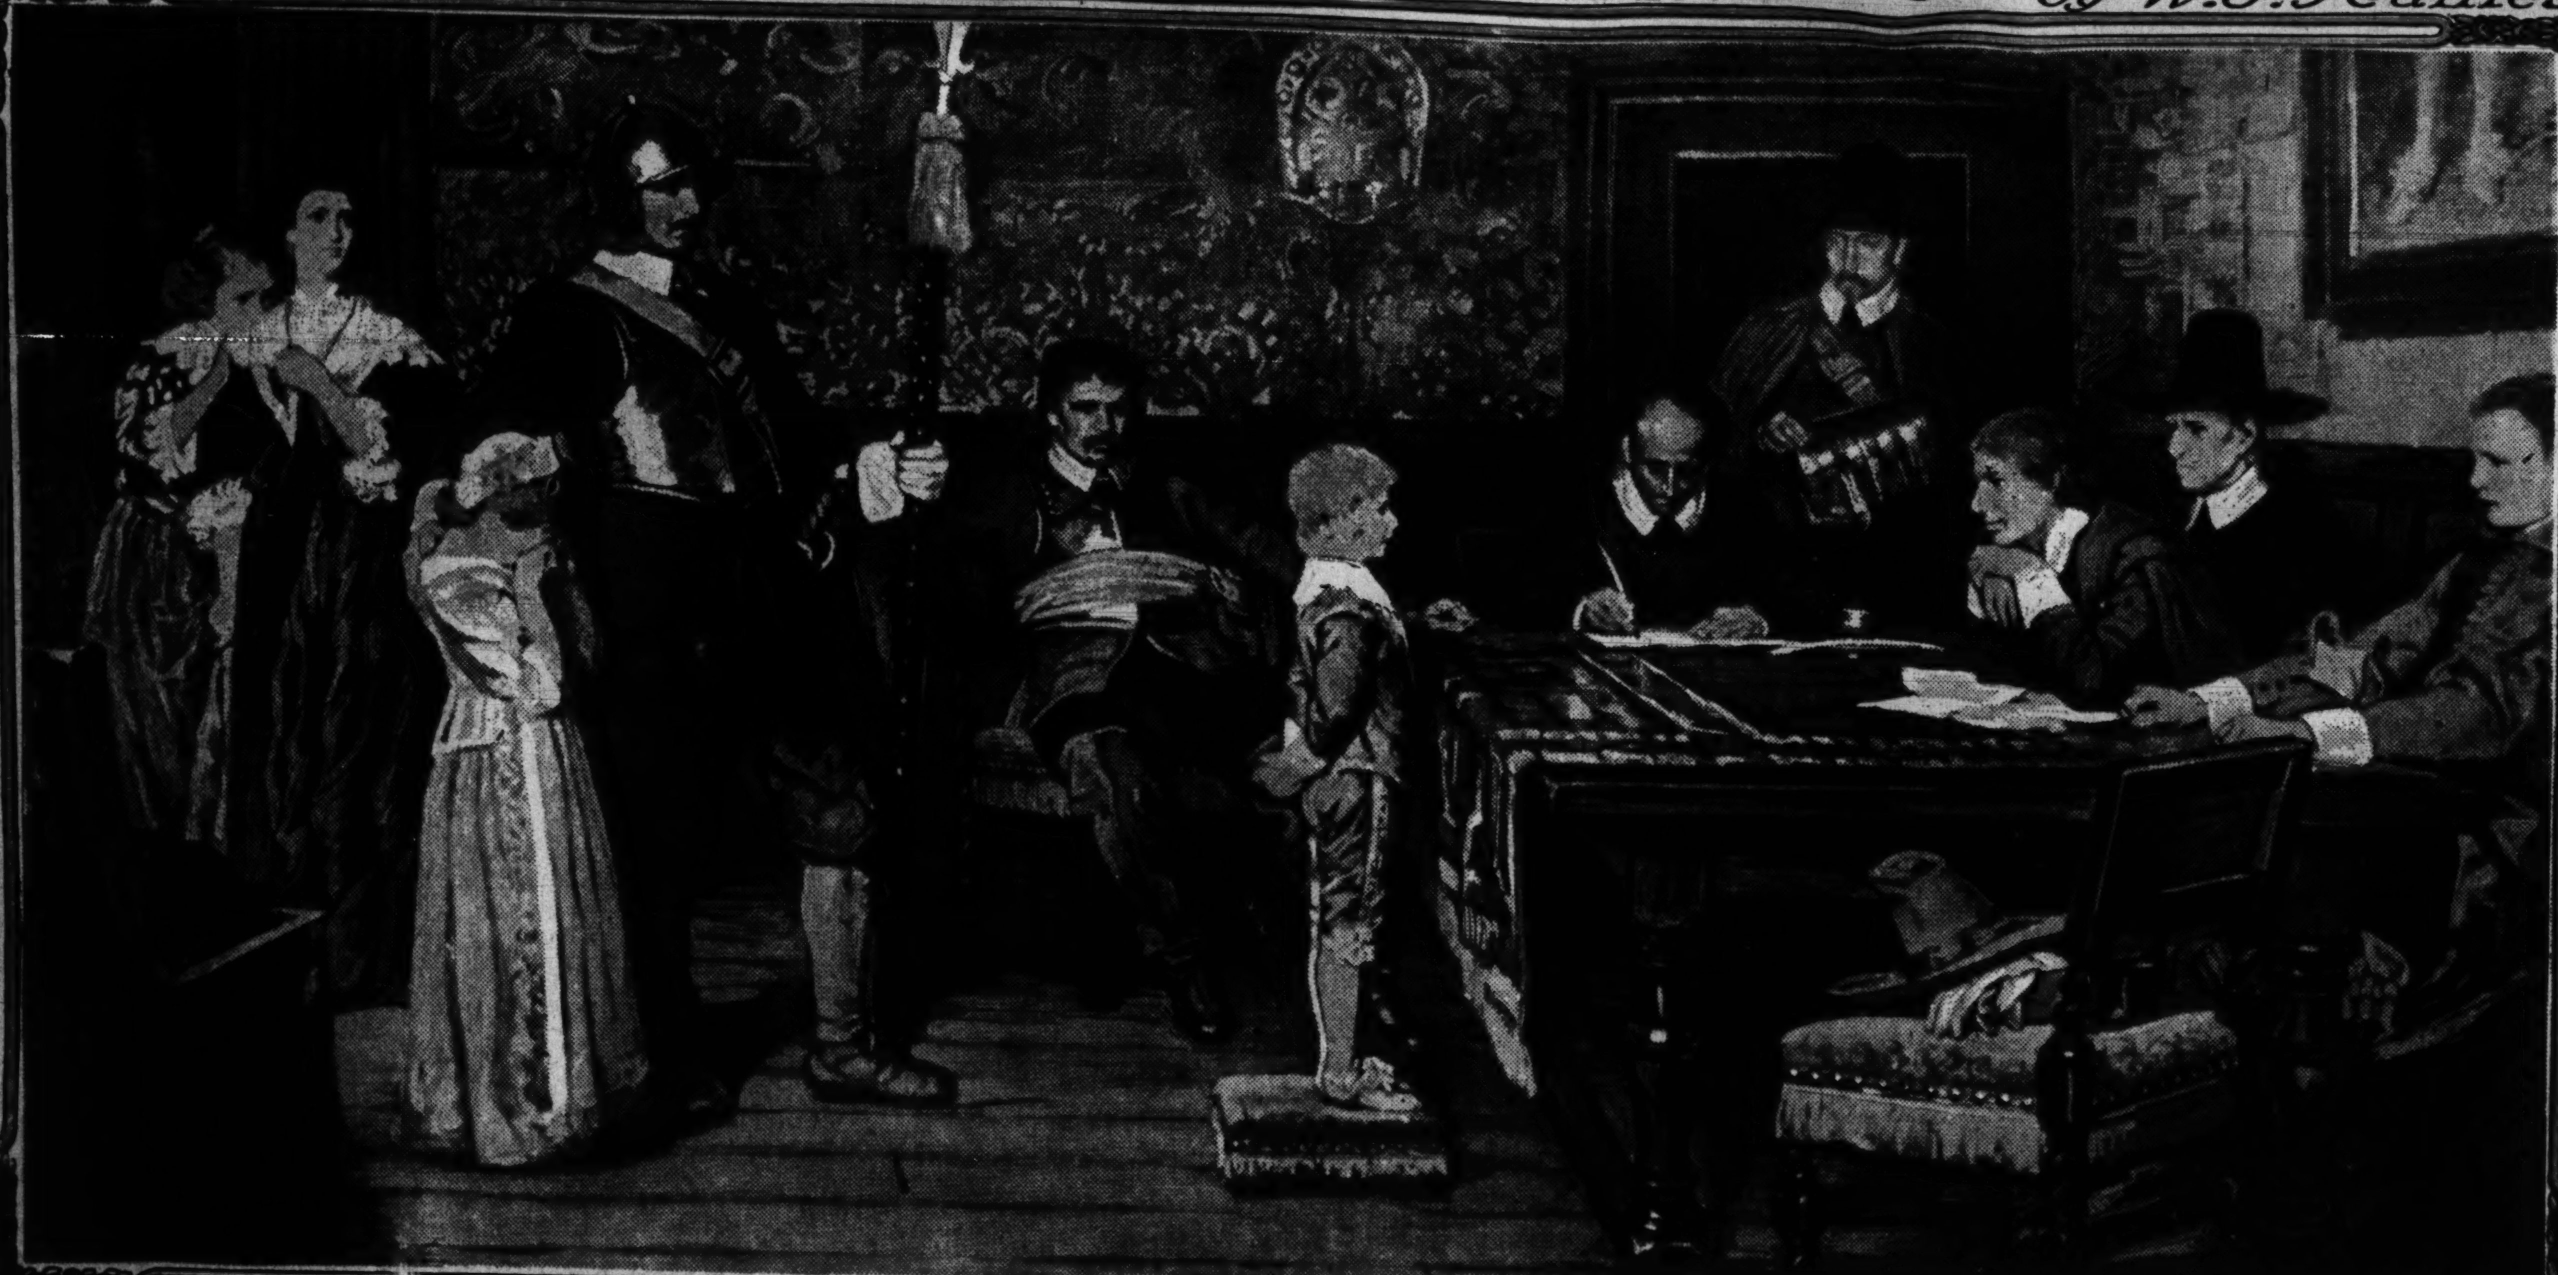
"AND WHEN DID YOU LAST SEE YOUR FATHER?" by W. F. Yeames



By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"And When Did You Last See Your Father?" by William F. Yeames, R. A.
In the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool.

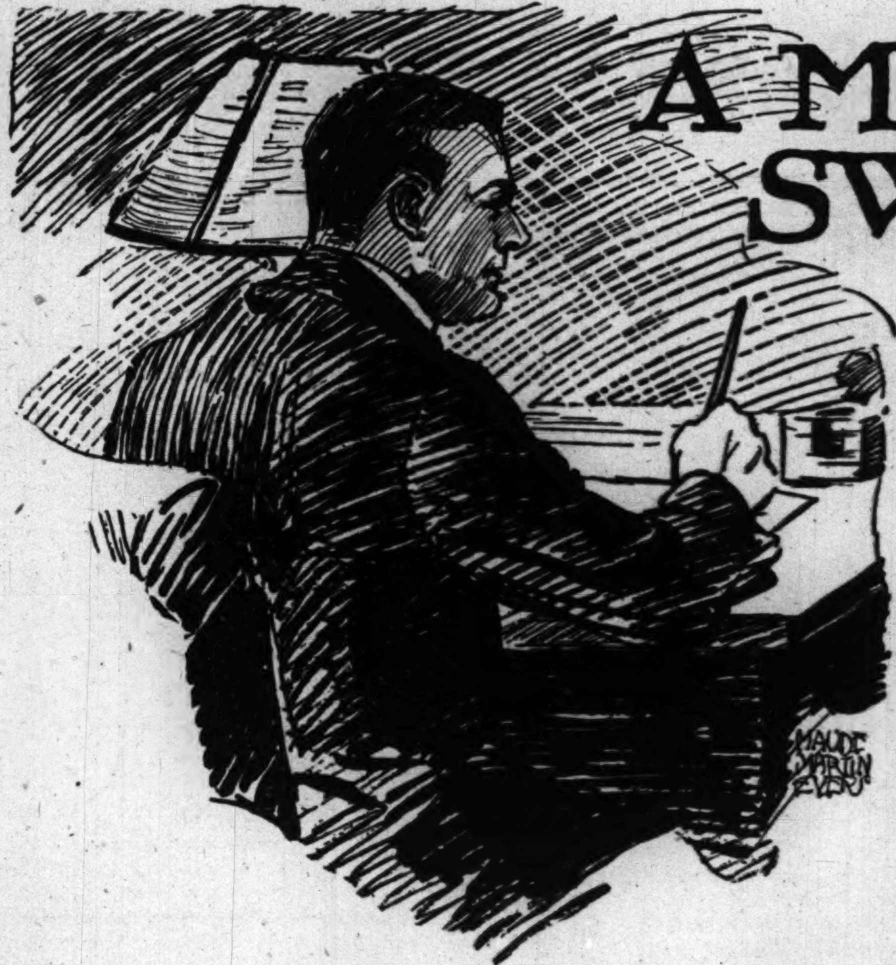
THE fiercely implacable Cromwellian troops have entered the home of some prominent English Royalist, determined to ferret out the hiding place of the family's head. They have chosen the fair haired boy aristocrat to question, depending on his youthful ingenuousness to reveal what neither torture nor death could drag from the mother.

Yeames, as an historical painter, was always scrupulously accurate in the setting of his scenes and the costuming of his characters. In this present instance, one of the best examples of his many historical pictures, Yeames has commingled excellent technique and real dramatic feeling. The colors are rich and deep and the facial expression of the various characters is strongly individual. And while the little drama suggested is the artist's imaginary creation, it is just such a scene as happened many a time in the turmoil of the English civil war when the blunt, Roundhead troops of the indomitable Cromwell forced their way into Royalist houses to extract information from their terrified occupants.

Yeames was born in 1835 at Taganrog, southern Russia, where his father held the position of British consul. Mr. Yeames senior, a man of rare taste and knowledge of art, made every effort to give his son the best possible advantages artistically, and when the child was not yet 8 years old took him and his five brothers to Italy. This association from early youth with the spirit and art of Italy made a deep impression on the mind of young Yeames and later his desire to become an artist was given a substantial backing by a course of training under Westmacott and Scarf.

Yeames first exhibited in the academy in 1859, and in 1866 he was elected associate. Twelve years later he achieved a full membership as royal academician.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.



A MAKE-BELIEVE SWEETHEART

But One Can't Always Tell What May Happen When Two People Get to Corresponding.

Chicago, May 30.

MY Dear Jane: When you have read this letter you will be tempted to send post haste (or by air line, which is much more modern) to inquire into my sanity. I suppose all such letters as the one I am about to write by rights should begin: "I am about to make a confession." All right, let's begin it that way. I am about to make a confession—to wit:

I am going to write you a love letter. I can see you start now with this for the grate—or do you have anything in your house but the modern, cozy, gilt or brown radiator? If you are tempted, hold, fair lady, a moment, I pray! It isn't to be a serious love letter. You see, the truth is I am a lonely bachelor—desperately lonely, so lonely as I sit here tonight that if I don't pretend to love some one or make myself think I am loving some one, I'll be playing with sticky fingers and feathers one of these days. I must call some one "dear."

Ordinarily when bachelors reach such an age and stage I believe they marry a chorus girl or buy a cat or a parrot or some such thing. But, you see, I don't know any chorus girls and I don't want to get married, and cats are apt to purr at one and expect caresses, and parrots are inclined to talk too much. Altogether I am in desperate straits.

All my friends are respectable married folks. I can't go to their homes without being a third party or that most awful of all things—a guest. They take pity on my bachelor state once in a while and try to entertain me. They select for my partner the prettiest and youngest debutante, who talks to me of frats and the fox trot, or some bright, self-made spinster who insists upon discussing woman suffrage. There really is no place today where a bachelor may enjoy his bachelor joys! The situation is quite hopeless and I am helpless and awfully alone. You are so far away you cannot even guess how grouchy I am unless I tell you—which I will not—and I just must tell my troubles to some one whose ear at least pretends to be sympathetic. I've got to feel there is some one to whom the papers could send a telegram in case I left suddenly. Either that or go and break a safe, and it is so much cozier sitting here writing to you than to go safe-breaking. Do you mind? Lonesomely,

PETER LAKE.

I'd like to do this whenever I feel this way.

P. L.

Dear Peter: Letter received and contents noted (as all purely business letters should be begun). Do the spells come often? Inquiringly,

My Dear Jane: There, I knew it. I'd have been real disappointed if you had not asked that question. I'd have doubted my wisdom in my choice had you failed me in this. I felt you were a real woman and now I know it.

I knew all about you long before you knew I did. You recall I roomed with John Barton all during our years in college. I met you then, by proxy, and came to know all about you. You and your praises were my nightly lullaby. I went to sleep with the glories of Jane ringing in my ears; I breakfasted, lunched, and dined to their song. In proportion as I loved John I came to detest your name. The only thing that saved me from the sanitarium was your marriage to John!

Bully old John, Jane! It took a real person to win the love of such a man as John Barton. It is five years since you went kiting off to the western wilds and now he has been gone three of them. If my silence since then has seemed to indicate a lack of interest, don't lay it up against me. This has not been the case, for you have been much in my mind. I have not written, for I had no one on earth as dear to me as John. His death was the hardest blow I ever have had. Just thinking of you turned the knife in the wound.

Why do I turn to you now? Well, in the old days when I felt particularly lonely, John's good nature always gave me a boost and I grew to depend upon it. You are the next step removed from John, and you always were mighty good to him. I'll admit, Jane, you quite upset all my theories about wives! How's John Jr.? With due respect to you I hope he is like his dad. That model cannot be improved upon.

As you probably know, even in my college days I never cared much about you women. John said it was because I was too lazy and conceited and a few other nice characteristics mixed in, and if any one knew he did. But most of you are such selfish little pigs you expect more of a fellow than his life and I never met one I thought was worth half that amount.

The other night when I got so low in spirits it didn't seem to make much difference what happened, I thought that, perhaps, if there was some person in the world to whom I could turn as a kind of safety valve it might be a good thing. A man's wife, so I understand, usually fills this gap, but I had no wife! I couldn't go to my friends' wives, could I? You can't trust 'em. Then I thought of John—and of you. You had been married. You were no giddy young thing waiting to snatch a fellow up. You would be safe. Moreover, I thought you might not mind coming to my assistance after you knew how many hours—or years—I had listened to the extolling of your virtues! Any more?

PETER L.

Dear Peter: Thank you for your long letter. I think I understand the situation perfectly. John often talked of you. He told me all about you. If I can be of any assistance to John's friend I grant it gladly. Only, of course, you will not expect love letters in return from me. That is quite beyond your need. And, being a very busy woman, I must not be called upon to receive more than one a month. Is this perfectly satisfactory? Cordially, JANE.

Sept. 10.

Dear Jane: The next time I ask you to telegraph please do. I don't like being worried over little things. Interferes with business. Bother or not! I've a right to know whether you and John Jr. are well. Why should you be too busy to relieve the fears of a friend? I am no worrier, but I have thought of you so much the last few years you have become a real responsibility. Write me what you are doing.
PETER.

Dear Peter: Be very careful not to get confused. You were the responsibility, not I. What am I doing? Having a perfectly lovely time. I have just returned from a house party in Victoria where, by the way, I met an old acquaintance of John's and yours. His name is Bennett—Dan is the rest, I believe. He is out here handling western territory for some big New York firm. Charming chap. I told him I had heard from you recently and he was much interested.

"I don't suppose he ever married?" he asked. "Old Pete's all right, but I can't imagine any woman's willingly taking such a life job."

He laughed so heartily over the idea of your getting married that I laughed, too, and then he told me of the time the boys persuaded Sally Good, the college flirt, to go after you. Do you remember it? John never had told me that story. Mr. Bennett made the party quite worth while for me since it is only within recent months that I have been going about again and such events as house parties do not interest me as they once did. Mr. Bennett is coming down to Seattle next week and I look forward to his visit. He is most genial. We talk old times and he tells me much of John's old college days and friends. Do you recall him? Sincerely,
JANE B.

Sept. 16.

Sept. 20.

Dear Jane: Your letter just delivered to me. Do I remember Bennett? Yes, I do. Football player. He always thought he was pretty much of a lady killer. I don't know why he should think the idea of my getting married funny. As I recall, the girls in school thought about as much of me as they did of him. Yes, I remember Sally Good, too. She was pretty and we called her Pretty Good. I never thought much of her, but, of course, she was just the type of girl Bennett liked. I need not warn you to go carefully in your friendship with him as, of course, you are too sensible to be interested in that kind of a fellow. Thoroughly all right, you understand, but I never go much on these pink tea men. I am surprised that you should have laughed with him. It doesn't appeal to me as a joke. Please be careful. Hurriedly,
PETER.

Sept. 21.

Dear Jane: I wrote you yesterday, but that merely was a note of warning about Bennett. I hope you will heed the advice of so old a friend as I am. I suppose he is down in Seattle just about this time. It is raining here tonight—a kind of pitter-patter rain. When I was a boy I used to like to listen to the drops coming down on the tin roof as if they were playing tag with each other, but here in the city they only seem to beat against the window panes like frightened children seeking a hiding place. Great Scott, Jane, but I am lonesome. I don't know what has got into me of late. I don't enjoy the theater, I hate the club, and I come home (or to my quarters, rather, for one bachelor and a servant in a flat don't make a home by a long shot) to what? To read? No. To pace the floor and wonder how I can kill the time. I think I need a vacation. Really, I think I am a sick man. I never have been sick before. You don't know what your letters are meaning to me in these days of my wretched health. Jane, dear, can't you contrive to write more often? It was only that confounded love letter that was to be written once a month. Nothing was bargained for in friendship letters. Please answer soon. Anxiously,
P. L.

Dear Peter: Let me congratulate you. That was really a very nice little love letter for a make-believe. And only No. 2! Very good, indeed, for a beginner.

I am so sorry you are feeling badly. It probably is the result of the long hot summer and early fall back east. Such a summer always is so muggy. You will feel better when the cold weather comes on.

The other evening—the very evening, by the way, you were writing to me—Mr. Bennett came. He had only a day in Seattle so we made the best of it. We had tea at the house that afternoon and then went for a spin over the boulevards. Old Elliott bay and Lake Washington did themselves proud. They were glorious and even the snow caps were showing that evening. How that happened no one knows, for the mountains never will perform when you want them to. They are worse than youngsters.

He—Mr. Bennett—is delighted with the country and is going to try to have the western offices moved to Seattle. I do hope he succeeds. It is such fun to have some one who, at least, seems an old friend, running in. Of course, no one out here is a native. John Jr. is the only native Seattleite I have met since coming out! Nearly every one I know is a former easterner, but at that Mr. Bennett seems a bit different from the rest.

Take good care of yourself and don't get sick. I can't play long distance nurse as I can long distance "safety valve." As ever,
JANE B.

Sept. 29.

Jane, my dear: Your letter maddened me. A beginner at what? That wasn't a love letter! Did it sound like one? If I couldn't do better than that at love making I'd buy a ready writer. That was the advice of a friend! Safety valve, go hang. Jane, dear woman, you have got little Jack to think of. Don't be foolish. I'm a lawyer. I know what I am talking about. Propinquity is the forerunner of more trouble and divorces than anything I know. Most anxiously,
PETER.

Dear Peter: What are you talking about? What has my letter to do with propinquity and divorces? Better rest a few days.

Dear Jane: Of course, if you feel that way about it, I won't come. I naturally supposed that any of John's old friends might be reasonably welcome in his house, but evidently that welcome is reserved for the few. Perhaps you'd as lief not hear from any of the others at all. Very truly,
PETER LAKE.

Dear Peter: What is the matter with you? You sound positively peevish. You are a worse charge than Jack ever was. It doesn't seem as if I have been very successful as a soother. Won't you please see a doctor?
J. B.

Oct. 14.

Oct. 18.

Dear Jane: I don't want a doctor. I don't believe in them. If one of them came he wouldn't know what was the matter with me, or, if he did, he wouldn't have the nerve to tell me. I don't need a doctor any more than I need two heads. What I need is you. I've been an insufferable cad, and I know it. John was right. I've been a conceited booby. I am afraid to ask you what you think of me, but tonight, Jane, I'd give a kingdom if I had it just to be as near you as Bennett is. Perhaps he is down there with you this evening while I am off here, miles and miles away, grinding my teeth over the distance that his between us and wishing to get my fingers on Bennett's throat. Yes, I am. We are all pretty much cave men after all, you know. If I thought he was trying to win you with his pretty ways—I remember them all and how the girls fell for them—if I thought——

I'll go mad if you don't tell me how far this friendship with Bennett has gone. Don't let him win you, dear. Let me have a bit of a chance to prove I am not the fool I have seemed. Jane, I love you—as I never dreamed people loved. I used to laugh at the boys when they raved this way. I told them they were only hoodwinking themselves into an emotional frenzy. But it is real, Jane—so real that I ache with the awfulness of it.

Life is life on the days when your letters come, but it is deadly gloom when I am without them. I can't expect you to answer this now. Don't try to answer it, dear, until you have given me a chance to prove myself. With my love, dear,
PETER.

Dear Peter: Now, Peter, that wasn't fair, and I really should not answer you at all. That was the second love letter in one month. Not only are you breaking the contract but it seems a shame to waste such talent as you possess in the direction of make-believe. Your bringing Mr. Bennett into the scene is really quite dramatic. Why don't you write plays? You could make safety valves of all your heroines and pile up a nice little fortune at the same time. Good idea, don't you think?

But, really, Peter, if you are having those attacks of loneliness as frequently as your letters indicate, please do see the doctor, and do not be foolish. I would write a longer letter, but I am off in a few moments for the boat for Victoria. Another house party. Am I not getting gay? Please do me the favor of seeing the doctor. Look into your diet and get more sleep. Sincerely,
JANE.

Oct. 23.

Oct. 28.

Jane: Burn that fool contract, will you? If ever I was idiot enough to say all I did say, I don't want it down in black and white. Yes, I wrote you two love letters last month, and I am going to write you two dozen this month—if I don't reach Seattle before that time. Don't scourge me with my own foolishness, dear. I am serious, Jane, and you know it. I know I do not deserve your love, but I want it, anyway. Want it? There is not a word in the language strong enough to express my desire for it. Don't say it is impossible to give it to me until I see you. Or has Bennett won already? I need you. That is why I turned to you in the first of my loneliness. Can't you see, dear? Won't you see? I did not know then, but I do now. Diet! Sleep! What's the use? I can't eat and I can't sleep. Jane, dear, tell me to come.
PETER.

O, Peter, Peter! You're just human after all! It is hard to believe. I'm so glad! I never believed all you said of yourself, dear. You see, as I wrote you once before, John had told me all about you. I will tell you what he said when you come. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett and children arrive this week and will welcome you also. When will you start?
JANE.

The Dancer at the Tabar

SHE CAME PERILOUSLY CLOSE TO THE ABYSS—BUT SUDDENLY IN THE WORLD OF UNBELIEVERS SHE FOUND ONE WHO BELIEVED.

[Copyrighted by Mary Roberts Rinehart.]

IT was New Year's eve at the Bal Tabarin, in Vienna. In the center of the long room the girl from Budapest was dancing. She was a tall girl, lithe and supple, and she danced to a clamor of little bells—bells on her garters, bells around her waist, bells concealed that tinkled as she swayed and protested shrilly when she leaped. Her sensuous dancing pleased the crowd; as she ceased, smiling, with a flash of dark eyes and white teeth, a tipsy officer in uniform presented her with a glass of champagne.

The wild Hungarian music rioted. The musicians, in red coats, with swarthy faces, played furiously. With the near approach of midnight a frenzy seized the crowd. The merriment of the carnival was giving place to something less innocent. A man in a loge drank from a woman's slipper.

The loges circled the room From their railings, red plush and gilt, streamed long, thin festoons of colored paper. The air was filled with flying confetti. As a gong announced five minutes before the hour the crowd, tired of the decorum of the tables, surged toward the boxes, where women sat, smothered in flowers—fair women and dark, aigrettes and jewels, gleaming flesh and cool, amused eyes. Behind their white shoulders men lounged, men in court dress or uniform with medals of honor on their breasts.

Outside in the streets and gathered before St. Stephen's church a reverent crowd stood in the snow. At the first stroke of midnight the people crossed themselves, and many knelt. But in the Bal Tabarin the noise only grew more boisterous, the music more riotous. Confetti were abandoned for flowers—roses and violets, carnations and lilies. The loges were ankle deep in crushed petals. Amid shrieks of laughter a chimney sweep, in official coat and rags, carried a squealing pig from loge to loge.

Behind the bar, at the top of the steps leading from the boxes to the main floor, an English barmaid was sharpening a lead pencil.

A thin young American girl in a dancing dress stood beside her, leaning both elbows on the bar and surveying the scene with frank curiosity.

"Look at the diamond collar on that woman over there with the bandeau!" she said. "Seems to me diamond collars are taking the place of necklaces this winter."

"I'm glad you spoke of that, Tilly." The barmaid yawned and stuck her pencil in hair. "I'll have some of my stuff made over."

Tilly Reilly laughed. "What's the pig for?" she demanded.

"Luck. They don't look as if they needed it, do they?"

Tilly's eyes had gone back again to the woman with the bandeau.

"I wonder," she reflected, "how I'd look with a black velvet collar like that and a paste buckle on it. I'm so infernally thin!"

Tilly said "infernally." There is strong reason to believe that she would have said "damnably" had it occurred to her. The world had not been kind to Tilly in her nineteen years, and, although she was still sound and fine, there were scratches on her social veneer. Stranded in Europe by the failure of a roving company, in which she belonged to the chorus, Tilly had refused with loathing the means many of the girls had chosen to get back, and had drifted into the cabarets as the best of a bad job.

For three months now she had been a part of the night life of the city, a dancer at the Tabarin, a familiar figure to rounders, an enigma to the other girls of the cabaret. For Tilly showed a curious willingness to live on her 40 kronen a week salary, a hitherto unknown tendency to mind her own business, and an aloofness that was helped by her ignorance of the language.

Tonight on this Silvesterabend Tilly's eyes, as she stared over the revelers, were somewhat clouded. For her contract at the Tabarin expired that night, and she had every reason to believe that it would not be renewed. And when one is making a conscientious effort to live on 40 kronen a week and no extras, and has no one to cable to for money—or, for that matter, no money to cable—and has wasted one's substance in riotous living to the extent of a krone or so every week, a krone being 20 cents, losing one's job is serious enough.

Tilly's ignorance was not ignorance. She knew why she was to be dismissed. Her graceful dancing, totally lacking in fire or sensuality, made no appeal to the satiated habitués of the Bal Tabarin; her aloofness irritated them. A man one night had held Tilly tight and tried to kiss her, whereat Tilly had bitten his hand until it bled.

Weininger, the proprietor, had stormed in German, and Tilly, gathering something of his meaning, and desperately alone, had done her best. She had shortened her shabby skirts, and even, after a battle royal, consented to dance in her bare feet. The result was curious, incongruous—Tilly, dressed like a bacchante, danced her virginal little dance with shamed, downcast eyes, a travesty of bacchanalia, a child repeating passion by rote.

And now Tilly was at her last ditch. Before long, at dawn probably, Weininger would dismiss her—not pay her off, for Tilly had drawn her salary ahead, being given to the aforesaid riotous living, and having at Christmas, the week before, presented to the children of the portier at her pension, the only Christmas they had received. Also Tilly had made herself a present of a chiffon waist. Undoubtedly Tilly had been extravagant. She did not yet know whether her delight in the waist was not eclipsed by her pain at her improvidence.

Weininger would dismiss her probably at daylight, and she would have to hunt another job, and if that failed—she shuddered and closed her eyes. She had passed women in the gray dawn standing on the street corners—sometimes a group near a grating, for warmth. Tilly had always passed them with horror in her eyes, and now perhaps in a night or two—or a week or a month, depending on her resistance, and how long she could go hungry—

"Hell of a racket, isn't it?" observed the barmaid, perfunctorily. "I wish I could get a cup of tea somewhere. Sometimes I—look in that box over there! Aren't they Americans?"

Tilly looked across to where, in a loge, a young woman was sitting. Beside her, laughing and pelting the crowd below with roses, were two men in evening dress. One, the younger, was looking across at Tilly.

"Look like it," said Tilly, indifferently. She had grown familiar with touring Americans seeing the sights of the night city; she had ceased to expect anything but curiosity from the women and overt familiarity from the men. "Look like New Yorkers. You can tell New York clothes as far as you can see them."

In the recurrence of the performance Tilly's turn was approaching again. She stooped under the bar and brought up a box of rouge and a broken mirror. Careless of on lookers, she touched up her round young cheeks, crimsoned her lips a trifle more, and put fresh powder in the hollows that a 30 kronen a week pension had left in her neck.

The Cossack dancers, a man and two girls, were finishing. The rhythmic beat of their heavy boots on the floor raised a light cloud of dust. Hampered by the encroaching tables, they danced furiously, giving vent to the curious shrill cries of the steppes. Tilly kicked off her shabby slippers and examined the sole of one bare foot.

"I picked up a rose thorn the last time," she remarked. "And some one has broken a wineglass. I wish they'd sweep the floor."

The barmaid was large and very blonde. Tonight, with nothing but champagne on sale, she was not busy, having only the waiters' checks to look after. She pinned a pink rose in her bosom and looked at Tilly with not unfriendly eyes.

"Have you seen Weininger?" she asked. "He was looking for you."

"I'm right here when he wants me." Tilly's tone was defiant. The blonde barmaid leaned over and put a hand on her arm.

"Take it from me," she said, "you do what he wants. You're a long ways from home, kid. You can dance all right. I've watched you, and I know. But you've got to put some snap into it tonight if you want to hold your job. You dance like a Sunday school!"

She pushed Tilly toward the steps with a kindly contempt. But Tilly turned, speaking over her thin shoulder:

"Tell Weininger, for me, to go to the devil!" she said, and advanced delicately on her bare toes to the top of the half dozen stairs leading down to the floor. She stopped there a moment or two, looking out over the crowd. And, lingering there, her indifferent eyes fell on the loge across and met those of one of the men. He was watching her, and now he smiled. It was a smile, not a leer. Tilly smiled back at him with a flash of amusement in her Irish eyes. It was as if their glances had met in a mutual, amused tolerance of the scene that lay between them. Where Tilly had been reared the Godspeed of a smile between strangers was not necessarily evil.

"What a pretty little dancer!" said the woman in the box. "She looks Irish, doesn't she?"

"American, I think; I'll tell you in a moment."

The young man who had smiled at Tilly bent over and selected some flowers from the mass on the table. From across Tilly watched him soberly. First he held up a red rose, smiling over it at her. Then he added to it a white carnation and held both up. Something of expectancy gleamed in Tilly's blue eyes.

Finally, after much searching, he found a blue violet, and with a little air of triumph extended the red, white and blue cluster. Tilly smiled again, showing her small teeth, and nodded vigorously. The young woman in the box bent over at that and bowed. It was a little bow, as if she had said over all the heads: "My countrywoman, greetings!"

"She looks like Botticelli's Spring!" said the woman in the box. "How exquisitely proportioned she is and look at her feet! Did you ever see such beautiful feet?"

The younger man said nothing, but he bent forward, watching Tilly.

"She looks quite nice, too." The woman again: "What a horrible place for her to be!"

The older man laughed and signaled the waiter for more champagne. "One sees those things in Europe," he said, tolerantly. "These cabaret girls are all alike—bad clear through. But some of them are like that—little devils with the eyes of saints."

Tilly looked across again. The kindliness in the younger man's eyes had not faded. And now he called the Kellner and pointed out a broken wineglass on the dancing floor. The Kellner bowed and departed. A little wave of warmth and well-being stole over Tilly's lonely heart. Some one was solicitous for her—some one who wished nothing of her, who did not leer, but smiled. Something that had seemed to have stifled in the smoke of the Bal Tabarin, or died of starvation en pension at [illegible] kronen a week, suddenly awakened to life in Tilly's breast, a something that was not afraid of the gray women on the street corners, a something that could smile in the tainted air of the Bal Tabarin, and slip unscathed, from under the clutching fingers of the birds of prey that haunted it. And the something hated Tilly's bare legs and shortened skirts and the dance that was an imitation of the girl from Budapest.

The Cossack dancers had finished. Their athletic dancing received scant applause. The crowd, stimulated to the highest point, desired an appeal to its senses, roused with wine. In some of the boxes men sat with their arms around the shoulders of the women. The leader of the orchestra was waiting, his eyes on Tilly. Behind the musicians, near a pillar, she could see Weininger, his heavy black brows drawn together, watching her. Tilly padded down the steps in her bare feet and stood with her arms poised, waiting for the music. And, as she stood, the American flung a tiny red, white, and blue nosegay to her. She stooped and picked it up.

The young man who had smiled at Tilly bent over and selected some flowers from the mass on the table. From across Tilly watched him soberly. First he held up a red rose, smiling over it at her. Then he added to it a white carnation and held both up. Something of expectancy gleamed in Tilly's blue eyes.

Finally, after much searching, he found a blue violet, and with a little air of triumph extended the red, white, and blue cluster. Tilly smiled again, showing her small teeth, and nodded vigorously. The young woman in the box bent over at that and bowed. It was a little bow, as if she had said over all the heads: "My countrywoman, greetings!"

"She looks like Botticelli's Spring!" said the woman in the box. "How exquisitely proportioned she is, and look at her feet! Did you ever see such beautiful feet?"

The younger man said nothing, but he bent forward, watching Tilly.

"She looks quite nice, too." The woman again: "What a horrible place for her to be!"

She was only girl who had been driven hard, and who now, in the enemy's country's, stood with her back to the wall. Or perhaps it was a ditch, after all, not a wall. With the flowers in her hand Tilly danced—danced in her thin, short skirt and her bare legs. But with Weininger glowering at her, showing his teeth, with the women in the loges sneering and the men disappointed and bored, to the sensuous Hungarian music Tilly danced again the virginal little dance of her early days at the Bal Tabarin, looking as she did it like cool spring come again in the midst of hot, voluptuous summer.

And when she had finished, without a glance at the man in the box, she gathered her rouge and her broken mirror from under the bar, and, disdaining Weininger's fury and the thought of the pension of 30 kronen a week—and no 30 kronen—she shook the dust of the Bal Tabarin from her feet.

The night was cold and Tilly's street garments were thin. As the doorkeeper let her out into the street one of the eternal gray figures on the corner moved, only to fall back into the shadow. Tilly's mood was exalted. She felt in her purse and found 2 kronen, and, holding them out, she faced the shadow. She spoke no German, but her gesture needed no interpreter.

"For heaven's sake, go home and go to bed!" she said. "You make me nervous."

Tilly slept late the next morning. She crawled out into her cold room and put a handful of coal in the tile stove, lighting it with kindlings the size of matches and a bit of paper. Then she went back to bed until the fire should make an impression on the temperature of the cold room, and sitting up, with her ulster around her shoulders, she examined her feet.

They were covered with scratches from the rose thorns of the night before, and one toe had been badly cut by glass. Not only that, but a streak of red ran from the toe up to the arch of Tilly's foot. Tilly looked at it in dismay.

"Wouldn't that scald you?" she demanded, plaintively, aloud.

She sat for some time looking at the foot. In Tilly's business feet are of primary importance, meaning as they do clothing to wear, a shelter over one's head, and pension at, say, 30 kronen, or $6, a week. Not that Tilly's pension was worth that sum, but Tilly's occupation being precarious as well as dubious, and times being hard, as they always are in Austria, she paid the usual percentage of her youth, inexperience, and friendlessness. So now she looked at her right foot and whistled.

She stepped out onto the cold wood floor. Both feet were painful, the right one hardly more than the left. She got a rag and some cold cream and tied up the cut, and then hobbled to the bell and rang for her coffee. To supplement the meager pension coffee and roll—for Tilly was a healthy young animal—she got an egg from the washstand drawer, and filled a tin cup with water from the pitcher. The little red, white, and blue bouquet came out with the water, and Tilly picked it up and looked at it.

The flowers and her bad foot, and not having had her coffee yet, which is enough to make the strongest soul pallid, got rather on her nerves. She put the egg inside the stove to cook, and then she sat down, with her ulster over her nightgown, and looked the said pallid soul in the face. She had been a fool, and she knew it. If she had pleased Weininger last night he would have looked after her until her foot got better. And now here she was, far from home—Tilly was vague about how far she was from home, but it was far enough—and out of a job. Why? Because a man she would never see again—and she wished to heaven she'd never laid eyes on him—had smiled at her across the Bal Tabarin.

Tilly's egg cooked quite hard and her coffee, put down with a slam outside her door, grew cold while she sat there hating the young man. Why shouldn't a girl dance in her bare legs? Didn't dozens of girls do it? But what was the use of sitting there like a fool, anyhow? She'd never dance again. She'd probably lie there and starve, or they would take her to the Allgemeines Krankenhaus and cut off her leg. At this Tilly cried a little, and ate her egg, cooked as hard as a stone.

She cleaned up her room, having a strong instinct for tidiness, and she soaked her foot in hot water. By noon she was more cheerful, and she manicured her nails. But her foot was worse. She could hardly walk. Dancing was out of the question, perhaps for a week, possibly more.

She sat before her shabby toilet table, with her heavy brown hair about her shoulders, and looked at herself in the glass, and went over the situation. She knew she was pretty; dressed like the women in the boxes the night before, she would have been beautiful. She even put her hair up in a great loose knot, as she had seen the woman with the diamond collar wear it, and slipped a pink garter around as a bandeau. The effect was ravishing.

Whereupon Tilly took the garter and put it in the stove, with a feeling of purifying her thoughts and putting temptation behind her, and was obliged to tie up her stocking with an old ribbon.

She limped out to the pension dining room, and ate her boiled meat and fruit compote and creamed carrots, and afterwards she told the landlady, with the aid of a German dictionary, that she had been "fired," causing great confusion in that person's breast, until she learned that "fired" did not mean combustion and that Tilly meant "dismissed." Whereat the confusion ceased and became purpose, said purpose being to get rid of Tilly as soon as possible. This she did, in gestures that required no dictionary.

Tilly crowded a shoe over her aching foot, put on her ulster, gathered up her shabby little muff, and limped out. She had not a krone to her name, and she was a vague but sufficient number of miles—somewhere in the thousands—from home. Although "home" to Tilly meant the United States, "home," as consisting of so many rooms with hot and cold water, cabinet mantels, and cemented cellar, was something she did not possess.

She went to the Prater that afternoon, and sat on a bench watching the carriages go by. Once she saw the woman who had worn the bandeau the night before. She was in ermine from head to foot, hat, muff, and long coat. Pinned to her muff was a great cluster of fresh violets. Tilly's contemptuous smile was a bit tremulous. She had nothing to eat, of course, and her foot was hurting more—she hoped it was only the cold.

At dusk an officer in uniform, sauntering by, stopped and looked at her. Then he said something in German; Tilly was glad she did not understand. She looked past him frigidly, and he went on, shrugging his shoulders. He had only asked her if she was cold and would she like a cup of coffee, but Tilly was in arms against the world. Perhaps, most of all, Tilly was in arms against herself. She was afraid of where hunger and cold and loneliness might drive her. She was alone in Vienna; she had no friends and no money. She could not even speak the language. No doubt there were places, even in that most medieval of cities, where she might have applied for help and received it. But Tilly's idea of relief was the actors' fund on the other side of the globe.

At 10 o'clock that night Tilly limped to the Bal Tabarin and asked to see the barmaid. The doorkeeper would not admit her, and said roughly in bad English that the barmaid was not there. Tilly did not believe him. She staggered away, back to her bench in the park, and lapsed into a sort of stupor from cold and discouragement.

It was almost midnight when a policeman aroused her and made her move on. She was acutely wretched. Her foot was increasingly painful. Long before she had unfastened the buttons, but the torture of the swollen toe persisted. She was not starving, but she was weak with hunger and numb with cold. Still, her determination did not give way. All that was gone was her perspective; she could see only two ways out of her wretchedness, and one was unthinkable. The other—?

She turned toward the Prater lake and made her way there slowly along a snow covered path. She was shaking with fright, but her determination held. There were only two ways out. This was one, the other being unthinkable. She said, over and over, mechanically, "I'll die first." She even heard herself saying it.

And so, limping and shivering, she reached the bank of the Prater lake.

She would not look at the water. She put her muff on the ground, and tried with her stiff fingers to take out her hat pins. She was past thinking; certainly there was no reason for saving the hat. And then, suddenly, her eyes fell on the lake, and she broke into choking, hysterical laughter.

This way was closed. The lake was frozen solid.

Having seen his sister and her husband off for the opera, Sullivan had his evening free. He went to a theater, and found his meager knowledge of German, complicated with the atrocious Wiener dialect, inadequate. Had he been quite frank with himself, he would have acknowledged that he was only passing the time until the Bal Tabarin opened, after the opera.

Sullivan had thought, at frequent intervals during the day, of Tilly Reilly—not, of course, that he called her Tilly Reilly. He had thought mostly of her eyes, eyes that did not belong to the Bal Tabarin, eyes that had smiled frankly into his, eyes that had dropped demurely as she danced. And the dance! The daintiness of it, the modesty which made her slim young legs and feet, in their scant white draperies, so childish! And this flower of spring in that hothouse of vice!

Sullivan went to the Bal Tabarin. He was early. Instead of a loge, he took a table near the center of the room, and sat back, smoking a cigaret and watching the place fill up, first with citizens bringing portly wives and ordering cheap Austrian wines, then officers, students in corps caps, a loge full of Chinese from the embassy, and last, for effect, the aristocracy of the half world, who came here, night after night, showing their beauty in the loges like merchants shrewdly placing their goods on display.

Sullivan found them uninteresting. He was much more absorbed in the dancing floor. From where he sat he could see how the heavy boots of the Russian dancers had splintered the wood. What a place for that child in her bare feet! And last night there had been broken glass.

He watched with more eagerness than he would have cared to admit for Tilly. With the informality of the cabaret, the performers lounged around the doorways or mixed with the crowd. At a table in the corner three English girls, who did a clog dance and sang an English music hall song or two, sat talking together. One of them was crocheting; one, a thin girl, wore a woolen shawl over her shoulders and coughed steadily. Their costumes were dirty, their eyes hard and calculating.

The Apache dancers did their turn, with much pulling and twisting, much flying of skirts and revealing of hideous lingerie and thick cotton stockings. A colored boy, fresh from Georgia, sang ragtime to the mad enthusiasm of the crowd. But Tilly did not appear. Sullivan ordered tobacco, another pint of white wine. The atmosphere was reeking; the incessant uproar of the orchestra got on his nerves. When it became clear that the program had reached its end and was about to repeat, Sullivan got up and sauntered to the bar. He had seen Tilly talking to the barmaid the night before.

But the barmaid was a different one, a black haired French girl. She said, with a shrug of her shoulders, that the Fräulein was krank and was not there tonight. She knew nothing of Tilly, and made poor work of understanding him. In a sort of a rage of disappointment he got his hat and overcoat and left the building. His anger was partly at least at himself, that he should be so interested in this chit of a girl who was doubtless, as his brother-in-law had said, "a little devil with the eyes of a saint"; anger that he should have made himself conspicuous by asking for her, that he should be leaving with a feeling of failure at not having seen her.

He refused a cab. A fine white snow was falling in the narrow streets. At the corner a woman was standing, head bent to the storm, looking, in the wind, like some gray night bird, waiting and ominous. With a shudder of disgust Sullivan buttoned up his coat and turned to start.

He had taken perhaps a dozen steps when a slim figure stepped out from the shadow of the building and put a timid hand on his arm. Sullivan stopped sharply and shook off the hand. The light from a street lamp at that moment, by some caprice of the wind, cleared of snow, fell on the girl's face. It was Tilly, Tilly, quivering, as white as chalk.

Sullivan faced her, almost as white as she. When she saw him, or perhaps before she saw him, the horror of what she was doing came over the girl like a cloud.

"Mother of God!" she gasped, and, turning, ran, with all the speed of her cold limbs and aching feet, down the street, with Sullivan after her.

He overtook her in a dozen strides, caught her by the shoulder, and wheeled her about to face him. Even in that instant his anger had turned to pity.

"I'm not going to hurt you, child," he said. "I am only—what are you doing out here in the storm?"

Tilly swayed somewhat and closed her eyes. Desperate as she was, she felt the shaken depths in the man's voice.

"I am going to take you home." Tilly stirred at that.

"Home!" The word brought bitterness with it. She jerked her arm free. "You let me go!" she cried shrilly. "If I want to go to the devil, it's my business, isn't it? I don't want pity. I only want to be let alone."

Sullivan looked down at her. His eyes were still kind, but something had faded out of them; perhaps it was faith that had gone.

"To think," he said slowly, "that last night I thought—I would have sworn that you——"

And at that, without warning, Tilly burst into loud, hysterical sobbing.

"I never did it in my life before!" she choked. "Never! Never!"

The snow was falling heavily now. Out of the white wall an occasional cab emerged to lose itself a moment later. Laughter and music and the rhythm of dancing feet came through doors that opened and shut. In the night city no one is curious; each is intent on his own affairs. And so, undisturbed, Sullivan let Tilly cry out her tortured young soul on his shoulder.

After a time she grew quieter. He hardly knew what to do. He could take her to his sister—meant to, of course—but not at that hour of the night. He must get her under shelter somewhere. Asked where she lived, she said, "Nowhere," and told her brief little story between dry sobs. Sullivan, at his wits' end, called a cab and helped her into it. It was when she crossed the pavement that he saw how lame she was. At the memory of her slim bare feet and the splintered floor at the Bal Tabarin he swore under his breath.

He took her to a small hotel which the cabman, with a leer, suggested. The character of the place troubled Sullivan no whit. He wanted to see the girl comfortable, and fed, and, more than all, mentally normal again. There was no lift. He and a portier assisted her up the stairs and laid her on a bed in a tawdry little room. Although it was after 2 in the morning the portier brought some hot soup, and Sullivan, drawing up a chair, fed her by spoonfuls.

Tilly lay back with closed eyes and open, childish mouth. When the soup was done she looked at Sullivan gratefully.

"I didn't know there were men like you in the world." She held out her hand to him, and he took it between both of his.

"I thought all men were rotters," she said, sighing happily. "You—you're the best man I have ever known." Sullivan flushed uncomfortably.

"I guess the average is higher than you think," he said. "Sure you are warm enough?"

"Fine!"

"Foot feel better?"

"It aches—some," she admitted.

"Don't you think you'd better take off your shoe and look at it?"

"I will——" she hesitated. "If you will turn your back."

Sullivan gravely went to the window and stood, his back to her, while she took off her shoe, with a sigh of relief, and then her stocking. The foot was swollen. "It looks pretty bad. Would you—perhaps you'd better look and see if it is poisoned."

Sullivan came over and looked down judicially. Then he stooped and poked lightly at the swelling with awkward fingers. "It looks bad enough, poor little foot!" he said, gently. "We'll have a doctor at it in the morning."

"I can't lose it," wistfully. "If I can't dance again, I—" Her chin quivered.

Sullivan looked at her.

"What if you can't dance again?"

Tilly met his eyes.

"I'll starve to death," she said, simply.

She went to sleep almost immediately after that, one arm thrown up over her head, the other across her childish breast. Sullivan lowered the light, creaking around on his toes to avoid waking her. Then he drew a chair close beside the bed, and sat looking at her, at her eyelids, blue veined and black lashed, at the purity of her mouth, the sweetness and character of her chin, at the swollen foot, lying on a pillow, with the fine scratches on the sole. And, with the intuition that comes to a man so surely because so seldom, Sullivan knew that the scratches were all of evil that Tilly had carried away from the Bal Tabarin.

Heavy footsteps outside on the tiled corridor threatened to rouse the girl from her sleep. He rose and stood looking down at her. He had an impulse to stoop and kiss her on the forehead, but he did not. Instead he carried his chair into the hall and sat down, sentinel fashion, just outside the door.

The light from a gas lamp wavered in the draft, faintly illuminating the stone stairs, with their twisted iron baluster. Laughter and music came up the staircase well, but he heard neither. His thoughts had gone ahead to a future in which this girl, this waif he had gathered from the streets, should have her part; to take her back to the homeland, to care for her and cherish her, to see her growing into that purity of womanhood that was her birthright, and then, perhaps, some day to go to her and ask for her love—

It was almost morning. In the Bal Tabarin the girl from Budapest was dancing for the last time. The little bells on her garters tinkled as she swayed. Late as it was, the wild Hungarian music still rioted. As she ceased dancing an army officer in uniform presented her with a glass of champagne.

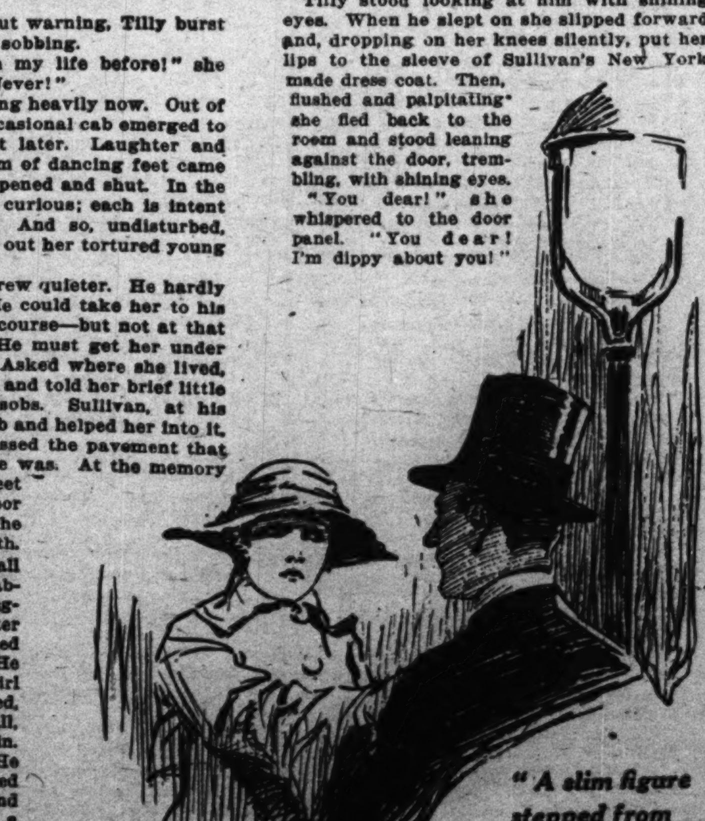
Tilly roused from sleep at dawn and lay a moment, remembering. Then, with her heart beating fast, she limped to the door and opened it. Outside Sullivan was sleeping in his chair, his head dropped forward.

Tilly stood looking at him with shining eyes. When he slept on she slipped forward and, dropping on her knees silently, put her lips to the sleeve of Sullivan's New York made dress coat. Then, flushed and palpitating she fled back to the room and stood leaning against the door, trembling, with shining eyes.

"You dear!" she whispered to the door panel. "You dear! I'm dippy about you!"



"A slim figure stepped from the shadow—"

IMPULSE ONE AND TWO

by Gordon Seagrove

GOETHE STREET is one of those thoroughfares that start badly and end well; where it begins its drab career one can get a room with soiled curtains, a narrow bed, and occasional heat for something like $4 a week; where it ends a view of the lake, a dumb waiter, steam heat, and a butler may be had for $6,000 a year.

It was through no fault of Charlie's that he lived near the beginning, for he was one of the most ambitious of the clerks in Wesson & Wesson's and his dreams often took wings and away from his salary of $18 a week.

"You'd think," he said, casting a quizzical eye at the register direction, "that the old girl might warm up the place, especially when a fellow's planning the first real party he ever had—wouldn't you, now?"

The old girl was Miss Ruck, the clearing house for Charlie's weekly $4, a sophistical woman she, who believed in nothing but legal tender. As to the party, Charlie had been saving his pennies for it since the early fall, a task that involved some sacrifice and a Spartan application to the theory that hunger exists in mind and mind alone. If there was one thing that Charlie was counting on that heightened the chill of his room it was the thought of that party; deserved it, of course he did, he told himself; when a fellow works like a Trojan and plays little he is entitled to some recreation and he proposed that New Year's eve should see him stepping here and there among the lights, wining and dining (Charlie read that phrase somewhere) in the tapestried ballroom of a fairly noted hotel and dancing with Miss Georgia Deremo.

This young lady, since the truth must out, was the prettiest girl in Wesson & Wesson's. At first Charlie had thought her a bit despotic, a bit selfish, but just the same when he punched the pillow in Goethe street hers was the last image in his mind. It had taken a lot of courage to ask her to go to the movies with him, and he remembered that his soul had shriveled when she had answered:

"Really, I can't. Mr. Ackley is going to call for me in his car this evening."

Charlie had bit his lip then; he felt that she was laughing at him and his pitiful little offer of the movies. Weeks later he had tried again, this time successfully. Charlie was one of those persistent and optomistic souls, and perhaps that was the reason Georgia liked him, a thing which she took great pains to conceal. Thus it happened that Charlie was counting a small roll of bills and dreaming of clinching his friendship with the admirable Georgia on this particular night.

"Thirty dollars," he said musingly. "That means no suit this winter. And last year's overcoat. But it ought to do the thing up right even to a few flowers. Now let's see, ten for dinner——"

Charlie stopped suddenly and would have cocked two homely ears alertly forward had he been a dog. But he wasn't. He was only human, which is worse. For a moment, then, he hesitated before he put his mouth close to the buff wall paper.

"Hullo in there," he said gently, "is there anything the matter?"

Came nothing but silence in answer—silence and a sob, this time not so tumultuous. Charlie heard it. "You've got to stop; it lowers the temperature."

But for all his flippancy as he listened there Charlie's heart was touched. Girls, he knew, never wept simply because they were cold or their feet hurt or their laundry didn't come, but because they had lost their jobs or were homesick or just plain lonesome.

"Charlie," said he to himself, "you must look into this." And, leaving the wall, he hurriedly threw open a battered trunk, took from it a time whipped sweater, a frayed dressing gown, reached a gaunt arm upward, turned the gas low, and sped into the hall. There he knocked at her door, and, hearing no answer, walked in.

The room was a sad counterpart of his own, and half way across the muddy carpet he stopped short. Across the bed, her cheap little hat awry on a mass of corn colored hair, head pillowed despairingly in her arms, lay the source of the sobs.

"Pardon me——" he began diffidently.

At this the girl looked up.

"Who—who are you?" she demanded rather faintly. Charlie smiled a homely, disarming smile.

"Why, I'm the chap next door. A fellow can't hear a lady crying on a winter's night and not do something." Then, remembering the bathrobe and sweater suddenly, he said: "Here, put these on!"

The girl obeyed, still looking at him in a helpless and curious way. Charlie sensed it at once.

"You needn't be frightened," he explained. "I never bite little girls. My name is Charlie Johnson, and I work at Wesson & Wesson's, and I just wanted to know if there was anything I could do."

The girl hesitated as if she would accept his confidence and Charlie noted that she was very young and very pretty—almost as pretty as Miss Deremo in some ways—and that something was distressing her very much.

"You'd better talk," suggested Charlie insistently; "you'll freeze if you don't."

For a moment she sat silently, drying the few remaining tears, then, biting her lip, blurted out: "I'm worried, and I am alone, and I'm—I'm lonesome."

Charlie couldn't understand that last, for his discovery, to quote the favorite phrase at Wesson & Wesson's, was a "knockout."

"And I'm a little fool!" the girl confessed suddenly and with apparent belief. "And I never knew it until just now!"

She hesitated after the revelation and sat silently on the edge of the narrow bed as if doubtful whether to go on. Outside the wind slapped an icy hand on the claboarding and blew a polar breath that rattled the panes. Charlie saw her shiver, and then, as a sigh escaped her lips, she leaned forward and began speaking earnestly.

"Did you ever have a sweetheart?" she asked directly, questioning him, too, with her eyes, which were round and big and blue. Charlie nodded, and would have liked to tell her of his aspirations toward the belle of his workaday bailiwick.

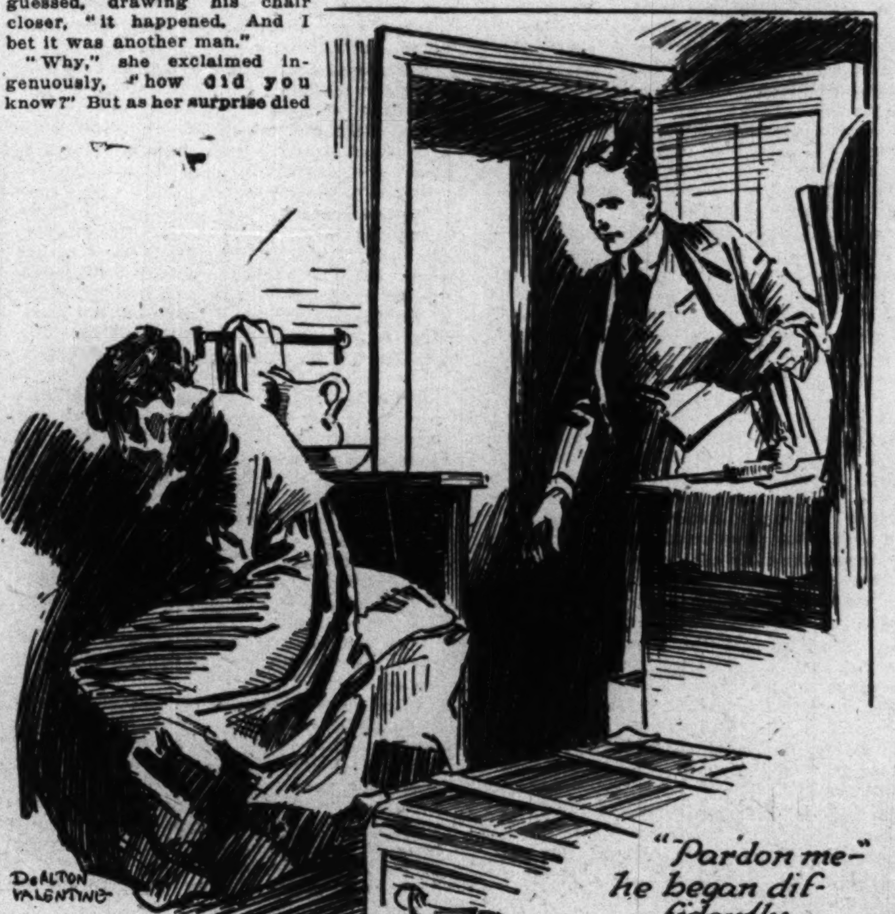
"Well," she said faintly, with a faraway look in her eyes, "I had one, too, and he lives down in Minuteville, where I used to work. It isn't a big town, but I guess now it was big enough for me, and I guess Harry—my sweetheart's name is Harry—was too big for me. Why, when I think of how fine and square he treated me, how nice he was, it makes me ashamed. We—we were——"

"Engaged?" put in Charlie. She nodded.

"For more than a year," she returned quietly. "We were going to be married New Year's day—day after tomorrow that is, isn't it?—and Harry had the house all picked out and the furniture ordered, and then . . ."

Her words trailed off weakly, and Charlie, who sometimes let his imagination grow active, took up her sentence. "Then," he guessed, drawing his chair closer, "it happened. And I bet it was another man."

"Why," she exclaimed ingenuously, "how did you know?" But as her surprise died



"Pardon me—" he began diffidently.

Charlie thought he could see something like a tear in the deep shadows beneath her brows. "It was a man, but, most of all, it was me! Me and my darn fool temper and some silly ideas!"

"Yes," answered Charlie doubtfully. "Such as? Maybe if you'd tell me all, as they say in the stories, I could help."

There was that ring of sincerity and realness in his voice that must have won her, for she began talking rapidly.

"Goodness!" she resumed briskly. "I loved Harry. But I guess I didn't love him with all of me. You see, I had these ideas about wanting to see something else besides Minuteville and its dinky little Main street and the Methodist church. I'd always lived there, and I was sick and tired of it. Then there was another thing, a sort of secret ambition that nobody but I and my diary knew and that I really never expected to realize—I wanted to go into the movies! I sort of half believed that if I ever had a chance I'd make good, because people had said that I could act——"

"The nerve!" ejaculated Charlie. "I thought they'd quit using that old one!"

"Anyway," she retorted, "I somehow believed them. Then one day I confided in Harry what my ambitions were. I wish I hadn't now, because he laughed at me, told me I was crazy—those were his very words—and ended up by sneering at me. And that—that made me mad!"

Charlie nodded his understanding; he had one of his own.

"So mad that Harry and I had the worst quarrel you ever heard of. O, it was frightful, and I flounced out without making up and so mad I could scarcely find the keys on my typewriter. That evening I walked down to the hotel and met him—the other fellow. The hotel clerk introduced him as Mr. Davies, and he said he was the head of a motion picture school——"

"This," muttered Charlie to himself, "is the villain of the piece. I know it!"

"'Elsie,' he said to me—rather fresh I thought—'I'd give my right eye to see you in the movies! Such eyes, such hair, and talent—I can see that sticking out all over you.' Well, that made me listen, and when we went to the drug store for some hot cocoa he told me that if I cared to try it he could put me into a studio at once as an extra girl and teach me evenings. Of course he said that I would have to have a little money, about $100, to defray the cost of tuition in his school. 'But don't you think you're throwing your money away, Elsie,' he said. 'You've got talent, and it's an investment.' And because I was still mad at Harry I listened."

"You were just going to show Harry a thing or two, eh?" Charlie put in. Elsie nodded dolorously enough.

"Of course I knew I'd never be great, but I just wanted to get away from Minuteville and see—I just wanted to see—and so that evening I drew out the money that I'd saved to help Harry."

"Wait a minute!" cried Charlie sharply. "Didn't you talk it over with your mother and father first. Didn't you——"

"They're dead," answered Elsie shortly.

"No sisters or brothers?"

"Well, yes," she returned retrospectively. "I had a sister. But she don't count, because we quarreled a year ago and she left home. It was funny, too, but we quarreled about Harry. She wanted him and I did, too, and after she came up here she wrote back to say she was sorry for what she'd said, but I never answered her letters, and now I don't know where she is. If I could find her maybe——"

Her words ended and Charlie felt suddenly very sorry for her; she was so slight, so young, so lost in the mazes of her problem.

"So you took your money," he suggested, "and then—what?"

Elsie leaned forward and a little cry of shame, of mortification, of sorrow, came from between her full red lips. "I came here with Mr. Davies without even telling Harry good-by because—because I was still mad."

"Poor kid!" he said gently. "And I suppose this Davies made"—Charlie was trying to make it easy—"I suppose he——"

"Yes, but that's all—just tried. He kissed me and I slapped his face and told him to behave."

"Good!"

"And maybe that's the reason when the train pulled into the station he said: "Good-by." And before I knew it he was gone with my money—the money that was to go into Harry's house and mine. And then I cried."

What must have happened after that Charlie knew all too well from his own experience; the long, dreary walks looking for work, the frigid glances of an arctic people, the roar of a strange city, the drab bedroom, the last dollar, and the feeling that even hope was gone.

And as he looked at Elsie there on the little white bed crying gently to herself Charlie knew that she wasn't thinking of how cold it was and how great is the life of the cinema queen but that behind that veil of tears was the picture of plain, homely Harry and Main street and the Methodist church and a little house that Harry had picked out one day when May was in the air and heart and hope beat high. And he knew, too, that Elsie—pretty little inefficient Elsie—had learned that experience never taps lightly, but strikes deep and cruelly and hard, and that she wished with all her heart just to feel the arms of honest, thoughtful Harry about her again and know that she was forever safe.

"But he wouldn't have me now," she said hopelessly after a while when she had almost dried her eyes. "He wouldn't take me back. I know. He's jealous, awfully jealous, Harry is. He'd never believe that I didn't care for the other man. He—O, I wish I hadn't been a fool—and now no money! O, what am I going to do?"

One despairing little foot went out in revolt, kicked a nearby taboret, and from its surface, greasy with age and utility, sent a bottle crashing to the floor. As Harry picked it up his eyes dilated and he started back in amazement and horror, for across its white label were the words "Corrosive sublimate."

"Elsie," he asked, his voice strained and out of key, "you didn't—you couldn't have thought—of that!"

Elsie nodded. Then she started as she saw Charlie draw back his arm and heard the bottle break into a thousand fragments against the heatless register. The next instant she felt Charlie's big, cold hands holding her own tiny ones and she looked up in alarm.

"Elsie," he cried almost fiercely, as he dragged her to her feet, "you and the great soulless city do not mix. You don't even speak. Elsie, you've got to make a go of it—you and Harry!"

"But you don't know Harry. He's like all the Huffmans."

"The Huffmans!" Charlie's jaw dropped and his pulse rose. "Say, your Harry doesn't wear a carved ivory lion for a watch fob and say 'Dammit Daisy' when he gets excited, does he? Does he?"

"That's Harry!" cried Elsie. "You don't know him?"

"Know him?" Charlie almost shouted. "He roomed with me two years and I lent him money. What's more I licked him to a frazzle once when he got uppish and he's loved me ever since. Now, Elsie, get your hat on straight, throw off that sweater, and stand still till I get back here. It'll only be a jiffy."

He fairly bounded out of the room, and when he returned to the hall, overcoated and hatted, he stopped at the telephone to call a certain number. It was Miss Georgia Deremo's number, and when he had told her that their New Year's dream of joy was not to be and had hung up the receiver after some spirited words his face looked long and glum and dolorous.

"That fellow Ackley," he muttered. "So she'll go with him. And he's got a car."

But the sound of a girl's skirts in the next room bestirred him, and he went on to behold the bewildered Elsie, her tear marks smothered under the talcum prerogative, standing on the threshold of her shabby little room. She met him with a curious smile, a trusting smile withal.

"What," she said uncertainly, "what are you going to do?"

"Do?" exclaimed Charlie. "What in the name of your favorite breakfast food would any back room Galahad do in a case like this? I'm going to send you home with $28 that's been kicking around my room six months looking for employment, and with the other two I'm going to send a thousand word night letter to Harry Huffman, and if he doesn't meet you at the station with a bunch of roses and the ring—but he will. Harry's a just youth—and he knows I pack a terrible punch!"

Then he gently shoved her ahead of him down the stairs and, with a face half glad, half sad, followed, carrying her tiny bag, empty now but for a toothbrush and a cotton waist.

An hour later, blue with the cold, he found himself back in the shabby Goethe street habitat, and, as he thought of what had transpired his heart beat with a strange elation in spite of what Miss Deremo had said, in spite of the fact that the New Year's day would find him home with last month's magazine, in spite of even Ackley and his car, for it seemed to him, fresh as it yet was in his memory, that above the resonant melody of the bell on the train that bore Elsie away he could hear faintly another melody, an older and sweeter melody that Mendelssohn had done, and that soon would sound in Minuteville.

His dreams ended suddenly half way up the stairs, for Miss Ruck's nasal voice was addressing him. "A phone call, Mr. Johnson," she said. "She called while you were out an' says to tell you that she's sorry an' that you would please be so kind as to call at her house New Year's eve. I think she says her name was Deremo."

Something in Charlie seemed to sing with joy; it was as if somebody had patched a broken harp and then picked from its gentle strings a celestial melody. After all, then, Georgia did care—enough to forswear Ackley, enough to forswear others, enough to want him to call on New Year's eve of all nights!

Breaking into a gay whistle he started toward his room, but ere he reached it a cold draft smote his limber legs. It came through the open door in the room of late departed guest.

Then Charlie remembered—his bathrobe, his sweater—for the second time that night he was again inside the shabby room. Hurriedly he seized the two garments from the bed, and as he turned to leave he saw upon the muddy carpet a plain white card struggling against the unpleasant greenish light.

Charlie bent and picked it up. Then he whistled long and earnestly. For the card had only this to say:

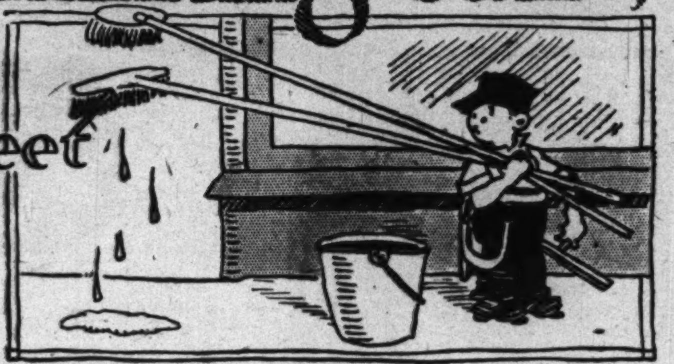
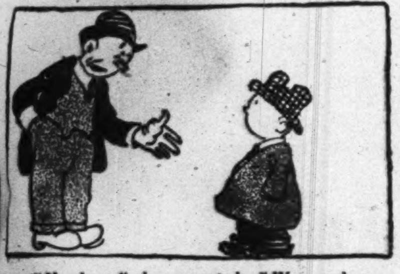
"The Occasion For Quick Thinking Came, All Right," Says Oney Fred Sweet



He Just Had Two Minutes to Spare After Finishing the Job Before the Lawyer Got Back.

NOW that it's too late, I can see half a dozen ways how I could have prevented the thing from happening as it did. You can go along about so far, whistling and singing and gay, and then all of a sudden you make some bonehead play and realize th t life is a stern proposition with a lot of bitter in it.

And you never know just when you are going to make a bonehead play. Fate makes the plays for you, no matter how careful you may be. Of course, if one lived alone on a desert isle in a nice climate where there was never anybody to get sore, things would probably run along smoothly day in and day out. But eking out an existence along with two or three million other folks is quite a different matter; it means heartaches one time or another.



"No boss," he repeated.. "We work cn a combination basis."

It was Lucky Read who influenced me into the window washing business. His chief recommendation and the point that appealed to me was that a window washer has no boss.

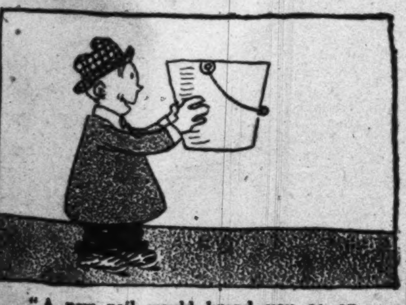
"No boss?" I echoed, with a grin.

"No boss," he repeated. "We work on a commission basis."

"Now understand, we don't contract for work," he hastened, when he saw my grin vanish. "The firm does that and we get a commission on each window we clean. We don't need to be out of work winter or summer, because nearly every office building has its windows cleaned once a week and factories once every two weeks; saves artificial light. Some buildings have their own crews, but there must be 250 professional window washers in Chicago outside the regular crews. A good man can do 125 windows a day if they're all in one building."

"How—how about, is there any danger?" I asked, still skeptical.

"There hasn't been a man killed at it for the past two months," enthused Lucky. "Of course, you don't want to be flirting with the stenographers while you're stepping outside to fasten your harness; you're apt to forget to hook to the window in your confusion. And be careful always not to splash any water on the stenographers' waists. There's screws on the sides of every window, you know—law demands 'em above first floors—and all you have to do is snap on your harness and you can work just as if you were on the ground."



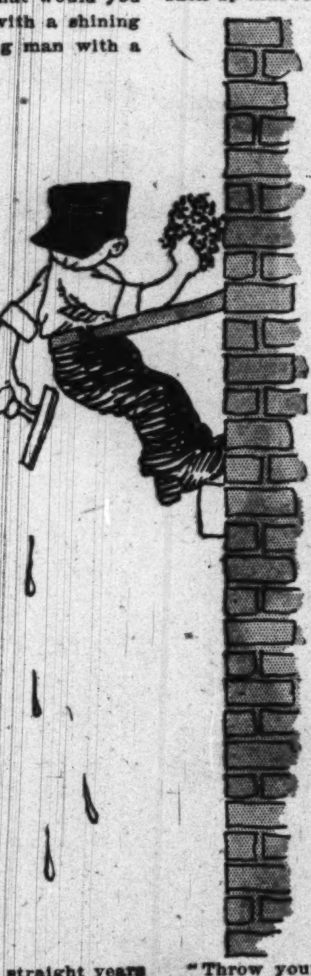
"A new pail would brand you as an amateur," cautioned Lucky.

"And the wind don't bother you hanging that way outside a twentieth story window?"

"Well, it does feel windy sometimes, and you're apt to take cold stepping off a hot radiator out onto a sill that's ankle deep with snow, but if the architect has left a wide sill and the wood ain't rotten where the screws are fixed, I don't mind a cold, because that's something you can shake off."

And by painting everything rosy like that, Lucky overcame any objections I might have to becoming a "dry ragger." He also overcame my desire to go out and buy a new pail.

"A new pail would brand you as an amateur," cautioned Lucky. "A new pail's got to be smashed out of shape, anyhow, in order to sit on a sill; and what would you think of a music professor with a shining new music roll or a traveling man with a glossy grip? Another thing, forget that you've got to keep using clean water. Women out at private houses sometimes object because we don't change the water often, but it's the dirty water that does the best work. One pail of water ought to clean seventy windows; the grit that you gather helps out."



I was in hopes that our first job would be a ground floor proposition, but when we got to it Lucky dragged me into an elevator. Every time we passed a higher floor number I had certain misgivings, but by keeping still and looking unconcerned you can get away with a good deal, and I know by the way Lucky continued his flippant conversation that he didn't sense my true feelings.

"Once a window washer, always a window washer," Lucky explained. "First you get into it and then you quit and then you come back to it and stick. I've been at it ten years steady, but Joseph Wasek's got the record—twenty-eight straight years in the game. High as we go? Well, I guess we'll have to get out."

"Maybe there's a flight or two more we could walk up," I suggested, when we left the elevator.

"No," said Lucky. "There's a lawyer's office in here to start on first. He's out to lunch between 12 and 12:30, and it's 12:10 now. When you open the window, be careful his papers don't blow off his desk and all over the room. I'll come in and strap you up and get you started, and then I'll go to work myself on the other side of the building."

Somehow, as Lucky strapped the harness on me I felt as if he was about to send me to an electric chair or something equally as fatal. I spoke but once. I asked him if he was sure he never had any accidents.

"Not to speak of," he grunted, amid tugs at the leather belt. "But I suppose I ought to explain that there are times in this business when quick thinking is called for. A few weeks ago, for instance, I was out on a ten story window and one of the snaps came out of the screws at the side of the window. I dropped the length of the rope, of course, and dangled. Looking up, I could see that the other screw had bent under the sudden jerk of my weight and I wasn't sure it would hold out. Well, I did some quick thinking; I knew I would have to go back up that rope very carefully. You want to do that. If the rope snaps loose on one side, climb back so as not to jerk the other screw out. There, now, the belt's tight enough. Always carry the chamois over your shoulder and don't make any more movements with the sponge and squeegee than are necessary. The fewer movements the more windows."

Lucky seemed to think it queer because I stepped so cautiously out onto the sill of the window he had opened.

I had not proceeded far before I turned back and asked if both the ropes couldn't be snapped onto the screws before I stepped out, but Lucky declared it wasn't practical, and he also gave evidence that he was in a hurry to get to the other side of the building.

So, after clasping the rope on one side, I stepped out onto the sill, without looking down, and, once out on the sill, snapped the other side. All this time I was concentrating my mind on other things, and I still clung to the middle sash of the window.

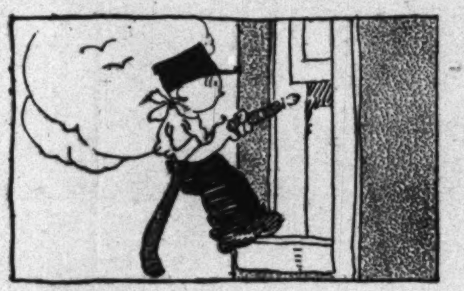
"Throw yourself back and let your feet rest on the sill," yelled Lucky, letting the window down and leaving me outside alone with the noises of the street floating up.

It was like taking a plunge in cold water to comply. But the ropes held me, and gradually I leaned over until I could see the street below. As soon as I observed the distance to the street, my legs began to shake and my arms to shake; my stomach began to change places with my lungs, and my heart started to beat on a new schedule. About all you could see of the people on the street below was their hats bobbing along. They seemed wholly unmindful of the fact that I dangled above them.

I don't know who the woman was who got the stray drops from the first spongeful of water I shakily handled, but from my birdseye view she seemed to take it for granted that it had started to rain and never so much as glanced upward. If any one had looked up and said anything I could have sassed them back as strong as I wanted to and felt perfectly safe.

Apparently thinking I was getting on all right, Lucky left, and I finished the window in short order. The job might not have been satisfactory to the lawyer, but it passed my inspection, and I went on to the next one. The next window had the lawyer's name lettered on it—partly on one pane and partly on the other. The building was an old one and the window had long since ceased to slide up and down or catch at certain points in the thin frame, or do any of those things that a reputable window is supposed to do. In order to get outside, I had to hold the window up, and, once outside, I had to lower it with care.

That is, I should have lowered it with care. Maybe I was too careful. Anyhow, I must have pressed too strongly against the glass or something when it banged back to the sill, because a crashing, crunching sound accompanied its fall that I didn't like at all.



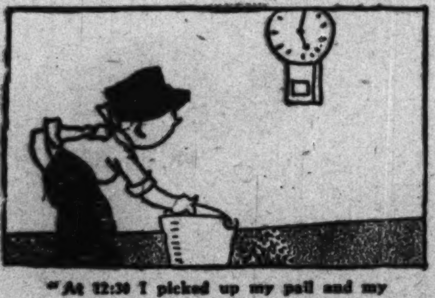
"I stepped out onto the sill, without looking down."

Maybe you think a window can't be broken thus easily, but I swear up and down that this one did, and I am almost sure I didn't strike it with my pail or hit it with my feet.

There was no use skipping over the fact. Clear across the lower side of the pane there gaped a crack that had not been there a minute before. I leaned down to study the extent of the damage. As I did so, all hope fled. It was no dream affair with a happy ending. That window was not its former self. Tenderly, I tried to soothe the gap together so it wouldn't be noticed, but in trying to force the cracked glass to meet a bit more naturally an entirely new crack, extending down from the top of the pane, came into being, and a three cornered hunk of glass fell completely out of the frame and clinked onto the floor inside.

Life may hold other tragedies, but I know of nothing that will produce more of a sinking sensation than comes from suddenly breaking somebody else's window and knowing that the guilt is about to be placed upon you. And matters are made much worse if the broken pane also ruins half of a name gorgeously lettered thereon.

From the appearance of the office, I was able to conjure up an impression of the occupant soon to arrive; the books in the cases looked very legal and stern. I tried to continue with the rest of the window, but my mind wasn't on my work. When the hands of the clock finally got to 12:23, I——

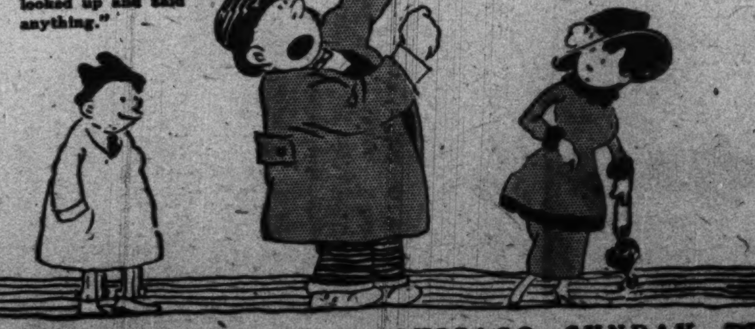


"At 12:30 I picked up my pail and my sponge and squeegee."

Well, I don't know whether the impression I conjured of that lawyer was correct or not. At 12:23 I picked up my pail and my sponge and squeegee, threw the chamois rag over my shoulder, and went to the other side of the building and hunted up Lucky. He was swung outside a sill, very much unconcerned as to the distance beneath him, and he hardly ceased swinging his cloth as I approached.

"All through with those windows?" he beamed.

"All through," I answered, taking off my harness and setting down my paraphernalia. "I just got word there's some one sick out to the house and I've got to hurry right home."



"I could have sassed them back if anyone had looked up and said anything."

THE TEENIE WEENIES

DISCOVER STRANGE TRACKS AROUND THE SHOE HOUSE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Old Soldier was always the first out of bed in the morning, and one day when he stepped out on the front porch to look at the thermometer he was much surprised to see strange tracks in the fresh snow about the Shoe House. He immediately called the General and the two Teenie Weenies carefully examined the prints and followed them quite a distance to where they led off into the deep woods.

"Well, we can't have anybody prowling around like this," announced the General. "Who knows, there might be a whole lot of them waiting back in the woods to attack us. I'll call out the army, that's what I'll do, and we'll trace these tracks down to the very end.

The General gave orders for the Teenie Weenie army to be in marching order as soon as possible, and the Cook quickly boiled a thimbleful of rice to fill the tiny knapsacks. The Teenie Weenies were filled with the greatest alarm and many a tiny heart beat fast beneath the new warm army overcoats. Only the infantry and the red cross divisions were called out, for the General wished to make a fast march and did not want to be held back by the heavy cannon, and besides it would take a long time to find a friendly mouse to pull it.

The little army followed the tracks for a long way down into the woods beneath the tall bushes, and suddenly they discovered a strange house standing beside a tiny stream that flowed down a little valley. The General quietly ordered part of the soldiers to guard the rear of the house while he drew the main part of the army up in front, and walking boldly up to the only door to the place he roared out in a loud voice; "In the name of the Teenie Weenie army I order those within this house to surrender."

Almost immediately a strange little man stepped out of the house and taking off his hat made a low bow.

"Sir," said the General, "we are the Teenie Weenies and we have gathered here to find out why you have been about our house without making yourself known."

"Greetings, friends, I am delighted to meet you," said the man. "My name is Rufus Rhyme. I'm a poet and I came here to this place last summer, and finding this teacup here I thatched the roof with grass and it has served me well as a most comfortable home. Last night while I was out taking a walk I chanced to see the light from your shoe house and I was much surprised to find Teenie Weenies living there. I had intended to come over this afternoon and make a formal call, but I am glad that you called on me first, even if you have called on me with the army."

"Well-er-er, you see," stammered the General, "we had no way of-er-er telling whether your tracks were of friend or foe."

"I would like to invite you all in to warm yourselves," said the poet, "but I'm afraid a teacup would scarcely hold an army."

The poet marched back to the Shoe House with the Teenie Weenies, where a dinner was given in his honor, and at the invitation of the General he agreed to come and live at Shoehurst for the rest of the winter.

DIGNITY of line and treatment are characteristic of the Byzantine period of art, and inspired by its beauty four magnificent creations for evening attire are exquisitely portrayed on this page.

Regal indeed is the adjacent gown, for bands of ermine—from time immemorial associated with the gorgeous robes of royalty—are combined with the sunset rose velvet from which it is fashioned. Much gold is used for the decoration of the overdress of pink satin on which tourmalines also appear wherever the pattern demands a stronger spot color. The decolletage is outlined with a band of ermine, and beneath the jeweled front bands of sunset rose velvet, like a miniature jacket, are drawn towards the front, where they are finished with a gem studded buckle. The train, originating beneath this pseudo coat, is gorgeously embroidered with many a thread of gold and exquisite tourmaline. The ornate headdress is made of a band of pink satin ornamented with jewels and threads of gold and topped with waving ospreys.

Equally ornate is the creation whose back view is illustrated. There is in this model an almost barbaric splendor that is often found in modern Russian dress which owes much to the influence of Byzantine art. The straightly cut skirt, not overburdened with fullness, is fashioned from nattier blue velvet bordered with a deep band of gray-blue satin which is embroidered with threads of silver and steel beads. The gorgeous train made of gray-blue satin, heavy with silver and steel embroidery, is hung from the shoulders. Round the waist line is a broad band of satin adorned with stitching of silver. The oval decolletage is outlined with a wisp of flesh colored tulle that lends a softening touch to the majestic gown.

The fourth gown reveals a more classic simplicity, for it is designed especially for the young girl whose youthful beauty needs no lavish decorations. Pale blue crepe de chine is the material from which this frock is evolved. Cut in two pieces that fall straight from the shoulders, it is outlined with straps of chiffon velvet in the same shade. These are embroidered with silver and pale blue stones, while a series of jewel trimmed straps are placed on the sides, so that graceful lines are achieved in this youthful model. A jeweled head band is set low on the forehead, while another strap attached at the center front is drawn across the top of the head and fastened at the back. The wrap is made of black chiffon velvet lined with blue and silver metal cloth and collared with a magnificent blue fox fur.

While the outer garb is remarkable for its sumptuousness of fabric and adornment, the lingerie of the hour is also fashioned from exquisite materials, including crepe de chine, voile du soie, and thin voile. The dainty combinations are plaited like some of the smartest new frocks. One interesting model in silk voile has the skirt made of cartridge plaits with a scalloped hem bound with pale blue satin. The bodice is elaborated with small scallops about the top and embroidered with tiny blue forget-me-nots. Ribbon shoulder straps and a knot of ribbon in the center front are the finishing touches of this pretty combination.

MEN AND WOMEN

THE intimate nature of the work itself makes manicuring a hazardous vocation for a girl. Only a strong willed, home trained girl should go in for it. The ideal manicurist is one who can listen to "jolly" if she has to and let it roll off as impersonally as the hangnails from the patron's fingers or she who by that subtle sixth sense can detect the trend of the male patron's mind and steer it around and past the dangerous grooves of conversation.

Manicurists.

A Juvenile Protective association officer in Chicago says that for the weak girl the work of manicuring is the short cut to delinquency. It takes but a couple of months to learn the work. Hotels and barber shops offer a percentage of employment to these girls. The patrons, of course, are men, and as a general thing men of a certain amount of means, for the poor man or the small salaried man is not often found among those present at the manicurist's table. The work begins with an intimacy which many men take advantage of if the girl be young and attractive. The salary more often than not is such as to make alluring a generous tip, and from that on to the easiest way is but a matter of more frequent calls, advances and favors accepted with each call.

Mayhap it will be judged puritanical and old fashioned to say anything in disapproval of the man and his pink tipped nails. But somehow one can not associate with the really big male person of fully matured years a willingness to consign his hand over to a woman to be made clean and rose tinted. Not that we wouldn't have his nails presentable! But surely it is not outside of a man's province to keep his own nails in shape.

Undoubtedly the city of brotherly love, the scene of the murder of the manicurist-model, Grace Roberts, has among its citizens today men who have breathed more easily and happily the last week for having applied simple and uncomplicated home measures to the care of their nails.

A Favorite Diversion of All Mankind.

To folk who believe that the seeress, clairvoyant, palmist, and soothsayer recruit their patrons from the grossly illiterate and superstitious, the clientele of Mme. de Thebes must have been surprising. She was the confidante of kings and queens. King Leopold, King Edward, the king of Greece, the infanta of Spain, and members of many other royal families of Europe were visitors at the destiny dealing apartment of this world known prophetess.

Over all the races of men since the beginning the passion to tear aside the curtain of time and peer at the secrets of tomorrow has been an absorbing one. The desire for the forbidden knowledge may be smothered and disguised to a certain extent, but in almost every human soul there is a profound curiosity as to their personal future and a belief that it would profit them were this curiosity satisfied.

No normal person is able to assume that his own future is to be colorless and dismal and unworthy of the brilliant art of prophecy. The healthier his egoism the stronger his conviction that delights and triumphs are waiting in ambush around the corner of the years. The unexpected we most confidently expect and a vague belief possesses us that the remarkable experiences destiny has arranged for us are in some occult way susceptible of disclosure.

Oddly enough, prophecies that relate to others find a reluctant credence by those who give to their own the greatest confidence and most rapturous agreement.

The most bungling amateur palmist can secure a breathless audience. The popularity of tea leaves, accounted the humblest aspect of occult science, and cards, of an equally low rating, is too high to be downed by the hard challenge of common sense.

Astrology has a strong lure, though few of those who affect to practice it can have mastered the vast amount of lore that belongs to the study of this ancient mystery. The number of requests Miss Doris Blake receives daily from readers of THE TRIBUNE for horoscopes would compel the credence of the stoutest unbeliever. Apart from the sheer glamor of the starry science, it greatly flatters the sense of personal importance to learn the bearing of the planetary courses upon one's individual affairs and to discover how intimate this mysterious influence is.

Palmistry ranks fairly high, as implying more knowledge and intelligence on the part of performers. But an accomplishment of highest repute is recognizing the color and quality of a patron's aura.

In its broadest outlines fortune telling is pretty much the same. A sweetheart—love—a legacy—a journey—a letter. For an older woman, good fortune for her husband or child. For the older man, success in some business venture. And to avoid the charge of insipidity there is thrown in a certain amount of disaster and disappointment. The bigness of the disasters Mme. Thebes predicted no doubt contributed to her importance in the prophet world.

The quest for the supernatural, the desire for the miraculous, the belief in the foretellers of fate, spell casters, charm weavers, despite exposure and enlightenment and education, will undoubtedly remain the most beloved of diversions till the end of time.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Doris Blake Says

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

If you were born this week you are Methodical.

IF your birthday falls during the week beginning today you are nearing the end of Capricorn's influence, and as a result you are not having the benefit of some of the best things this sign has to offer. Though you are affectionate and just, careful and watchful of interests intrusted to you, yet you never let other folks' rights stand in your way. Number one—in other words, "I"—stands at the head of the column. With a thorough understanding of what is wrong and right, you do not always choose to live up to this knowledge. Down deep within you lies the latent power that will aid you in overcoming all these selfish tendencies, and with your keen, discerning mind you know without being told what you ought to do.

Money making is your principal aim in life and you pursue this object in a far sighted, determined way, for you seem to need wealth to expand to your greatest heights. In fact, you are rendered unhappy by poverty, and your pride combined with your independence makes it well nigh impossible for you to accept charity. Proud poor, your friends call you, if ever you are so unfortunate as to reach this state. You live too much in the externals, and so it is only natural that you sometimes choose your friends according to their outward appearances. When disappointments come, as they will, and you find the idols tottering, you get the most melancholy fits of the blues and decide that "only man is vile."

You do not take kindly to partnerships, much preferring to work alone, but in the selection of your assistants you show much judgment and shrewdness, and seldom get victimized. No amount of ordinary illness will keep you from work, for you have much physical endurance. Though you are fond of sports and recreation, you will never let them interfere with business. Your family is your nearest and dearest consideration and no amount of pleasure is too much for them to enjoy provided no great sum of money need be expended. Your children are just about right and you won't allow any one to criticize them in your presence, therefore some folks are unkind enough to say that you are far too easy going a parent.

Calamity does not disturb you; in fact, you are soldier-like in your stoicism. You can see others suffer and suffer yourself without seeming to feel at all moved. A worshipper at the shrine of cold, hard justice, that is you.

As a speculator, a trader, a contractor, an inventor, a prison warden, a detective, a merchant, a broker, a banker, a railway manager, or a lawyer, you may find success, for yours is a wide field of endeavor.

Sympathetic signs are Taurus, April 21-May 21, and Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23. You are usually more happy when married, for you dislike being left alone. In fact, you really need congenial companionship, for it acts as an incentive that brings out your best efforts. You Capricorn men are apt to be gentle and sympathetic toward the feminine persuasion, while the women of this sign will usually maintain a more independent attitude toward the men. A marriage with Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, or Cancer, June 23-July 22, will be almost certain to bring domestic happiness.

You will be most fortunate during the weeks beginning Oct. 14 and May 27; your colors are maroon, silver, and black; birthstones, garnet and moonstone.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend! Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

Wouldn't Pay the Forfeit.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 and have known a young man over five years. His girl cousin and I are chums. He used to come to her home quite often and I always used to be over when he came. He showed me a good time.

"My girl friend gave a party and invited me. Her cousin came also and escorted me that evening. They played a game where I had to give a forfeit, and when the judging time came the thing for me to do was to kiss this young man. I did not believe in kissing a fellow before being engaged to him.

"He was angry because I refused to kiss him, but I wouldn't, and that changed his love for me. He was very prosperous in his business and had a chance for advancement in another city and last January he left. I still love him and love him dearly, but he thinks the opposite because being refused. He never writes for he thinks I do not care for him. He is 26 years of age. I think I am doing the right thing because I do not believe in running after him.

"Would you please advise me what to write to him that will change his ideas, for he always writes to my girl friend and asks about me? I am the only girl he ever went with and I have found that he is broken hearted. Please tell me what it means to dream of him five nights in succession. Thanking you, I am, NANCY."

Although I cannot give you the scientific interpretation of dreams, it would indicate to me that the five nights successive dreaming of a man were prompted by thoughts of him being continually on your brain. The young man had no right to resent your refusing to kiss him. Certainly a man of his age should appreciate this reserve in you rather than resent it. I think if you let him alone for a little while he will get over his feelings. If he does not, I am afraid you will have to interpret his attitude as not so loyal as your inexperienced seventeen years make you believe.

Invited to a Party.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a lad 16 years of age. I have been invited to attend a surprise party to be given next Thursday. I am not acquainted with the crowd that is going to be there. The only one I know is the lad who gave me the invitation. I would like to have your advice. Would you attend the party? If I should not attend, how would I let them know?
LEO."

It depends entirely on whether you care enough for the boy to attend his party and meet his friends. If he is a nice sort of chap, why not go? However, if you prefer not to, drop him a note and tell him that you are sorry that you will be unable to attend his party, other business having arisen to prevent.

Wants Horoscope.

"Dear Miss Blake: Could you please send me horoscope for Oct. 8? Also I would like to know which color, blue or pink, is for girl babies?
E."

Please send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I shall be very happy to send you your horoscope. I cannot print it here because space will not permit. Pink is the color for boy babies and blue for girl.

They Organize a Club.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are organizing a young men's pleasure and athletic club, but cannot think of a suitable name. Would you kindly suggest a few names which we can choose?
"F. R. M."

Why not call it the "P. and A. club," since it is a pleasure and athletic club. Doesn't that strike you as a fairly good idea? Or you might use the name of the street on which your club rooms are located. That is frequently done by boys' clubs. Again, you might call the club after your baseball hero. You might arrive at his name by a vote put up to the members of the club.

Love as Long as Hair.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been much worried about a dear friend. For three months this gentleman friend was very attentive and with me constantly. But a short time ago I was forced to have my hair bobbed, and his attentions suddenly ceased. Do you think that the loss of hair was sufficient reason for the loss of his love?
M."

If his affections were of no greater depth than the length of your locks, then, my dear Mabel, it is well that you discovered his shallowness in time. Don't worry; try to be glad that you found him out in time. It is especially to his discredit now that bobbed hair is so in style, too; surely you can find some one who will like you whether or no your hair is long. Cheer up!

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IN A TIGHT PLACE.

WHILE I was struggling with my first job vacation time found me strapped. A friend who was going out as foreman of a railroad construction gang offered to take me along as a kind of clerk and steward. I gladly accepted, thinking it would be a lark, but found it mighty dull.

They were building a culvert about two miles from a small village, and nothing ever happened. So I felt quite happy as I walked to the village on my daily trip for mail and incidental supplies that my "vacation" was so nearly ended. I walked on the track, which, about a quarter of a mile from the town, took a sharp turn, soon entering a long, covered wooden bridge of old fashioned type, the track on a superstructure about three feet above, heavy beams which extended on either side supporting the cover.

Garrett Price

No train was due, and as I entered the tunnel-like structure, walking on single planks laid between the rails, I saw a woman's figure in silhouette at the other end. We met about the middle, and, as I took off my cap and stepped out on the ties for her to pass, I saw she was a peach of a girl in a white dress with pink roses at her belt. She gave me a charming smile, which changed to a look of horror. I glanced over my shoulder and saw a train coming round the curve at full speed.

We could not possibly get out and in the semi-darkness the engineer could not see us. I jumped down to the beams, got a firm footing, and held up my hands to the girl. She came down, light as a feather. I immediately bestrode a beam, drew her arms around my neck, while she crouched before me, and seized the end of a tie, holding on with a death grip as the train thundered past.

It was a "wild freight" and seemed endless. The bridge was full of smoke and continued to vibrate for some minutes, but I felt quite happy, with a soft cheek against mine and a pretty pair of arms around my neck.

The girl finally rested her hands on my shoulders and stood up. I looked down at the rushing water with a little shudder at our narrow escape.

I helped the girl back on to the track, where she thanked me for my quick action and said she must postpone her call because of sundry soot and grime spots on her white dress. So we walked to the village together. I learned her name and that she knew girls who were friends of my sisters.

I walked to her home, met her mother, and told them my time was up, but I was going to remain over Sunday. I received an invitation to dinner and put in my best licks to make a good impression on the family, succeeding so well that the girl and I corresponded for three years, when I had accumulated enough capital to form a partnership in marriage.

We had been married two years and I had told an old friend of our romantic meeting. After he had gone my wife told me, laughingly, that she had averaged crossing that bridge twice a week for ten years; had often met trains, and knew exactly what to do. Her fright was for me and at the thought of bestriding a beam before a good looking, strange young man. I have never told the story since till now.

Before and After Marriage.

It Made Him Hungry.

He had always seemed to enjoy my singing and playing during our courtship and I naturally expected him to retain his interest in it after our marriage. Shortly after we had started housekeeping I was seated at the piano one evening singing a touching ballad which kept growing "patheticker and patheticker" to the end of it, when, turning on the stool, expecting to see him melted to tears by the pathos of it, he said, cheerfully: "Say, let's have liver for breakfast."
R. G. M.

The Morning After.

My sweetheart used to impress upon me the idea that brain work was more wearing than any other. Now that we are married I know it is true, for every time Harry is kept "late at the office," he is sure to have a headache next day.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c.

PIMPLES COVERED FACE AND NECK

Festered and Caused Intense Pain and Disfigurement. One Cake Cuticura Soap and One Box Ointment Healed in Two Weeks.

"My face began to itch and burn for a couple of days and then I noticed a few pimples came out and in a few weeks' time my face and neck were covered with them. They were soft and festered and caused me intense pain and disfigurement, and sometimes I would not go out on account of the looks of my face. The skin got all red around the pimples, and at times I scratched until my face bled.

"A friend suggested Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I sent for a free sample. I then bought a cake of the Cuticura Soap and a box of the Cuticura Ointment. In two weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Alexander R. Grecol, 6611 Guthrie Ave., Cleveland, O.

The majority of skin and scalp troubles might be prevented by using Cuticura Soap exclusively for all toilet purposes. On the slightest sign of redness, roughness, pimples or dandruff, apply a little Cuticura Ointment.

For Free Sample Each by Return Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. H, Boston." Sold everywhere.

THE GIRL IN THE CAGE.

ON more than one occasion during the busy season lately past the hard lot of the girl in the cashier's cage was forcibly brought to my attention. Many of these women are working against a constant stream of patronage, where they are obliged to collect money, make change, and record collections almost instantaneously.

Working under such a condition is a terrible strain, and the women so employed should receive from every one an especial consideration. Unfortunately they seem to be the legitimate prey of the hasty tempered.

Business women as a rule are courteous and thoughtful in their dealings with other workers, but I feel impelled to remind them to be a little indulgent with the girl in the cage. It is so easy to fall into controversy through a slight misunderstanding or a mistake, and before one realizes it she has lost her temper and is prone to make sharp and disagreeable remarks about the cashier's intelligence. Such a lapse is never an aid toward a reasonable adjustment of a difficulty, and it is only fair for a business girl to be as patient and civil as possible in her manner toward fellow workers.

I would like to record a scene I witnessed a short while ago which impressed me strongly at the time and is still fresh in my memory.

On one of the busy days immediately before the holidays a steady stream of shoppers and workers passed before the cashier's desk of a crowded restaurant. A woman immediately in front of me in the line passing out held her check in hand while she chatted and laughed with her companion, and not until she stood before the cashier did she remember to take the money out of her purse. Then she hurriedly pulled out a bill and, handing it to the girl, turned to her companion to continue her conversation.

When she gathered up her change after the cashier had deposited the bill in the drawer and spindled the check she exclaimed in a loud voice: "I gave you a five dollar bill and you have given me change from two." The cashier insisted the change was correct, while the woman abused her shamefully.

Without looking into her purse to see if the girl was right, she stood there arguing and storming while she held up a long line of people who were impatient to get out.

She finally [illegible] without receiving any satisfaction from the girl, and as I followed her out to the street I saw her look in her purse and, laughing in a confused manner, she told her companion that the girl was right, it was a two dollar bill she had given her instead of a five. As she hurried away I heard her say: "Well, anyway, that impertinent girl deserved the scolding I gave her; she has no right to talk back to customers the way she did to me."

I could hardly believe my ears. Instead of being sorry for the embarrassment and trouble she had caused the girl, she was glad to have administered an undeserved reproof!

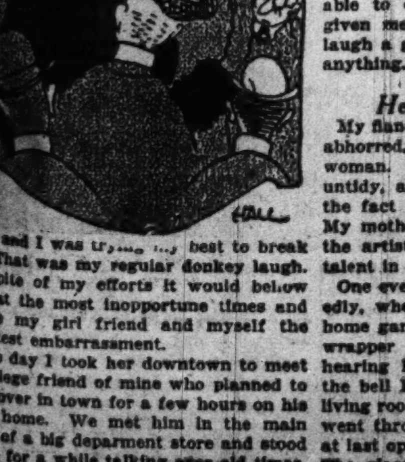
The business woman, by displaying a kindly manner, can do a great deal toward making up to other workers for the unjust and uncivil treatment accorded them by many thoughtless individuals.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

He Brays No More.

I had been going steadily with a girl for six months and I was beginning to care a great deal for her. I had one habit which had caused us many quarrels, and I was trying my best to break it. That was my regular donkey laugh. In spite of my efforts it would bellow out at the most inopportune times and cause my girl friend and myself the greatest embarrassment.



One day I took her downtown to meet a college friend of mine who planned to stop over in town for a few hours on his way home. We met him in the main aisle of a big department store and stood there for a while talking over old times. Soon he was telling me a funny story that was too much for me. I forgot entirely where I was and let out one Haw! haw! haw! which fairly blew the hats off the crowd standing near.

I "came to earth" immediately and turned in time to see my girl friend march by me and out the door. I hurried after her, trying to make peace. It was of no use. She absolutely refused to go to another place with me and she has kept her promise.

For four months now I haven't been able to even approach her. She has given me such a blow that I couldn't laugh a genuine hearty laugh now over anything. M. P. G.

He Called Unexpectedly.

My fiancé was a model of tidiness. He abhorred, above all things, a slovenly woman. Now, I am much inclined to be untidy, although I managed to conceal the fact from my prospective husband. My mother excused it by saying I had the artistic temperament. I had some talent in painting.

One evening my lover called unexpectedly, when I was in my usual stay at home garb—hair in curl papers, a faded wrapper on daubed with paint. On hearing his voice as mother answered the bell I fled into an anteroom off the living room and closed the door. Mother went through the house calling me and at last opened the door of the anteroom. The glare of the electric light fell full upon me, revealing all my slovenliness.

I think my abject humiliation must have tempered my lover's disgust with pity, for it was some time before he wrote me intimating our engagement had best be terminated. M. F.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

Weight Reducing Contest.

Did you try my method for reducing as outlined for Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks? How much did you lose? Did you stick to it for any length of time or did you fall from grace after a trial of a week or two? I want to hear your experiences, whether you were successful or not in reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your chance for earning the dollar will be as good if you slumped on the reducing job as if you stuck until you got rid of pounds of flesh. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "The Chicago Tribune."

Still a Fat Old Dumpling.

It was my pride which kept me from getting thin. In the beginning of July I decided that I would be much better off minus some of my superfluous flesh. Hence I determined to follow Mrs. Lane's example.

I would manage to live through the whole day without breaking any of the rules, and then, alas! in the evening, when out with some of my friends, some one would invariably suggest having some ice cream or popcorn, and for fear they would find out I was trying to reduce I ate with the rest. After this happened six or seven times I would become so disgusted that I put off getting thin until some other time.

Thus I kept on postponing it until now I am still the same fat old dumpling I always was. But I have discovered that pride is foolishness and it does not pay to indulge in procrastination. L. S.

Not the Same Woman.

I feel as though I owed you a great deal for your lesson in reducing. When your first lesson came out I went and got weighed. I weighed 192 pounds. Then I began to exercise and diet. I lost nine pounds the first nine days and altogether during the six weeks I lost twenty-six pounds. I am sure I would have lost more weight if I could have got out and walked, but I couldn't get away. I hardly seem like the same woman. I look and feel so much better. I intend to keep on watching myself and what I eat. It is well worth one's while. L. S.

No More Headaches.

I am indeed indebted to you for the happiness you have given me by reducing my weight thirty-five pounds in ten weeks by following up your series of Mrs. Lane's reduction by diet and exercise just as she did it and I feel fine, better than ever before, and no more headaches. I feel so thankful to you for the good it has done me that I feel it is my duty to let you know of it. I am, like Mrs. Lane, the happiest woman in Chicago. E. L. B.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

She Kept On Talking.

There were three of us girls—cousins—and we lived with an old family friend. Last August her youngest unmarried brother John came for a visit, and we [illegible] had money but was a real man in every respect; the only trouble was that apparently he couldn't decide which of the three he admired most.

Then an old uncle of John's dropped in upon us. The next day we girls and John escorted him to a restaurant. He chose green corn, and we were horrified to see him grab it in both hands and devour it noisily with his knife sticking out from one end of the cob and his fork from the other! The girls did their best, but finally exploded. As for me, I kept on talking to John without a smile, and within a week we were engaged. C. P.

Everything Was Just So.

I worked in a large office where there were several other stenographers and had the reputation of doing the neatest work of all. I was particular in regard to my desk; everything had to be just so.

After I had been there some time I saw that the manager took particular notice of whatever I did. One day he asked me out to lunch and stupefied me by saying he had been watching me for some time and thought to himself if I took such care of my desk and work I certainly must be able to keep the kind of a house he was looking for.

He still seems satisfied, but of course there were not two little terrors at the office to be throwing toys, etc., all over the place. L. G.

THE CEREAL FOODS.

THE hibernating bear lives on his stored fat made by eating honey and other carbohydrates. Fat is a carbon, too. By keeping quiet the bear's fuel burns with extreme slowness. The squirrel's store of nuts is a food full of oil or fat and carbohydrate or starchy substances, the two food fuels. Insects like the ant live on stored grains or carbohydrates, and there are thronging millions of people who have little other food than the carbohydrates.

If we were food poets we might sing of the marvels of this food substance, but what is more needed is a broader common sense understanding of the worth of these carbohydrates and the best way to use them. They are the most fundamental of our foodstuffs. If a New Year's resolution has been made to know more of the foods that daily make us or undo us, according to our intelligent or unintelligent use of them, let us begin with the cereals. This is part of a lesson on them.

To keep the safe reserve of fat in our bodies, the best blanket against cold and the best store for emergencies; to provide ourselves with abundant fuel for the day's activities and warmth, we must have a carbon. The carbons that the body can burn are the carbohydrates (carbon plus water, see the same idea in hydrate as in the hydrant on the corner), and the fats which are also carbons, just as much as coal is carbon if considered in the most fundamental sense. But fats are so concentrated that we cannot eat them in the same quantity that we can the carbohydrates.

Rice, barley, wheat, corn, oats, tapioca, are the carbohydrates that should be the main fuel of our human fire boxes. The draft that sets them burning and keeps up the fire we get from breathing, breathing deeply and consciously of good crisp winter air.

And, by the way, one of the results of indigestion is colic. Colic disturbs the circulation or is a disturbance of it. By deep breathing we can equalize our circulation to such an extent that mild cases of colic at any rate will entirely disappear in a few minutes.

Try this for a child who has the "tumie" ache from overeating, showing him how to breathe deeply by breathing with him. The concentration of his attention on the effort will of itself lessen the pain. It is easier and more fundamental than boiling water to make peppermint tea, though hot water internally and externally is good for almost any pain. It may save running to the doctor then or later, and anything that saves the body from laboring with a drug is a "grand and glorious" thing.

Wish everybody would read in the Country Gentleman for Dec. 23 the first article, on "The Oldest Cereal in the World," with the secondary title, "Prohibition and High Wheat Encourages the Use of Barley for Bread." This article shows that barley was the "corn" of Biblical times (all grains are called corn even in England to this day). It shows what has been done in this country in promoting and improving its cultivation in the United States and elsewhere. The German emperor has said to his people: "More bread, less beer." He has sent forth an order curtailing the use of barley throughout the empire so its use for bread can be more generally increased.

Anybody who studies food knows that the American farmer has been using the words carbohydrate and calorie in his stables for twenty years, but not at his own table. This article says:

"Stock feeders figure to a fraction of a cent on a stock feeding ration, but they make dollars in the end. They have weighed and balanced their rations with mathematical exactness, so they can adjust them to the varying prices in the market. A definite ratio is maintained so profits may accrue. Shall not our good housewives be encouraged to study how they can maintain a healthful, economical diet for their families and yet keep down the high cost of living? . . . Today barley serves as the soup and bread food of a large part of Russia, the northern half of Asia, and southeastern and central Europe. When the Japanese and Chinese are too poor to grow rice, barley becomes their steady diet."

Barley Porridge.

Add one quart of cold water to one-half cup of pearl barley, bring to a boil with cover on kettle, clamp down cover if possible, and simmer over tiny fire for at least three hours, or put in fireless cooker over night, after cooking twenty minutes on top of the stove. If cooked on top of the stove except with the lowest fire it may stick on and will need stirring to prevent it, but washing the barley will help to prevent this, although the lowest of fires is better yet.

Irish Mutton Broth.

All over the British isles mutton broth is one of the most highly standardized of dishes. Boiled mutton precedes it, and in Ireland Irish stew may follow it, Irish stew being made the same way, with the sole difference that it should be but slightly liquid when finished. In an Irish cook book prepared by the Irish department of agriculture is the following recipe:

Two quarts of mutton pot liquor or stock made from mutton bones, scrag end of neck, or sheep's head, two or three leeks or onions, one carrot, one white turnip, two sticks of celery, two potatoes, two tablespoons of barley or oatmeal, thyme, and parsley. Bring the stock to the boil, add the vegetables, except parsley, cleaned and cut in small pieces, also the pearl barley or oatmeal, and boil slowly for one and a half or, if convenient, two hours. Add parsley. Season and serve.

Savory Barley.

Fry gently one-half cup or a little more of lean salt pork cut in dice. After it is well seared and the fat is tried out somewhat add two or three sliced onions, one or more sliced carrots, a bit of green sweet pepper, if you have it, from half a cup to a cup of diced celery. Stir these and cook them for a short time over a small fire; then add one quart of cold water, or a little less if you are a careful cook. Cover closely and cook for an hour at least, and longer if it has not already reached the tender state and is more or less like a mush. Well cooked this is a highly agreeable dish.

Tapioca Cream.

Fifteen minutes required if cooked in double boiler, eight or nine if directly over fire with minute tapioca, counting the time from when the mixture is hot. Use two level tablespoons of granulated tapioca to one pint of milk and put over the fire cold. This is the easier and newer way to cook starchy things. The old method was to scald the milk and add the tapioca to the boiling milk. Stir and cook until the tapioca is transparent, then pour it over one beaten egg with four tablespoons of sugar. Put back to cook until the egg has thickened, but be careful not to cook till it curdles. Take off fire, add scant teaspoon of vanilla, and whip in the white of the egg. Eat hot or cold, with or without a garnish of whipped cream. It is not so well to add fruit to this as to a soft custard.

Baked Indian Tapioca Pudding.

Soak two tablespoons of pearl tapioca overnight or for an hour in hot water, after picking over and washing it. Put to cook with two tablespoons of Indian meal in two cups of cold milk. Stir constantly until the tapioca is transparent; then add one-fourth cup of molasses, or even more if you like it sweeter, but better not; a tablespoon of butter and a little salt. Put in earthen baking dish, add one-half cup of cold milk, and bake from one to two hours. Stir in the crust which forms on the top once or twice to give it added flavor and sweetness.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

When an address or other information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to the newspaper office.

Music for Orchestra.

"I NOTE that there are several calls for music. I have perhaps 100 pieces of music that I want to get rid of. This music is what is termed 'orchestration,' and is published for leaders of orchestras. The music has the ten parts to it for full orchestra. This music would be good for those who are trying to get up a little orchestra. I also have some sheet music, but not much. I would gladly send the music to those whom you would recommend and I know you would get it into the hands of those who would appreciate it. In giving this music I think the recipients should be willing to pay the postage. L. F. V."

In this view I entirely agree with L. F. V. I feel that when so generous a gift as this is made the least those who receive it can do is to defray the expense of getting it. I will be glad to supply the address of L. F. V. to any one who wishes it and who will write to me. I do not know that we have many leaders of orchestras in the Corner, but there may be those who could use this music arranged for orchestras.

Chinese Bulbs Wanted.

"I am sorry to say it, but I have no more dolls and doll pieces to give away, as I have given all I have. Has any one any Chinese bulbs to give? I want only three or four and I will do anything for them except doll things, if it is in my power. E. G."

I am sorry the doll things have all been given away, but I am sure they went where they gave pleasure. I hope some one has the Chinese lily bulbs and will write to me for the address of E. G.

Santa Always Forgets Them.

"I have two small boys, aged 5 and 8, who badly want a tricycle and a small play automobile, though they would be delighted to possess just one of these two things. We farm in the country, where crops are poor and money scarce, and my husband's health is not good. Each Christmas the boys look for Santa Claus to bring these things or something they can play with and enjoy, and always they are disappointed. Perhaps some one will see this request in the Helping Hand and may have something stored away that could be sent to my boys. MRS. W. F. C."

I am sorry this plea comes too late to be printed and receive an answer before the holidays, but it may be that some one may be able to gratify the wish of the little lads. I print the letter on the chance of this, knowing that all lovers of children will rejoice to grant the desire of the youngsters, no matter at what date it appears.

Can Sit and Sew.

"I see that G. A. J. has some sample silk pieces to give. I will pay postage on them and will be glad to get them. I have been sick for some time and am not able to do much, but I can sit and sew. MRS. M. W."

I am sorry to say that the pieces offered have all been given away. Has not some one else a few silk pieces to bestow upon this invalid and give her something to do in the hours when all she can do is to sit and sew? I shall be glad to send her address upon request.

Baby Clothes Needed.

"I am a lonely poor woman and have two small children, a boy of 4 years and a girl of 6. We live eighteen miles from town on a farm and have no neighbors. I am to become a mother again next month and would be grateful for any old baby clothes that some one might care to give me. I have not the means to buy what is really needed. "MRS. H. W. W."

We have many appeals of this sort and they never fail to touch me. I trust they may have the same effect upon others and that before long I may receive a request for the address of the expectant mother.

Asks for Quilt Scraps.

"I would be glad to have the address of the woman who has quilt scraps for postage. I live in the country and do not have the advantages of picking up remnants. MRS. J. B. McC."

This correspondent does not give the name of the Cornerite who offered the pieces and I have thus no way of identifying her. The only thing I can do is to print this request in the hope of some one being able to supply the demand. I regret that I cannot use the rest of the letter, but, as I have said often before, we cannot advertise for such exchanges as she desires. If any one wishes her address she can secure it on request.

Reading Matter Wanted.

"I have been a reader of the Corner for some time, and would like much to have some reading matter. I would like to get some old magazines. S. M. D."

"I am a girl 13 years old, and live in a lonesome part of the country. I would like some reading matter if you can get it for me, although not so much that the postage will be too high. I hope the Corner will appear for many years to come! D. L."

I have put these two requests for reading matter together in the faith that some one will send for the address of each writer with the offer of magazines. Good reading matter probably is never so much appreciated as by those who live far away from books and people, and amusements of a social nature. Here is a chance for those of us who are more fortunate to lend a hand and bring in sweetness and light.

Classical Music Wanted.

"Will you ask in the Helping Hand if any of its readers have any classical music they would be willing to give to a worthy student; also if any one has a good piano instruction book to give to a talented little boy who is ambitious to begin on the piano? I shall be glad to pay postage on any gifts of music. "K. F."

So many of our readers are interested in music and in helping along students in this line that I am sure this opportunity to be of real service will be eagerly welcomed. I shall be happy to send the address of K. F.

Pastime for Old Lady.

"If any readers of the Corner have silk, satin, or velvet scraps for which they have no further use, I would be pleased to receive them for quilt work pastime for an old lady. MRS. D. A."

Many are the appeals for such pieces as these, but the supply seems plentiful when there is a demand made which touches the sympathy. For my own part, few calls come nearer to me than those which ask for something to cheer the lonely hours of an old lady. Those others who feel as I do may have the address of Mrs. D. A. on request.

Always Room for More.

"I have seven correspondents now through the Corner, but there is always room in my heart for one more who is lonely. I have written to you several times for addresses and have found them all to be as you would wish the members of your band to prove. I am 21 years of age, but young for my age, and almost all my friends are about 17, and no one would take me to be over that. I just don't want to grow up and I love games and things that children and young girls do. I am a girl who loves to make others happy and bring sunshine into dark places, and if there is anything else you would like to know about me I will be glad to tell you. "L. J. McC."

I print this letter for no reason except to show the spirit of the girl who writes it and to say how glad I am that she has found satisfaction and pleasure in her work for the Corner. Evidently she carries her torch of brightness with her everywhere she goes and it is no wonder she finds her correspondents pleasing. Her own gay spirit shines upon them and they respond in kind.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED AND SORE FEET

Use "Tiz" for puffed-up, burning aching, calloused feet and corns.

"Happy! Happy! Use 'TIZ'"

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot troubles. —Advertisement.

WITH FINGERS! CORNS LIFT OUT WITHOUT PAIN

Just think! You can lift off any kind of a corn or callus without one twinge of pain or soreness.

A Cincinnati concern discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone, like here shown, for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Hard, soft or corns between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. No soreness or smarting. It is truly astonishing. It always works. No humbug or foolishness. Genuine freezone is only sold in these small bottles, packed in a little sealed wood case, bearing the name, Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, O.

Keeps Her Children In Perfect Health

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the Family Laxative for Many Years.

Mrs. Aug. Doellefeld of Carlyle, Ill., recently wrote to Dr. Caldwell, at Monticello, Ill., that she has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in her home for a number of years, and would not be without it, as with it she has been able to keep her four children in perfect health.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that acts on the bowels in an easy, natural way, and regulates the action of this most important function. Nearly all the sickness to which children are subject is traceable to bowel inaction, and a mild, dependable laxative, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should have a place in every family medicine chest. It is pleasant to the taste and children like it, and take it readily, while it is equally effective for adults.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in drug stores everywhere for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

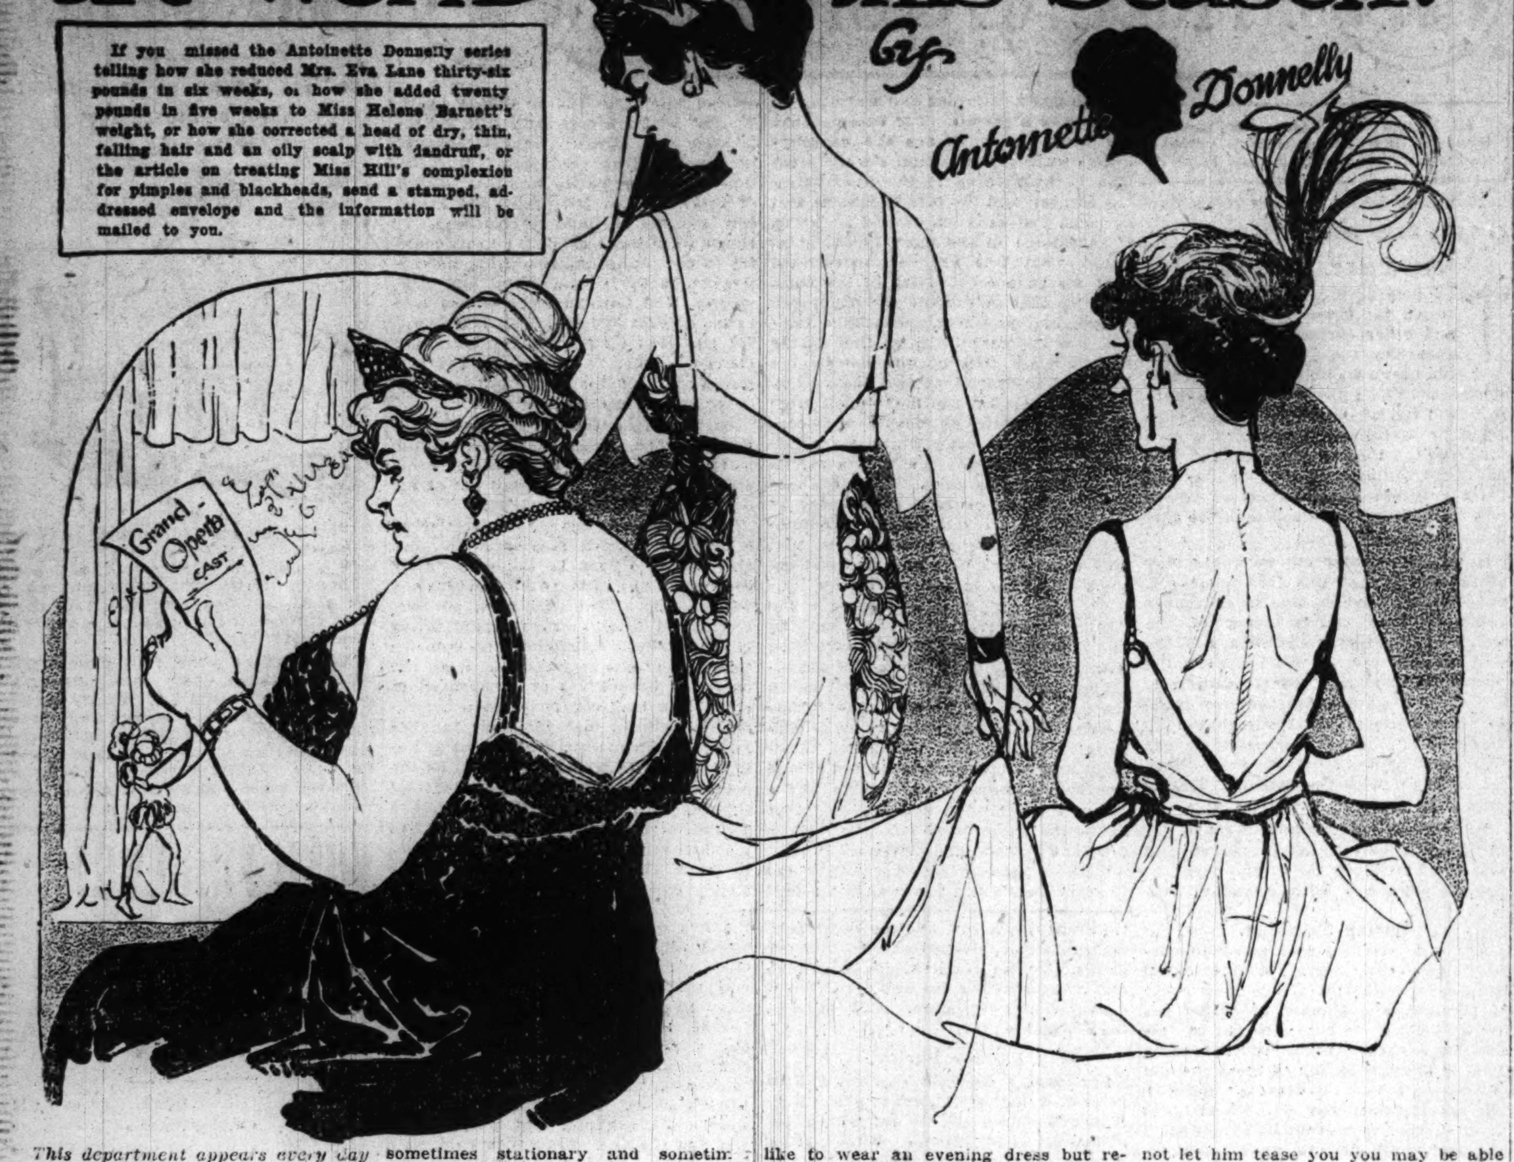
Backs and Backbones as they are Worn this Season.

By Antoinette Donnelly

If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks, or how she added twenty pounds in five weeks to Miss Helene Barnett's weight, or how she corrected a head of dry, thin, falling hair and an oily scalp with dandruff, or the article on treating Miss Hill's complexion for pimples and blackheads, send a stamped, addressed envelope and the information will be mailed to you.



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF you have a back hidden away somewhere about your person, get it out and wear it. Everybody is doing it this season. It doesn't matter whether it has a look of neglect about it or whether it is very, very fat or very, very lean. It will find lots of company and therefore will feel no pangs of self-consciousness or anything like that. If the shoulder blades protrude like the gables on a house it matters not, for they won't stand alone at opera or at whatever social function you happen to show them.

If you've spent years accumulating a nice wad of fat and you are proud of the accomplishment, as ever so many thoroughly nice ladies appear to be, have your evening gown cut so that it will show to greatest advantage, else how, like your string of pearls or diamond tiara, will anybody know that you have the possession? Exaggerate the effect, if you wish, by wearing the sort of corset that results in a veritable waterfall of adipose over the top edge of it. It's being done by some of our best fed families.

It looks as if there were a real live contest on between the fats and the leans this season—no underweight or overweight restrictions placed on entries. "Everybody welcome," as the barker says.

Of course, now, if you happen to have tucked away at the back of your chest a couple of shoulder blades covered evenly and gracefully with clear, unblemished skin, a good straight spinal frame with perhaps a dimple or two, making a perfect picture for a décolleté frame, you may be a bit bashful about displaying this art possession because you won't find so many of your own kind. From our lookout tower we have noted, not unsympathetically, that backs, as they are presented at these aforesaid back shows, include very few entries from the Kitty Gordon class.

It would be most untrue to say that beautiful backs are as rare as the proverbial "day in June." There are beautiful backs, but they are just a bit difficult to locate in a landscape so thickly dotted with this same anatomical part trimmed in grotesque bunches of embonpoint, sometimes stationary and sometimes running over the garden wall of the corset, or else stripped to the bone with barely enough adipose tissue to save the nerves and muscles from disclosure.

The same psychology of the female as is characterized by the love of the large footed species for white and tan shoes and boot length skirts repeats itself in the generous display of backs where the anatomy does not justify the view presented. Which, undoubtedly, is reason enough and excuse enough for the mistakes we make! For the psychology of the female is most difficult to reform.

It cannot be that women do not realize when their backs were better left covered. Every woman has a mirror and reasonably good eyesight. Even granting that vanity prevents us from correcting at least one of our beauty vices, it should follow that that same vanity might save us from rattling our skeleton bones or our too heavily laden ones in public.

I have in mind one particularly distressing sight at a formal dinner party a while ago. My view of the stage was obstructed by a tall, thin woman of 40 or more, seated with her back to me at the table ahead. Her dress in the back was cut in a V to her waistline. Her shoulder blades stuck out like the wings of a bat; a deep, perforated groove indicated the backbone, but the skin was what irritated most, pimples and blackheads struggling to crowd each other off the board.

It couldn't possibly be this woman did not know her skin was not presentable. It so obviously was not. Nor could the woman be accused of total unconcern as to admiration seeking, for her hair was done in excellent taste, the gown was extremely modish and expensive, and her face had not a blemish on it. So had she not intruded the broken out back upon us so brazenly no one would have known of the unsightly possession.

An adipose laden back, unlike an excessively lean one, is always humorous—which makes it really doubly tragic. Few of us can stand being laughed at, no matter how game we may boast we are. Since the wave of anti-fat which has swept the country, a deliberate parade of excess avoirdupois is a sin against the thirteenth commandment.

If there are women in our midst who like to wear an evening dress but refrain on account of their physical unfitness for the test, here are a few remedies for getting rid of the excess flesh on the back and also for making presentable a back with protruding shoulder blades.

The two exercises which I am giving are both excellent for reducing a fat back. Lie flat on your back with the crown of the head on the floor. Keeping your heels and shoulders on the floor, slowly raise your head until your chin touches your chest, then lower your head again to the floor. Begin with five times, increasing daily up to fifty or more.

Another is: With fists together on chest and elbows on a level with your shoulders, make a complete circle with the elbows, inhaling deep breaths as you bring the arms in and exhale as you move them in the outside of the circle.

Protruding shoulder blades can be corrected by practicing this exercise for ten minutes twice a day. Stand erect with your feet nearly together and with your hands clasped behind your neck. Then force the head and elbows strongly back. Relax, letting the elbows come forward.

In order to put flesh on the back it is necessary to go in for a system of general developing. This will consist of good food, fattening food, plenty of rest, fresh air, and enough exercise to create the demand for the foods and rest. The flesh gaining regimen which I prescribed for Miss Helene Barnett, which resulted in her gain of twenty pounds in five weeks, and which I now have in pamphlet form and you may have for a stamped, addressed envelope, if followed by you will certainly add materially to the beauty of your back.

Answers to Inquiries.

PUG: IF YOUR MOTHER SUCCEEDED in straightening her pug nose by massaging it daily when she was a girl of your age, then I see no reason why you should not accomplish the same results by daily massage. I should think you would have some say in the matter as to whether your brother can use your nose as a "bell button" or not. If you are firm with him and do not let him tease you you may be able to make a classical nose out of your pug. Try the massage at any rate; it may be months or longer before you see results.

EDWARD: AN EXERCISE THAT IS excellent for sluggish circulation is to lie flat on the floor on your back. Rise to a sitting position, at first with and then without the help of your hands; then slowly and gradually return to the straight position on the floor. Practice the exercise for about ten minutes night and morning in loose clothing.

F. G.: A GIRL FIVE FEET TWO inches at 16 should weigh 117 pounds. You can either use witch-hazel (warmed) or the following lotion for closing the pores of your face: Rose water, six ounces; elder flower water, two ounces; simple tincture of benzoin, one-half ounce; tannic acid, ten grains. First scrub the face in hot water and soap, rinse off with warm water, then apply cold water, after which apply the astringent.

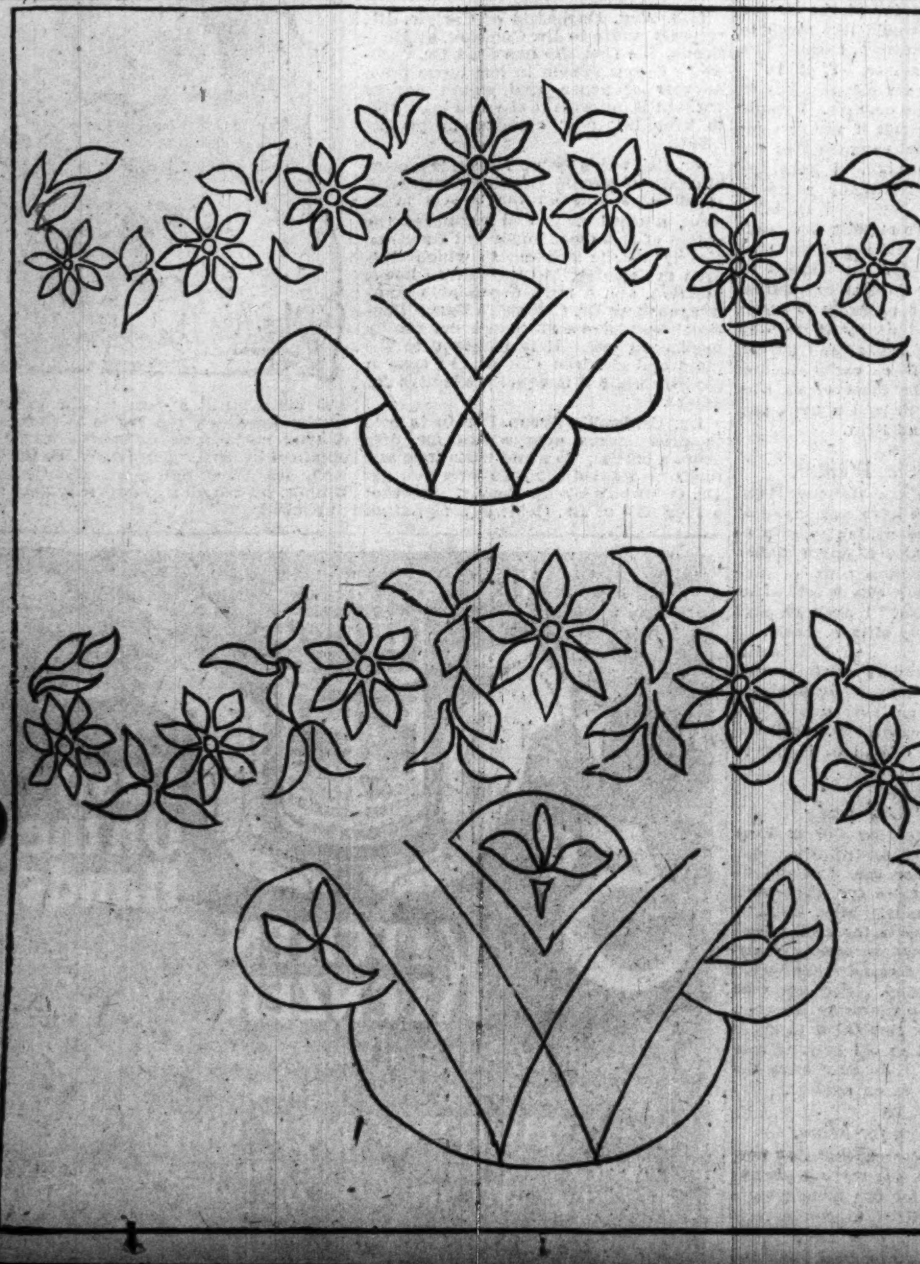
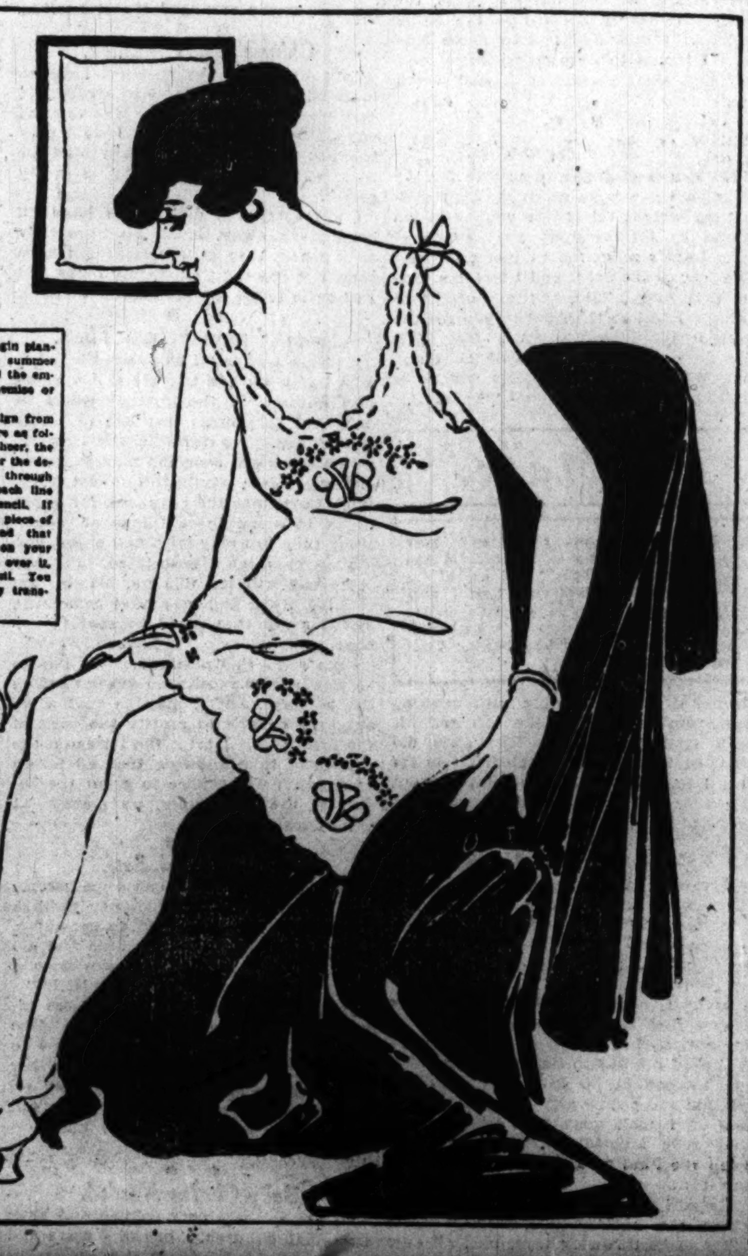
X. Y. Z.: THE DEVELOPMENT OF the bust is accomplished by movements of the arms and shoulders. Every exercise that moves these parts, such as swinging dumb bells, rotating arms, or moving shoulders, brings some benefit to the bust, as always some part of the bust participates in these movements. An effective exercise is done as follows: Stretch the arms out to the sides, then bend the elbows so that the tips of the fingers touch the shoulders. Now move the elbows forward until they touch in front of the chest at a level with the center of the breasts or a little higher, the tips of the fingers remaining on the shoulders. Then return the arms to the original position. Practice the movement a few times with the right arm only, placing the palm of the left hand upon the right breast. Begin the movement with ten or fifteen times and gradually increase to 100. Practice deep breathing and eat fat producing food. I shall be glad to send you my list of fat producing foods if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Embroidery Design for Chemise.



It is not too early to begin planning for the spring and summer lingerie. Today is printed the embroidery design for a chemise or corset cover.

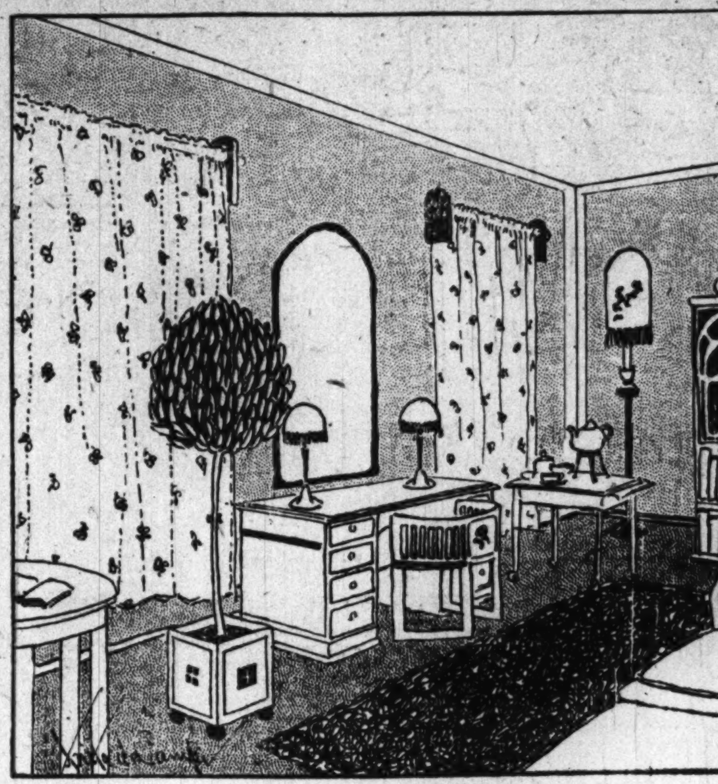
In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If the material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it on your material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred.



The Home Harmonious

Rooms for the Young Folks

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

IN redecorating children's rooms, the main idea should be to seek out the simplest things in color, form, and ornament. Straight line furniture is about the best choice. Avoid color combinations that are too subtle. Children like frank color schemes in which are spots of clear primaries, and they like ornaments that are quite obvious, just as they like field flowers.

Shell pink and baby blue are all right for the infant's room, but normal boys and girls, if allowed their own choice, will usually pick out a scheme that includes some real red instead of pink, or some bright yellow or intense blue, because, well, because it reflects their own unalloyed vigor.

Colors that would seem bold in a young woman's room may be freely used in a girl's room. I have seen a girl's room in red and white that was charming. The floor was entirely covered with a carpet in a peculiar shade of red, a scarlet tinged with rose. The upper part of the wall was covered with a figured paper, self colored in shades of the same. Up to the height of the door frame the walls were paneled in ivory enamel. All of the woodwork was enameled ivory. The hardware, bracket lights, door knobs, and drawer knobs were of old brass. The bed was enameled deep red, and the chintz hangings showed a deep red figure on an ivory ground. Several cushions in the room were brass color and a little settee was covered with dull heliotrope velveteen.

Gingham, chambray, and even calico make the most delightfully fresh looking draperies and cushion covers for young people's rooms. A room furnished with the fewest pieces is delightful because of the simple choice of fabrics used in it.

The floor is covered with mouse colored filling. The list of furniture comprises a bed, a built-in bookcase, a chest of drawers with a dressing mirror on it, two chairs, and a table. Little Dutch curtains at the group of windows are made of blue chambray, trimmed with bands of dark blue and white checked gingham. The bands are further embellished with old fashioned cross stitching. The same material is used as a slip cover for one chair. A ruffle hanging to the floor around the inside of the bed frame is also of blue chambray trimmed as described.

Now what will seem incongruous is that the bed hangings are of parchment colored chintz stamped with roses in terra cotta pink and olive leaves. The pattern is distinct—prim little bunches, set well apart. The comforter which is left uncovered is of terre pink faille. The pillows are inclosed in plain white slips and the sheet is folded over at the head.

Nothing could be simpler than the room. It has been the aim of the decorator to make it look "countrified." Perhaps that is why he painted the woodwork of the windows leaf green—not the window frames, but the narrow part that holds the glass. The wall paper is in a two inch strip of mouse gray and oyster green.

A yellowish color is the tint used upon the woodwork in a striking room recently done over for a young people's living room. The furniture is stained forest green and the cushion and window seats are covered in blocked linen, in amber, and bright apricot. The side walls are papered in dull blue and green flowered paper, two tones only appearing. The carpet is light dull green, and several amber colored carpet rugs are added. The fireplace has deep blue tiles, and on the mantel shelf are formally placed two blue vases and two unusually high dull green and gold candlesticks in which are pale yellow candles.

A yellow room for a boy has the woodwork painted light gray. The floor is in light tobacco brown with one or two small rugs in old rose. The furniture is brown and one chair is upholstered in myrtle green corduroy. The hangings are of myrtle green and pearl gray striped sunfast. A square of deep crimson is appliqued near the corner of each curtain. The walls are painted in clear light yellow flat tone.

Hand made quilts have come back into popular favor and these are particularly appropriate for children's rooms. A certain little girl has a blue and white patchwork quilt on her bed. It is lined with turkey red and a half inch edge of the red is turned over as an edging to the quilt. Her hangings are of white sprigged navy blue calico, with glass curtains of cheesecloth. Her rug is an oval rug of blue and white calico strips, crocheted over rope. It has a line of turkey red crocheted in to mark the beginning of the wide solid blue border. The furniture is brown, with the exception of one bright red Windsor chair. The wall is pale gray, the ceiling a lighter gray, and the picture molding is turkey red. The rest of the woodwork is brown.

Built-in pieces offer a solution to many at but little expense. Each room has its own problems that must be solved.

In the bedroom pictured here there was no closet. A little ingenuity in carpentry was required to make up for this deficiency. The room was to be used by a young person to sleep, dress, and study in. The furniture on hand included a roll top desk—to quote the owner, "the kind that came out of the ark." Well, the roll top was simply lifted off and the pigeon holes and little drawers were removed. This left a good, commodious knee hole table, which, when it was sand papered and painted and had a mirror placed over it, made an excellent combination work table and dressing table. Toilet articles are kept in the right hand drawers and writing materials in the left.

To the right in the picture may be seen a cleverly contrived built-in piece. It combines all the conveniences of a day bed, a box lounge, and a book case. A book case is placed at either end of a wide bench. The latter is made with a commodious full length drawer and with a lid that lifts, making two good compartments in which to stow away clothing. A shelf spanning the two book cases answers as a mantel shelf, and on this are several vases and that indispensable item, a good clock. The pieces are all detached and merely grouped together.

Many are the individual touches that are possible to the young person who is apt with a set of carpenter's tools. Notice, for instance, the craftsmanlike effect of the little brackets upon which the curtain poles are hung. They are just blocks of wood painted. And the box in which the decorative tree stands is an ordinary soap box cleverly framed at each face of the square, with a narrow wood molding. The molding is painted black and the box is set on four black wooden balls. It is further adorned with a small stencil design in the center of each face.

In this room the furniture is deep bright blue. The oak floor is partly covered with a green and brown carpet. The draperies are of challis in deep cream color, figured with a geranium red and dull green floral pattern. The bench pad and cushions and the space back of the bench are covered with plain blue denim. The corner lamp has a mustard colored shade and this color is repeated in the quilt that is folded across the foot of the bed.

Answers to Inquiries.

CLEO Z.: It is almost impossible to help you in the furnishing of a room in which the walls are painted bright peach color. This color is bound to kill almost anything that you place in your room. My first advice would be for you to change your wall color. Raw silk would be as good as anything to put inside of the doors of your dining cabinet that you wish to use as a bookcase. But unless your books are unsightly, I should advise you to allow them to show. Why use any inside draperies at all? Upholstered fabrics are used for sideboard covers pressed into such service as yours. If you must leave your walls pink, then all I can say in regard to other things in the room is to use more pink and still more pink of the same tone.

MRS. T. E. M'D.: Use a striped tan and blue sunfast for your inside draperies at windows, and brown velour portieres. It would be nice to have cretonne pulls for the portieres made of the striped material. Let them end in a jade in a ring with a tassel hanging from it.

Look at tongue! Then give fr laxative for stomach, liver and bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach ache, diarrhœa, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it's made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Writing was John's recently acquired accomplishment and when Santa brought him a desk he was delighted and spent much time scribbling at it. After a few days he conceived the idea of keeping a diary. A night or two later he was busy writing when bedtime came.

"Come, come, John," said his mother, speaking for the third time. "What are you writing? It is time you were in bed."

"Just a minute, mamma, just a minute," was the answer. "I'm writing my diary for next week." E. M. S.

I was buying my small nephew's fall outfit the other day and picked up a pair of mittens in contemplation of buying them. Clifford pushed them away, saying: "I want the kind that locks, like daddy has." W. J.

Beatrice, who lives on the edge of town, was all ready to go into town with her mother to shop. She grew impatient waiting for her mother to go and went out into the yard to play with her dog. She decided to put her new hat on him. Then a cat ran through the yard and he chased it.

Soon her mother came out on the porch and asked, "Beatrice, where is your hat?"

"I don't know, mamma, until my dog stops." E. R.

William awakened on the morning of his seventh birthday, just as the clock struck 7, and called, "Why, mother, even the clock is striking 7." M. S. B.

I was helping serve at a children's party and asked little Arthur how many teaspoons of sugar he would like in his cocoa. "Three, please," he replied, "but when I am at home I always have seven." F. M.

My small niece came running to meet me, exclaiming: "O, auntie! There is the dearest baby upstairs." Then added with equal enthusiasm: "I haven't seen it yet, but I heard it cry and saw the buggy." E. A. R.

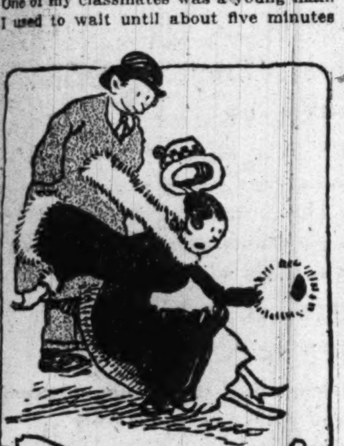
Elvine and Frank were playing together. Elvine was riding Frank's velocipede and Frank, standing in a corner, refused to enjoy the rôle of spectator. Coaxingly, she said: "Come, Frank. You stand on the bar behind, hold onto my shoulders, and ride, too. We'll play parade, and you can be the decoration!" E. E. M.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When——." Address Embarrassing Moments Editor, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

Riding Welcome to the Finish.

It was my senior year in high school. One of my classmates was a young man. I used to wait until about five minutes before school time before I started, as it was our custom to meet and walk to school together.



Our front porch and steps had just been washed, and as it was freezing it left a thin coat of ice. One had to use a little precaution, but I wasn't aware of the fact until, in my grand rush, I opened the door, stepped on the "Welcome" mat, and slid all the way down the steps, sitting on the mat, sliding clear across the sidewalk and stopping only when I came to the iron rail fence which bordered our lawn.

The fence was just high enough to catch me under the chin. Imagine my embarrassment when I looked up to find I had an audience of some ten or twelve boys, among them my newly found sweetheart! C. M. W.

When Mamma Quivered.

My small son and I were settling ourselves in the day coach of a Chicago train in the few minutes before the signal to pull out of the Sioux City yards. As I stood on the seat adjusting my hat in the rack the youngster's voice shrilled out in a sudden lull of the noise and bustle of the crowded car: "Mamma, don't you wish we could afford to ride in a sleeper?" ETIQUETTE

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

THE PERFECT GUEST.

She answered by return of post
The invitation of her host.
She caught the train she said she would
And changed at junctions as she should.
She brought a light and smallish box
And keys belonging to the locks.
Foods strange and rare she did not beg,
But ate the homely scrambled egg.
When offered lukewarm tea she drank it
And did not crave and extra blanket,
Nor extra pillows for her head;
She seemed to like the spare room bed.
She never came downstairs till ten,
She brought her own self-filling pen.
Nor once by look or word of blame
Exposed her host to open shame.
She left no little things behind
Excepting grateful thoughts and kind.

Rose Henniker Heaton.

A WORKING GIRL: It is quite correct to have a matron of honor as well as a maid of honor in your wedding party. The best man should walk down from the altar with the matron of honor. Yellow flowers would be quite suitable for your decorations for the church. Your attendants may wear dresses of any delicate color that you like, or white gowns if you prefer. Pale yellow georgette crêpe or silk tulle with suggestions of silver in the trimmings would be effective. If they could have silver slippers and stockings and dainty picture hats of thin, gauzy, yellow material with a single silver flower for trimming I am sure the result would be charming. White satin ribbon is still in vogue for marking off the aisle. I know of no attractive substitute. The bride walks at her father's right, taking his arm. It is quite customary for the bride and groom to give presents to their attendants. The bride usually gives hers a little pin or some bit of jewelry marked with the recipient's initials and the date. The bridegroom could give the best man and the ushers cigaret cases, penknives for their watch chains, scarfpins, or watch fobs. Anything chosen with love and thought and that is personal would be appropriate.

HARRIET: It is the woman's place to bow or say "Good morning" first. This follows from the fact that it is her privilege to show whether she cares to recognize the man or not.

* *

KENILWORTH: No acknowledgment of wedding announcement cards is necessary, though a gift may be sent. Invitations to church weddings do not need to be answered unless accompanied by cards to the reception, when a formal regret or acceptance should be sent. An invitation to a wedding reception requires an answer.

Galli-Curci and Muratore in "Romeo and Juliet"

The Simple, if Not Short, Annals of Ziegfeld's Follies

By Percy Hammond.

YOU arrive at the Follies, if you are fairly punctual, in time to hear Ann Hathaway in the pretty person of Miss Alyn King, importuning an osseous William Shakespeare via the words and music of a ballad entitled "I've Saved All My Lovin' for You." Tardiness has caused you to miss the reminiscent procession of the Follies of other years, and also the proceedings in rag-time which take place between Cæsar, Antony, and what are known as the Toga Girls in the Forum at Rome. Also the amazing dress of the seven queens of Henry VIII., who have a song epitomizing history in the feministic refrain "He Was a Hell of a King."

But in the slim ardor of Miss Hathaway's deportment you forget what you have missed, and in another minute you find yourself in the blue garden of the Capulets whither Mr. Bernard Granville, as Romeo, having o'er-perched the walls with love's light wings, comes with a ukulele, singing "How Ah You?" that being the subtle librettist's idea of humor. The laughter over this bezel subsides quickly, for you know that it is the important hour in the Follies for Miss Ina Claire to appear and you suspect that as Juliet she will be worth observation.

You are quite right, for enframed above in one of Mr. Urban's eloquent encasements Miss Claire is to be seen, all warm ivory and golden, like the interior decoration of a theater. So lovely and slender and young a Mantuan is she that, hardened Shakespearean as you are, you think that she is enough, without the poetry of the Bard or the music of Gounod. In her features, as she looks down on Mr. Granville, there are blended the mischief of satire, and the earnestness of great tradition, a good and infrequent combination, and one suggesting a fine artiste of travesty. Miss Claire sneezes. "She speaks!" says Mr. Granville, and from that moment, so far as wit is concerned, the party is over.

Of course Mr. Hobart, the librettist, has the fiscal evidence of his "Experience" to prove that imbecility is the most vendible ingredient of the theater; and Mr. Ziegfeld, knowing audiences as well as he does ladies' legs, may not be indicted for giving the public what it doesn't want. But it seems to me that in the drooling coma of this burlesque of "Romeo and Juliet" they bank too much on the stupor of a person who is able to raise $2.50. Mr. Ziegfeld is the great proponent of the eye; he, without hesitation, would make Rodin's "The Thinker" audible with thoughts by Gene Buck so long as "The Thinker" looked well. He would have Mona Lisa sing "There's a Broken Heart for Every Light on Broadway" if he could put her in tights, or the Madonna Incoronata, if he might retain the red gold and white of her coloring, recite "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." One of these years Mr. Ziegfeld will find a librettist who is semi-conscious, and a composer whose melodic aspirations are not confined to the tonal range of a jew's-harp. That, perhaps, will be the last year of the Follies. But as it is now Mr. Ziegfeld's girls, dances, scenery, and pictures glitter like jewels in a shroud.

Nevertheless, Miss Claire is radiant and "wise" and innocent in the burlesque, and before it is over you almost agree with Mr. Ziegfeld that the eye is much more important than the ear to say nothing of the nose and throat. Besides, in a clear, acoustic voice, with adroit regard for tone and rhythm she sings with Romeo (Rummy! in Mr. Hobart's jest) a ditty in which it is maintained that important things would ensue in case she were the only girl in the world and he the only boy. This hymn is one of the few testimonies that the devil has some of the good tunes. It is the high, harmonious moment of the festival.

Miss Claire later appears in an imitation of Miss Jane Cowl, who, it is said, is an actress, operating in other clinics. Though the subject is cryptic Miss Claire's comment is otherwise, and before you have explained to your neighbor that Miss Cowl once played Gertrude, a worried wife, in "The Grumblers," by George Oomplatz, Miss Claire is at hand again, vividly impersonating Miss Geraldine Farrar, the queen of the movies. In the remote event that you have ever seen or heard of the Farrar husband, Mr. Sam Hardy's pungent burlesque of that waxen whisper will afford you pleasure.

Let us on, however, with the travelog. We left it just before we reached Miss Ann Pennington, whose fairy dances, if she does not soon abstain from the starches, will be the mere waddle of adiposity. As Miss Pennington vanishes hippily, Desdemona's chamber is revealed and Mr. Bert Williams comes on as an ebon Othello with red whiskerage. He utters some of the great words of that uxorious brute and so musical is his rendition of them that he pauses in sheer self-admiration. "Dog gone!" says he as he finishes—which to me, but to few others, is one of the best of the lines that are not in tights.

Mr. Williams is as of yore, a tranquil person, saying unfunny things funnily. After he throttles and poisons, and smashes Desdemona with an Indian club, because she has been out dancing with Vernon Castle, she emerges from the bed-clothing and says, "Come to sleep, Otie; I've just had the damdest nightmare!" Have you ever heard that one about being true to the Seventh regiment? Well, Mr. Hobart resurrects it in the Follies, without even dusting its cerements. Mr. Williams obliges subsequently with songs, more pointed than is his usual lyric habit. One of them, containing a reference to the cost of high living at a Boul. Mich. hotel, was at once amended upon complaint from the management, by the executive in charge of the Follies, who, it may interest you to know, is the finest gentleman in the show-business.

* * *

Mr. Williams exits and other comedians come and go. Mr. Wil Rogers and his lasso, for instance, whose mordant monologue about the President and his policies is so genially merciless that it sounds like a TRIBUNE editorial. "Talk about winnin' a war," says Mr. Rogers, "why, we cain't even win an argument." Miss Fanny Brice, who is Al Jolson, Frank Tinney, and herself combined, burlesques broadly; W. C. Fields is full of feats with cigar boxes and tennis balls; Carl Randall, an agile youth, imitates Nijinsky; and Don Barclay, a care-free clown, new to the institution, is very droll in his fisticuffs and elsewhere.

For the ladies exhibited by the Great Geometer your customary admiration is possible. They look particularly well in the parade of Shakespeare's women, and you observe with interest the long, lazy Lady Macbeth, full-lipped and narrow-eyed, resembling the snaky Bacchante in the Comedie Française or a curious imagining of Rossetti or a daemonic Medusa in pink tights. Her music cue is "Please Go 'Way and Let Me Sleep." There is a stately Portia in scarlet vestments, and a dashing Shrew entering to the tune of "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." Cleopatra sails in in an Urban pinnace, and Mr. Granville, as Antony, sings "My Lady of the Nile."

With but six minutes left for the record, many items must be omitted. Not, however, Mr. Urban's "Island of Girls," an eery orchard of green and purple verdures, inhabited by mysterious Maeterlinckian princesses (entitled the Nature Girls), who soon undress while Miss Tot Qualters sings "I've Said Good-By to Broadway." This is a lovely setting, a cool contrast to the inevitable Hawaiian picture, with its tropical tunes and undulations.

You find it a cleanly show. Once the motto of the Follies was like the inscription in the Boston public library, which says: "Only Low Conversation Permitted Here." Now the play is as impeccant as a movie.

News Notes of the Theater

"JUSTICE" curled up and died last week somewhere in the outskirts, and John Barrymore is now on his way back to the movies.

A perfumed and silken program has been issued by the management of "Experience" in honor of that masterpiece's having been performed nine months in New York, five months in Boston, seven months in Chicago, and five months in Philadelphia.

Edward Goodman, director of the Washington Square players, will talk this week on the drama before the Chicago Woman's club, the Ravenswood Woman's club, the Drama league (Tuesday at tea time), the Playgoers' club, and at Miss Martha Scott's concert at the Edison shop.

Last week's receipts at the Garrick were over $37,000, which is said to be the record for revenue in a theater of normal capacity. Mr. Jolson is now the star of "Robinson Crusoe Jr." instead of merely the featured player—that deviation from Winter Garden precedent having been the Shuberts' tribute to his drawing powers.

* * *

At Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh last week, Mr. William Feel of London asserted with considerable fervor that the proscenium arch as first built in the Drury Lane theater did irrevocable damage to the Elizabethan stage.

* * *

George C. Tyler will produce "The Lioness" at the Blackstone in February, with Miss Margaret Anglin as the star. The play is an adaptation by Rupert Hughes of Miss Gertrude Atherton's "Perch of the Devil," and in it Miss Anglin will appear as the primitive and uncultured heroine of the tale.

A play by Owen Davis called "Mile-a-Minute Kendall," will come to the Chicago theater Saturday night, Jan. 13, for an indefinite season.

* * *

Miss Blanche Bates is employing actors to appear with her in a new play by Paul M. Potter, whose absence from the theater had threatened to become permanent.

* * *

Mr. Jolson's management sends word that the good actor of Robinson Crusoe at the Garrick, and whose name THE TRIBUNE's reviewer was too indolent to record, is Claude Flemming, an English player of distinction, for several seasons leading man for Sir Herbert Tree.

Miss Janet Beecher will join the cast of "Fair and Warmer" to play the rôle of the model husband's bored wife, which she "created" in New York.

The Players' club of the Chicago Hebrew Institute will present three one-act plays at the Blackstone theater next Sunday night. The bill comprises "Happiness" by J. Hartley Manners; "A Game of Chess" by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, and "Confessional" by Percival Wilde. There will be songs by Mme. Rosa Raisa.

* * *

Mr. Harry Askin, an eloquent orator on the art of the theatre in the flourishing days of the La Salle, pauses in Chicago from his flittings long enough to explain that the New York Hippodrome show due week-after-next at the Auditorium took in more than $40,000 Christmas week in Cincinnati, and would do likewise in St. Louis, whose citizens recently were assessed $15,000 to make up the deficit caused by the community's neglect of Miss Geraldine Farrar in two nights of grand opera. Mr. Askin contributes the further information that a theatrical hit is simply a dignified failure, and that only the successes mean solvency. "Dramatic art is all right," he says, "when there is no popular protest against the two-fifty scale for the Follies and the Winter Garden pieces."

Burn's Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Any old fashioned Sunday editor could prove, figuring on the back of a used envelope with half a pencil, that the particular celebration of the New Year's holiday with which we are just finished was the most expensive and the most prolonged, even though it was not the most riotous, in the history of the world.

To prove anything in the Sabbath newspaper by any shorter period of time is never done. Such a statistician could also assert without fear of that successful contradiction stuff that makes great orators popular, that if all the jags in all the boroughs of the greater city were laid end to end the line of submissive alcoholics would reach twice across the continent with enough leftovers to build four Eiffel towers and a half dozen Woolworth buildings.

It was, in the language of those who observed it, considerable party. Even quiet and respectable suburbanites, resident on Long Island, caught the echo of it nine miles from its Broadway storm center, and there were enough tired brokers giving moving picture exhibitions in multiple reels Sunday, Monday and Tuesday mornings to make the fortunes of a dozen film concerns could they have been properly screened.

However, that's over. Now that the new year has actually begun, now that most all the water wagon cartoons have been printed and everybody has gone back to work, the eager and nipping air seems vibrant with the energy of a million men strongly resolved to pay off their debts and not miss one of the Billy Sunday meetings next spring.

It was a costly New Year's to the theater managers, though not so costly as it might have been. The city authorities sat firmly down upon all proposals to start midnight shows early Monday morning, but they were lenient with those theaters where the regular entertainment is musical. This gave the managers excuse for the substitution of the celebrated New York "sacred concert." These, of course, were jammed to the skylights with watch parties, and the prices paid for seats were at least staggering. Then there were the moving picture temples and the vaudeville houses. It was only the higher drama that suffered. Which again proves the consistency of our lawful guardians.

The higher drama, if any, would benefit a New Year's watch party. We can, for instance, imagine a serious minded inebriate forswearing the joys of his favorite tipple forever after sitting through Mr. Veiller's creepy drama, "The Thirteenth Chair," or Mr. Goodman's story of one youth's regeneration through the love of a cabaret singer in "The Man Who Came Back." Even such comedies as Mr. Collier's "Nothing but the Truth" and the Smith-Golden "Turn to the Right" are far more corrective in their influences than any sacred concert we ever saw at either the Winter Garden or the Midnight Frolic. But such is the law. Or, at least, so is the law manipulated.

There were no new entertainments for the celebrants. Elsie Ferguson had come in the week before with her foolish play of "Shirley Kaye," in which west meets east a long way south of fifty-three, but she, too, was forced by the law to remain idle on the Sabbath day.

We could hope that Elsie improved the time by parading her growing affectations before some handy mirror, the better to observe them and thus decide which to dispense with. Again we have the spectacle of this reasonably gifted young woman, impressively good looking as to face, figure and gowns, belieing the prophecies of her ardent admirers as to her histrionic ability. Nothing that she says, few things that she does sound or seem natural.

The advent of Miss Ferguson completed rather an interesting group of young women stars now playing against each other in New York. Her competitors include Maude Adams, Laurette Taylor, Frances Starr, Ruth Chatterton, and Emma Dunn. Each has a big personal following, and because of it each to date is doing a thriving business.

We were asked last week to state publicly which, in our estimation, was the best actress of the lot. If we carried more life insurance we might undertake such a decision. But as our affairs stand we could do no more than suggest that they were all, all honorable girls and gifted, and that the only fair way to settle so important a question as that of histrionic supremacy would be to have them exchange rôles in a series of professional matinees.

This would provide a test of versatility and characterization to which each of them should be glad to subscribe, if she call herself an actress of parts rather than merely an attractive personality.

If, for instance, Laurette Taylor could prove by playing the part of Cinderella that she, too, can provide that elfin charm to a Barrie play that in the American playgoer's mind is never disassociated from Miss Adams, then she must rise immeasurably even in the estimation of her devotees. And if Miss Adams could play the rôle of the 36 year old mother in "The Harp of Life" as well as Miss Taylor, then she would prove that she is not dependent on either the Barrie repertoire or any carefully picked personality part to hold her followers true.

And if Miss Adams and Miss Taylor could take the two poorer plays that Miss Ferguson and Miss Starr are playing, "Shirley Kaye," and "Little Lady in Blue," and make of them more interesting plays than their present stars make of them, then it would help us prove that both these young women, (Miss Ferguson and Miss Starr), by permitting an artificial and pinched comedy manner to fasten itself upon them, are halting what otherwise should be their progressive careers.

On the other hand if Ruth Chatterton would "come out of the kitchen" long enough to take any one of the other rôles, or either of the two better ones, those of Miss Taylor and Miss Adams, and act it as her friends believe she could, then she would be clinching her position as a favorite.

The only answer the suggestion got came from Miss Dunn. She, of course, is associated in the public mind with motherly rôles, but she has a long list of ingenue parts to her credit in stock company engagements. Through her manager she offered to exchange rôles with any of the other actresses. If they would play her part in "Old Lady 31," that of a woman in her sixties, she would play any of the younger heroines with which they are associated. So far she rather has them stumped.

But we doubt if she will have any takers. The less confident of the group would be afraid of such a test, and the others would probably contend that the dignity of their positions would be affected. But we should dearly like to have them try it, just the same.

Some Reasons for Liking Mr. Pollak: News of the Opera

By Frederick Donaghey.

EGON POLLAK'S engagement with the Opera ends today; the performance of "Lohengrin" is the last in his schedule; and he would be called upon again only in case of a terrific upset of the plan for the final fortnight, necessitating a repetition of one or another of the German works. It were easy to utter this column to its foot with the customary commonplaces on the importance of the conductor in opera, employing copious areas of type-eating digression on Toscanini, Mahler, Polacco, and other celebrities in whom Chicago opera-goers are not at present interested: oldest of space-filling devices for the routined writer on music is to play safe with rhapsody for a functionary who possesses the least human and emotional interest, perhaps, for nine in ten of the thousands who contemplate his æolian back in the course of a season. Nine in ten are engrossed first in the singer, and then in the opera: the conductor must look to the tenth for a reaction.

I suspect that Pollak's case is different: that the tenth man at a Wagner performance is there for the singer, and the other nine for Wagner; and for these the conductor is the principal somebody. When, within a month of the opening of last season's Opera, Mr. Campanini cabled to say he had engaged Egon Pollak, I was able to find but one man in Chicago able to identify the new conductor—Josef Urban, the artist, here on a business-visit. Campanini, before going to Europe, said he would return with one of the great conductors of Wagner, or, failing to obtain one, with Siegfried Wagner. Later, he sent word that he had engaged Michael Balling, a big man in Europe, with influential admirers who classed him with Richter; but a second cablegram from Campanini canceled the announcement before it could be given to the newspapers.

Even Urban's warm praise of Pollak—"the best of the younger men," I recall, was the qualified superlative—was pale compensation for Campanini's failure to come back with a Wagner conductor of the hurrah type—one whose very name should have been good for at least a column in each newspaper.

My personal emotions in the matter were animated by the mistaken belief that I was to be a factor of vast importance in the emprise of reestablishing opera in Chicago. Mr. Campanini, on being apprised of my state of mind, was incredulous: he was not without reasons for regarding himself as the chosen implement of restoration; so, Mr. Pollak, coming among us without repute or anything else quickly to commend him [save his ability to speak better English than his American Federation musicians], was compelled to get along on his talent.

This young Bohemian [he is not yet forty] has done far more than well in his two brief seasons. His task of the first year was not alluring to a man with a reputation to be made in ten weeks. The Opera orchestra had disbanded with the cancellation of arrangements for a season in 1914-15. Not more than three of the Wagner operas were in the ready repertoire of the men who rejoined for 1915-16—and no orchestra is more efficient than its sophomores. The singers were not a practiced ensemble: some were in Wagner for the first time. It is my impression that only "Tannhäuser" was revived with more than one performance in mind. Topping the catalogue of distresses was the cruel necessity of using the same orchestra for five or six performances a week in operas not in Mr. Pollak's care.

This, perhaps, is the place formally to testify to his success, his worth, and other items in a lengthy inventory of reasons why it were good art and good showmanship to bring him back next season. It is incredible that any conductor could, in the circumstances, have achieved more than Mr. Pollak. Taking his contribution to today's "Lohengrin" for granted, he reemerges from his second season with something like actual brilliance. Last Sunday's "Tristan" was a revelation of what he has been able to do with a congeries of musicians who, unless they come of a spiritually-finer race than the uncounted hundreds of their trade who have participated in my own adventures in the theater, regard Wagner as a commodity to be rubricated on a stop-watch.

The performances of The Ring, "Parsifal," "Tannhäuser," "Tristan," and "Königskinder" were of value chiefly because of Pollak: this was so even when the stage was in use for the uncommon ministrations of Farrar and Matzenauer. Pollak is in the grip of an enthusiasm, reinforced by an experience, other than for Wagner: it is for Mozart, who has not been touched this season at the Opera, and last season only with a spotty performance of "Don Giovanni."

In the Picture

The photograph, flashlighted for THE TRIBUNE after they were grease-painted for last Wednesday's performance, shows the two great singers in the alliance which has so far proved their most potent appeal; they have in

Has Chicago Discovered a Female Counterpart to Caruso?

[From Current Opinion: January.]

IN Chicago there has burst upon an unsuspecting public a new star, of a brilliancy thought to belong only to past generations. Amelita Galli-Curci is her name; she is a coloratura soprano; and her discoverer is Maestro Cleofonte Campinini.

This is not an age of sudden musical triumphs, such as we read about in history—Faustina, Grisi, Patti, Lind, and others. The great successes of modern days have come more gradually—not burst forth in full-orbed splendor; except, perhaps, in the case of Caruso. Operatic veterans have long sighed in vain for a female songster who would duplicate his success. Critics have grown very skeptical of such sensations. When, therefore, in the case of an artist totally unheralded, all the critics within range of her voice suddenly vie with each other in the use of superlatives, the event startles the musical world.

Galli-Curci made her debut on Saturday, Nov. 18, as Gilda in "Rigoletto." The Chicago Sunday papers of the next day were aglow with praise. THE TRIBUNE's editors—persuaded, as they said, that "the integrity of this issue hangs largely upon the insertion of a piece about Galli-Curci," announced her as "something in the nature of a soprano conflagration." The American broke its rule against reviewing Saturday musical events, and dedicated a paragraph to the "electrifying debut of Mme. Galli-Curci"; and Herman Devries asserted that, "in thirty years, I, veteran opera-goer, have never heard such matchless, flawless beauty of tone, so satiny a timbre, such delicately-lovely phrasing, such innate God-given talent and feeling for the true bel-canto." Similar effects were wrought upon the other journals of Chicago.

Mr. Donaghey recounts the event in THE TRIBUNE as follows:

"Yesterday's matinée audience in the Auditorium gathered for contemplation of a routine performance of 'Rigoletto.' It was a calm, suave, sophisticated gathering, which, as to most of its units, knew all about Marcella Sembrich, Luisa Tetrazzini, and other coloratura celebrities who have, upon occasion, taken this opera away from the singer of the title-part.

"When the curtain fell on the second act, the calm, suave, sophisticated gathering rose in its seats, and cheered and shouted and screamed its delight with Mme. Galli-Curci, the Gilda of the afternoon. Nothing like her had been heard in the six years in which Chicago has had an opera company named for it."

Other reviewers record "an astounding exhibition of enthusiasm"; "a tumult that would ordinarily seem unseemly"; applause that exploded "as if the aria were a time-fuse, and the audience a mine." The genuineness of this sensation is emphasized by the fact that no one knew anything about the new prima-donna in advance: she came as a bolt from the blue; and, indeed, had been engaged for only two performances. Before the first was finished, the wily Mr. Campanini had secured her services for the entire season. The result was such an overwhelming demand for seats that prices have been raised for all the performances in which she sings.

Little in the way of detailed criticism has, as yet, become available. Writers have freely indulged in the usual obvious comparisons. The names of Gerster, Sembrich, Melba, Viardot-Garcia, and Patti have been freely used to conjure up conceptions of vocal perfection adequate for the occasion.

Karleton Hackett, in the Chicago Evening Post, says that Galli-Curci "practices the supreme vocal art as our forefathers understood the term." He is seconded by Mr. Faye, in the News, who asserts that "she has brought back the splendor of the old florid style of singing almost intact." The critic of the Examiner [Mr. James Wenttaker] assures us that her high-E is the purest tone he has ever heard. "It is purer than a harmonic on the violin. . . . This note hangs suspended in the air like a point of light in the darkness. It shines!"

These clews point to the purely-musical, birdlike qualities of the singing practiced in the eighteenth century—the age when people cared little about dramatic expression, or even lyric emotion. It has been thought that audiences could no longer be moved by anything so impersonal. We might admire it; but we were not to be carried away by it. But this supposition seems to have been swept away with one stroke.

Says Mr. Hackett: "Just think, in these days, of people awaiting with bated breath and other evidences of emotional excitement for a performance of 'Lucia'! Well, such is the fact. It may be that the old-timers will come in for another inning, and that once again the coloratura soprano, which the wise ones have been telling was a species as extinct as the dodo, shall be the reigning favorite."

As to Madame Galli-Curci's personal history, we are told that she is 27 years old, and that she studied to become a pianist, and not a professional singer at all. She was born in Italy, the daughter of an Italian father and a Spanish mother, and was raised in Milan.

McVICKER'S.

Ward and Raymond:

"What kind of a room did you have when you went to visit New York?"

"It was a six dollar room; just think of it! I paid six dollars a day for a room!"

"That sure wasn't cheap, but you must have had a gay time seeing the sights."

"Seeing the sights? Sure and I didn't see a sight the whole time I was there."

"You didn't see a sight?"

"No, sir."

"And what was you doing there then?"

"You don't suppose I was going to be stuck six dollars for a room and then not get the proper use of it."

McVICKER'S.

Benard and Meyers:

"Are you unmarried?"

"Oh, no. I've never even been married."

"Who was that man you were walking with yesterday?"

"That old man?"

"Yes. Is he your father?"

"Oh, no; he is my grandfather."

"Is he on your mother's or father's side?"

"Oh, that varies. He sticks up for both of them. But tell me, are you a married man?"

"Not yet. I shall never marry until I meet a woman who is my direct opposite."

"That kind of a woman should not be hard to find."

"Why not?"

"Because there are bright and intelligent girls in every part of the world." world."

"Why is it I don't see your helper any more?"

"His whole system is unnerved; he is suffering from very nervous prostration."

"How in the world did it happen?"

"He got a very severe shock."

"What's the matter—did you make a mistake and pay him on time?"

PALACE.

Hallen and Fuller:

"Marriage is a funny thing, isn't it?"

"How?"

"Well, now for the purpose of argument, let us assume that a man of 35 marries a girl of 5. Of course that's impossible, but just for the sake of talk let's assume that."

"Yes."

"When they'd lived together five years he would be 40 and she 10. He would be four times as old as she."

"Yes."

"Five years more and he'd be three times as old as she."

"Yes."

"Fifteen years more and he'd be 60 and she 30—just twice as old."

"Yes."

"Now, what gets me is how long they'd have to live together before they were of the same age."

three performances of "Romeo and Juliet" drawn audiences representing the highest percentage of paid attendance in the six seasons of the Opera. Each has been, in this work, the faultless complement of the other. It is probable that they will figure as co-stars in further experiments with the old repertoire: she has proved her skill, as Juliet, for lyric ladies in the French category; he, as Canio in "Pagliacci," his for the emotional men of the Italian inventory. Nothing more of the kind this season, of course: neither requires anything new in the fortnight remaining, although she is to be heard next week as Valentine in "The Huguenots."

News

There was time, in yesterday's review of the "Francesca" premiere, for a mere hint of the richness with which the Zandonai work has been mounted. The settings are big, rich, handsome matters: quite the best, I dare say, the Opera has given to anything. The Metropolitan imported part of its equipment for "Francesca": the sets here were painted by Mr. Donigan, of the Opera staff. The battle of the second act was accomplished with infinitely-greater effectiveness than in the Duse performances of the D'Annunzio play, in 1903. The sense of medieval fighting-methods was in the setting and the behavior of the crowd; the accidents to the paraphernalia were surprisingly few for a first-night.

When "The Huguenots" is mounted, with Galli-Curci and Raisa, the page, Urban, will be Myrna Sharlow. The tradition of this part is contralto; but it was designed by Meyerbeer for soprano.

The gala schedule for the final Friday of the Opera is, in its items, justification for paying five dollars for a seat. Garden's Tosca will be heard again: the second act of Puccini's piece will be sung. Galli-Curci will give the mad-scene from "Lucia." Raisa will be heard not only in the third act from "Francesca da Rimini"—it was in this sector she scored a definite success with the Friday audience—but also in "Le Veil Aigle," in which she will for the first time be associated with Muratore. This one-act opera is as yet unknown in the United States: its performance at the gala will give at least technical representation to Raoul Gunsbourg, whose "Venise," in which Kousnezoff was to have made her reappearance, was lost at sea.

DeLamarter-Sowerby Concert

Eric DeLamarter, on the 18th instant, in Orchestra hall, is to direct sixty players of the Chicago Symphony through a program having mainly to do with the compositions of Leo Sowerby, the young English composer who has had representation in the schedules of Glenn Dillard Gunn's orchestra, the American Symphony. His "The Sorrows of Mydath" and "Homage to England's Country-Folk," both heard first through Mr. Gunn, will be in the new program, which, further, is to have a concerto for 'cello, one for piano, an overture called "Comes Autumn-Time," and a ballade on Sowerby themes by Mr. DeLamarter. Mr. Sowerby will be at the piano for his concerto for that instrument; and a part for soprano will be sung by Cora Libberton.

By Mozart and Mendelssohn

Mozart's little opera called "Bastien and Bastienne" and one by Mendelssohn, "Son and Stranger," will be made known to Chicago on the 23d instant by the Musicians' club (formerly the Amateur Musical club). Both works will be sung in costume, and with settings. Mozart's piece has been the subject of recent special performances in New York City by Albert Reiss and David Bispham, who staged it in conjunction with another of the composer's lighter works, "The Impresario." The legend has it that "Bastien and Bastienne" was written by Mozart when he was twelve years old.

"Son and Stranger," which Mendelssohn is understood to have composed on and for the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of his parents, is said to be unknown in its entirety in the United States, although at least one of the songs, "I Am a Roamer Bold," is reasonably familiar to concert-goers.

Louis Kreidler, Herbert Gould, and Warren Proctor are "professional" singers listed for the performance. Miss Helen Rosenfield, dancer, will perform in the intermission.

Theater News

Miss Minnie Palmer, once preëminent among the acting soubrettes, is now playing the rôle of Mrs. Mutt in "Mutt and Jeff."

Granville Barker has arrived from England to supervise Winthrop Ames' production of his new play, "The Morris Dance."

Lester Lonergan, who played Captain Costigan, and Brandon Tynan, who played young Pendennis in "Major Pendennis," will not be in John Drew's company after it leaves New York.

The final performance of "Go To It" will be given this evening at the Chicago. The play moves hence to Kansas City.

The New York adventure of "So Long Letty" will come to an end this week.

The Century, which was built to be the capitol for what is known as "the best-in-the-drama," has been so successful as a headquarters for Messrs. Dillingham and Ziegfeld that the founders have turned it over to those managers permanently.

Vaudeville News

One of the Mrs. Ralph Herzs is rehearsing a new vaudeville act with John Darby, a dancer from the Pacific coast.

Harry and Eva Puck have a new act of Mr. Puck's composition called "The Song Hit."

Miss Lucille Watson will soon withdraw from the Dolly Sisters' company to enter vaudeville in a play named "Lotus," written by herself. She will be succeeded in "His Bridal Night" by Miss Louise Closser.

Louis Mann's pending excursion into vaudeville will be in "Some Warriors," of which Clara Lippman Mann is the author.

Arthur Prince, one of the most popular of the ventriloquists, is among the actors who have enlisted in the British army.

The "team" of Morton and Moore have come to the parting of the ways, and Mr. Moore plans an affiliation with his sister, Miss Florence Moore, late of the Shubert extravaganzas.

"The Girl Who Made Good," a sketch by Tom Barry, is to be acted by Miss Dorothy Regel.

After dancing this week in Milwaukee, Miss Lucille Cavanagh will return for another engagement in Chicago.

E. W. Rowland is preparing to present a condensed edition of "Brewster's Millions" in the varieties.

Will M. Hough, the librettist, has written a new tabloid musical piece entitled "Miss America," and it will be produced here this month.

"Her Market Value" having passed away, Miss Emily Ann Wellman, its featured player, will turn to vaudeville in "The Young Mrs. Stafford," by Edward Elsner.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

Right off the Reel

By Mae Tinee.

MERELY A SUGGESTION.

WHY, we ask respectfully, doesn't the busy little board of censors employ a walking delegate, possessed of a strong right arm and a bill poster's license, whose duty it would be to see to the defacing or obliteration of signs which stare at one from the front of several motion picture theaters we have in mind? Realizing as we do that these gentlemen—and ladies—permit nothing so far as they singly and collectively think is impure or unholy to appear on the screen, we wonder that they allow misleading signs to apparently prove that their efforts in the cause of screenic righteousness are null and void.

The theaters we have in mind have façades smeared over with advertisements a la circus or the haunts of a fortune teller. The signs emit the intelligence that for the small price of whatever the entrance fee is one may be introduced to a notorious woman of the underworld, or may see at first hand the various adventures in the life of a "dip."

The real titles of the pictures are not featured, but the glaring catch lines which lure like flies to fly paper the passing youth of the streets, big, brash, and bold, in many cases give to thoroughly innocent pictures an unhealthy suggestiveness not intended by the producers. They cry "Wolf! wolf!" and though the cry may be a false one it leaves the impression that lingers.

Merely a suggestion, however, Mr. and Mrs. Censor, but we think it is rather a bright one ourselves.

Miss Francelia Billington at the wheel of a camera truck

The work of the Christie Comedy company has been discontinued for a number of days on account of the departure of Miss Billie Rhodes for San Francisco. Miss Rhodes received word that her mother was dangerously ill and rushed at once to her side.

Mary Pickford is busy at work at the Artcraft studio on the picturization of "Poor Little Rich Girl," adapted from the novel by Eleanor Gates.

J. Warren Kerrigan is getting his own new company in shape. Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude, formerly with the American, have been secured to assist him in the production of his first film. The new Kerrigan company will most likely be a Lewis J. Selznick enterprise.

Speaking of comical comediennes, Flora Finch has now a company all her own. It will be called the Flora Finch Comedy company. It was Miss Finch, you remember, who played for so long with John Bunny.

A. F. Beck thinks it's time he managed his wife and in the future he will take charge of the career of her, who is known in pictures as Miss Leah Baird. Several pictures have been made around Miss Baird in Florida under the direction of Sidney Olcott.

Appearing in the cast of Metro's new serial, "The Great Secret," featuring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, is said to be an Austrian baron. Further information divulged regarding him is that his name is Wenther and that he has sung important rôles in musical comedy in Vienna. Evidently one of those dancing Bar-ons!

George Fisher has joined the American Film company.

"Get married, girls!" says Ralph Kellard of Pathé, "before we have war! You don't want to be war brides, do you?"

Robert Harron is the latest addition to Fine Arts-Triangle. His first picture will be entitled, "The Bad Boy." Mildred Harris, who has been chosen to play with Douglas Fairbanks during his winter stay in New York, will play opposite him.

William Fox wouldst have a statue of Annette Kellermann made and call it "Cinema or the Tenth Muse."

To Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hearn of Universal has been born an eleven pound son.

It is said that Neva Gerber has the most beautiful dressing room in Universal City. It is done in blue and white.

Darwin Karr has been engaged by the newly formed Ess-Ess producing company and will co-star with Ethel Grandin in a serial entitled, "The Lure of Gold."

The Bluebird Photoplays company has engaged Sidney Mason to play opposite Violet Mersereau in forthcoming productions.

William Duncan of Vitagraph has been given a company of his own to direct and in which to play the leads.

Six months ago Gloria Payton of Balboa was an extra girl. Now she's playing leads. She had spizzerinktum all right!

It is said that Niles Welch, the adorable leading man who played opposite Marguerite Clarke in "Miss George Washington," employs three secretaries, who do nothing but answer mash notes and send photographs. Ho, hum!

Alan Hale, who will play opposite Clara Kimball Young in her next production, "The Price She Paid," has been an osteopath, soldier, railroad man, sailor, vaudeville actor, and opera singer. We think his name must be Jack.

Florence Turner has returned to America to begin work in pictures here.

Fanny Warde, May Murray, and Blanche Sweet of Lasky have been busy dressing dolls for the big charity bazaar to be held in Chicago this week.

ASK ME! — ASK ME! — ASK ME!

LILLIAN: Address Mary Pickford care of the Artcraft Film corporation, 729 Seventh avenue, New York.

MINE TRULY: If you will send me your name and address I'll mail you the article I have on the subject in which you are interested. Awfully glad to be of service.

ALICE G.: Back again? That's nice! So sister likes Elmer Clifton of Triangle-Fine Arts, does she? Well, he was on the "legitimate" stage before going into pictures. I have no personal information regarding him. Address him care of the Triangle-Fine Arts company, Culver City, Cal. Thanks for your good wishes.

R. V. L.: Almost any motion picture camera operator will be able to set you right.

H. H.: Mary Fuller is still with the Universal Film company, New York. I don't know who is directing her at the present time. Walter Edwin directed her for a number of years when she was playing with Edison.

CONSTANCE V.: William S. Russell is with the Horsely-Mutual corporation, 1919 South Main street, Los Angeles, Cal. Charlotte Burton is with Essanay, 1333 Argyle street, Chicago. Not in all ways. The last I heard of Vernon Steele he was with Famous Players, 130 West Fifty-sixth street, New York. You're welcome.

YVONE: Address Marguerite Clarke, care of the Famous Players company, 130 West Fifty-sixth street, New York; Billie Burke, Kleine, 80 Fifth avenue, New York; Mary Pickford, Artcraft, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. Smith, I believe. No trouble at all.

R. O. S.: Not this year.

HELEN M.: Both the Selig and the Essanay companies have located in Chicago. The Essanay studio is located at 1333 Argyle street and Selig's is at Irving Park boulevard and Western avenue. Kathlyn Williams is not with Selig any more; she went to Morocco some time ago. Henry Walthall, Mary Charleson, and Bryant Washburn are among the stars with Essanay. Playing with Selig are Thomas Santschi, Vivian Reed, Helen Ware, and Bessie Eyton.

VIRGINIA S.: I'm mighty glad you like the column. I wager you don't enjoy reading the articles one-half as much as I do writing them. The younger brother in "War Brides" is Richard S. Barthelmess. You're welcome.

BYSTANDER: I agree with you.

S. C. A.: Marie Doro is still appearing in pictures. The last production in which she was featured was "Oliver Twist." You are entirely welcome.

P. J. H.: To be perfectly frank with you, I don't see any great possibility in your poem for scenario purposes. However, if you feel that you would like to put it up to one of the photoplay companies, I will send you an article which will show you how to put your material into scenario form and a list of firms that accept scenarios. Thank you, ever so much, for your good wishes. I appreciate the poem dedicated to me.

M. H. S.: In "Poor Little Peppina" Eugene O'Brien took the part you mentioned. I don't believe I know the picture you mean. I'm sorry.

BEN: Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: You're crazy, Ben!

ELIZABETH Z.: If you will write to William S. Hart, in care of the Fine Arts-Triangle company, Culver City, Cal., I reckon he will send you his photograph, providing you send him a quarter. I should say, yes.

C. S. H.: You have gone to a lot of trouble to compare your own measurements with the divine three—Venus, Cleopatra, and Kellermann. However, I didn't get them, Stephen. What good are measurements, you ask? Well, for one thing, they prove conclusively whether you should eat to get fat or eat to get thin.

ERNEST: It didn't occur to me that there was anything in "A Daughter of the Gods" which children should be barred from seeing. I know that I should feel no hesitancy whatever in myself taking the youngsters I know to witness the performance.

INTERESTED: Following is the cast of "The Heir to the Hoorah": Joe Lacy, Thomas Meighan; Geraldine Kent, Anita King; Mrs. Kent, Edythe Chapman; Bud, Horace B. Carpenter; Bill, Charles Ogle; Mr. Marshall, Ernest Joy; Mrs. Marshall, Joane Woodbury.

JOHN G. F.: I certainly would like to have you come in upon me some day. As regards spizzerinktum, give a goose. Mighty nice of you to like me. Mighty nice of you to tell me so.

Miss Illington Joins the Movies.

And still the stars shoot screenward! Close upon the announcement of Mme. Olga Petrova's new alliance with Lasky comes news that Margaret Illington also has signed a long term contract with the same company and will make her debut in an adaptation of Basil King's novel, "The Inner Shrine." Miss Illington, who in private life is Mrs. Edward Bowes, will depart for the Lasky studio in Hollywood by the middle of this month and will occupy the same bungalow which housed Geraldine Farrar during her stay in California. What a lot of things that little bungalow will have to tell its grandchildren!

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Holiday Quiet; Few Officials Keep Open House

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—New Year's day was a sad, drab, listless, perfunctory sort of an affair. Officially it was almost nonexistent. While Christmas day has always been rather a quiet day in Washington, being essentially a day for homekeeping, New Year's used to be a day of considerable cheerful official bustle and activity.

Nothing can take the place of the great White House reception on New Year's day. It is told that the late Sir Henry Irving happened to be playing in Washington at New Year's time some years ago. When he was told that on New Year's day the president kept open house and any one who cared to do so might call upon him, he didn't believe it. "It can't be done!" was his attitude. So he went to the White House himself to see that it not only could be, but was. For an hour or more he stood in the corridor and watched the great throng of citizens pass through the state apartments. He went off murmuring something about "a revelation," and later told a friend that it was the most impressive thing he had seen in this country.

This year there was no display of gold lace and clanking swords about the White House, no gayly caparisoned officers on their way to be presented to the chief executive, and no crowds gathered at the gates to catch a glimpse of diplomats in all their glory, sitting in state in their carriages, in the line waiting their turn to alight. The White House was closed to visitors. The president was off at a nearby country club playing golf with Dr. Grayson.

The vice president and Mrs. Marshall were miles away spending the holidays in the bosom of Mrs. Marshall's family in Arizona. The diplomatic breakfast has been impossible for the last three years owing to war conditions. Which as a matter of fact, is almost equally true of the White House reception, and leaves room for hope that it will be resumed when peace is restored.

Two Cabinet Women Receive.

This year Mrs. Lansing, deciding that discretion was the better part of valor, was not even at home on New Year's afternoon. Most of the other cabinet women also "passed up" their usual New Year's receptions. Only Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Daniels received. The Burlesons were in Texas, the Lanes were in mourning for Mr. Lane's brother who died recently; the Houstons were in the "throws" (which is a more expressive spelling than the one that Websters sanctions) of moving; the Gregorys and Redfields seem to have been just a bit lazy, and the William B Wilsons have the double excuse of family mourning and family illness.

The McAdoos compromised; they were not at home in the R street residence on Monday, but Mrs. McAdoo joined the secretary at the treasury on Saturday and they held the pleasant little department reception that they inaugurated for the first New Year's after their marriage. You know there's no use talking—the McAdoos have any number of nice little ways of their own, and a whole lot of people are ardent admirers of Mrs. William McAdoo.

It was Mrs. Baker's first formal reception, in the pleasant, rather old fashioned house out Georgetown way, where she and the secretary have set up winter quarters, though she has been receiving informally on Wednesday afternoons—cabinet day—ever since she got settled, "just getting acquainted."

Assisting her on New Year's day she had all the official army hostesses in town—Mrs. Ingraham, wife of the assistant secretary of war; Mrs. S. B. M. Young, wife of Gen. Young, retired, and the following wives of major generals and brigadier generals stationed in Washington: Mrs. Hugh L. Scott, Mrs. Tasker H. Bliss, Mrs. Erasmus Weaver, Mrs. Henry G. Sharpe, Mrs. Henry P. McCain, Mrs. William P. Crozier, Mrs. Frank McIntyre, Mrs. William A. Mann, Mrs. Ernest Garlington, and Mrs. George P. Scriven.

Mrs. Baker wore a most becoming gown of lavender chiffon.

Reception at Daniels Home.

The secretary of the navy and Mrs. Daniels held the only other official New Year's reception at the Wyoming avenue residence. Receiving with them were the assistant secretary of the navy and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, Rear Admiral William S. Benson and Mrs. Benson, Maj. Gen. George Barnett, commandant of the marine corps, and Mrs. Barnett, Surgeon General Gorgas and Mrs. Gorgas, and a group of rear admirals and their wives, including the L. C. Palmers, the David Taylors, the Robert Griffins, the Ralph Earles, the Frederic Harrises, Paymaster General McGowan, and Commander Byron McCandless, aid to the secretary, and Mrs. McCandless, to say nothing of Mrs. Daniels' mother, Mrs. Adelaide Worth Bagley, and her two sisters, the Misses Bagley, and a group of young girls which included the Burlesons.

The successful experiment of last year whereby Mrs. Daniels converted her fourth floor "attic" into an impromptu ballroom, gay with flags, bunting, and Christmas greens, was repeated this year and lost nothing in the repetition. The band from the Dolphin provided the music and the young people danced to their hearts' content without interfering with the more sedate enjoyment of their elders.

Mrs. Carl Vrooman, wife of the assistant secretary of agriculture, did the honors, unofficially, for the department, where Mr. Vrooman is tremendously popular. She received during the afternoon, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Matthew Scott, and by a group of Democratic "senatorials"—Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, Mrs. Claude Swanson, and Miss Stone—and by her cousins, the Misses Winston, and Miss Lucy Burleson.

Mrs. John A. Logan, wonderful old woman that she is, also received Monday afternoon, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Logan Tucker, and various women of the congressional and army sets here.

Mr. and Mrs. Delano had a dinner on Tuesday night for Secretary and Mrs. Daniels, with the Carl Vroomans, likewise leaders of the Illinois contingent here, among their guests.

The Vroomans are planning a series of dinners, the first, of course, to their own Secretary and Mrs. Houston, which came off on Thursday, to be followed by one to the secretary of war and Mrs. Baker on the 27th, one to the vice president and Mrs. Marshall on Feb. 8, and one to the Lasings on Feb. 20.

These Three Debutantes Will Work Every Day for the Allied Bazaar.

Among the debutantes who will work every day at the Allied bazaar for the heaping up of funds in the tearoom are Miss Isabella Holt, Miss Anna May Grant, and Miss Florence Harris.

Allied Bazaar Center of This Week's Activities.

By Mme. X.

JANUARY is the top of the divide. We've climbed to the separating ridge. Rivers and streams run ahead of us now, towards the summer of 1917., Already shop windows flaunt sport suits, lingerie frocks, and straw hats. But it's a long, long way to June yet, though hundreds of the gay world are going to meet June in Florida, the West Indies, California, and Honolulu.

But few are going before the big bazaar, which opens at 7 p. m. next Thursday at the Coliseum, the most ambitious, tremendous enterprise of the kind ever undertaken in Chicago.

The 4,000 men and women enlisted in the service of the bazaar will all be at their posts. Wares of all kinds and nations will be heaped up in the most alluring fashion on counters under gaily striped awnings; bands of music will resound; there will be dancing and singing. Every kind of exhibit connected with the European war will be on view; big guns, uniforms, ammunition of all sorts; aeroplanes, French biplanes, German Taubes, American Curtiss and Wright machines. Also every imaginable hospital device, equipment, and novelty will be on view, ranging from the big field ambulances to our fellow citizens, Miss Grace Gassette's remarkable mechanical inventions for aiding the maimed and suffering wounded.

One of the most interesting features of the show will be the reproduction of a trench, which will be in an open space just east of the Coliseum. Capt. Ian Hay and Capt. Norman Thwaites of the English army arrive in town today to superintend the construction of this military piece of architecture. There will be dugouts, barbed wire, loopholes, and every appliance usual to an up to date trench, and these two experienced and famous fighters to explain it all to visitors. Capt. Hay, as the author of "The First Hundred Thousand," is known to thousands of American readers of war literature.

Feature at Boston Bazaar.

I wonder if they are going to have here Archie Middlemas, the braw Scotch Highlander, blinded at Gallipoli, who was such a feature in the Boston bazaar. As he stood in an English booth there one day, looking silently out into the darkness that is henceforth his portion, a visitor stepped up and pinned a $100 bill to Middlemas' khaki coat. Fired by the same impulse of sympathy, another bystander followed suit with a greenback—not necessarily so [illegible] and before the closing hour Archie Middlemas was covered with money to the tune of $10,000.

Many famous folk are gathering here for the bazaar, among them the Countess of Kingston, Lord and Lady Aberdeen, and Baroness Huard. The last named wrote a war book entitled "My Home on the Field of Honor," which attracted much atention. Von Kluck made her country place, Chateau Villiers, his headquarters during his sojourn in the Marne region.

Miss Elsie De Wolfe—I always think of her as the American counterpart of "la grande mademoiselle" of France—is to be here and will give lectures, accompanied by lantern slides, on the wonderful new French discovery to cure house-cuisine.

Mrs. Russell Tyson is expecting as house guests the Misses Margaret and Alice Ames of St. Paul, Minn., who drove ambulances containing hospital supplies from Paris to the front and carried the wounded from the front to Paris on their return trips.

Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, who returns from Washington early this week, will have Mrs. Robert Bacon (wife of our former ambassador to France) as a house guest.

M. and Mme. Bahkmetief, the Russian ambassador and his wife, will also be here.

The Lithuanian women, under the leadership of their chairman, Mrs. A. S. Zimonth, are to have two most original and entertaining departments in their division. Besides their exquisite Lithuanian linens, spun and woven by hand from flax grown in the rich fields of far away Lithuania, they are planning to run a matrimonial bureau and also a divorce court in their section, both being manned—if you can so express it—entirely by women. So there's your chance, O, my sisters who missed the so-called goal of every woman's desires in the last leap year you'll have until 1920. The adjacent divorce court may make the matrimonial yoke seem lighter to some.

Theatrical Profession Aids.

If, when the bazaar is over, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank isn't offered many jobs to run big café cabarets it will be because this is an unappreciative world. Her amusement concession, with restaurant, café chantant, shooting gallery, dance floor, and other side shows, is to be one of the biggest, most alive departments of the bazaar. Its background will be the stunning scenery Mrs. John Carpenter made for the Indian ball in New York last month.

All the operatic and theatrical notabilities will do their turn on the stage and afterward add further color to the scene by dining and supping in the café. The theatrical profession promises to make the bazaar its headquarters during the ten days of the bazaar. Although the latter closes at 11, Mrs. Fairbank proposes to keep her restaurant open for late suppers and dancers.

Smiths Give Musical.

The musical given on Friday by Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith at the Blackstone hotel was one of the brilliant and notable social events of the winter, ranking in distinction and charm with the beautiful musical given some weeks ago by Charles H. Wacker and his debutante daughter, Miss Rosalie Wacker.

On last Friday evening Mme. Galli-Curci gave a program of songs for the Smiths' guests and the opportunity of hearing this greatest of living coloratura sopranos was eagerly grasped by all invited—only those utterly disabled or unavoidably out of town stayed away.

This same group of hosts and hostesses are giving a dance on Wednesday next at the Blackstone and have undertaken the delicate task of dividing the sheep from the goats—no, I mean of lining up their friends as either musical or terpsichorean. Some of the dancers are inclined to regret their proficiency in this direction, so great is the desire to hear Mme. Galli-Curci. None of those invited to the musical, so far as heard from, feels that heels have been unduly slighted in favor of ears. Chicago is developing a genuine love of and cultivated appreciation for music.

The Butchers and Bakers and Candlestick Makers' ball last evening capped the week's gayeties. Alas, that this column is set up and imbedded in print long before any opportunity to chronicle this liveliest of winter dances is possible! What will the twelve knights do next year when this date falls on a Sunday?

Doll Sale for Poles.

For the week ahead of us, besides the opening of the bazaar three other events call for notice. Tomorrow afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter, at 677 Lincoln parkway, there will be a sale of Polish dolls under the personal auspices of Mme. Paderewska, wife of the great musician Ignace Paderewski.

These dolls have been made by Polish artists and refugees in Paris, Warsaw, and Switzerland, and the money raised is to be devoted to aiding the Polish war sufferers, especially the young girls of Poland. The dolls are not just ordinary toys. They have been endowed by their creators with life, character, individuality. There are soldiers, monks, kings, queens, peasants, and poets among them.

Besides these dolls there will be on sale Paderewski's favorite cakes, made from an Egyptian recipe, rich, mysterious, and probably—between you and me—deliciously indigestible.

Besides Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter and Mrs. E. Tramonti, who are actively organizing this sale, there are deeply interested in its success Mmes. Bryan Lathrop, Arthur Aldis, J. J. Glessner, G. A. Carpenter, George Isham, J. J. Mitchell, Cyrus Bentley, Edson Keith, Martin Ryerson, Charles L. Hutchinson, and Chauncey Keep.

Mrs. Parsons to Lecture.

Tuesday evening there will be a half a dozen or more dinners given by north and south side hostesses, who will take their guests later to the lecture to be given by Mrs. Elsie Clews Prsons, under the auspices of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association, at the residence of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, 2700 Lake View avenue. Among these dinner givers are Mmes. Chrales Hamill, Arthur Ryerson, James Field, Kellogg Fairbank, William Monroe, and George Packard.

Mrs. Parsons is to speak on "Sex and Feminism"—a mysterious caption or title which piques the fancy. Both she and her subject will interest her audience. A dyed in the wool rebel against the existing order of social conventions, she is one of the most attractive revolutionists that ever undertook to turn upside down a smug, self-satisfied, comfortable, Philistine order of things.

She is handsome in a rather icily regular fashion, is remote in manner, has a soft, low voice, clear diction, dresses extremely well, is quite athletic, an intrepid traveler, has written several notable books on her line of thought on which she is such an authority that she gives lectures in universities—in short, she is a charming specimen of the new superwoman, a type which the twentieth century seems likely to evolve.

Mrs. Ryerson's delightful green Georgian drawing room will doubtless be crowded on Tuesday evening with a fashionable and intellectual gathering.

The second assembly ball next Friday evening at the Blackstone will draw many conspicuous workers from the bazaar, for the assemblies are social functions no one slights. The bazaar cabaret and restaurant will have to get along without Mrs. "Joe" Winterbotham that evening, as she is giving a good sized dinner party preceding the ball.

To Reproduce Historic Ball.

Every one may not be tall enough to look over and beyond the high walls of the Allied bazaar, but Mrs. Robert McGann and the sponsors of the Arts club are of this stature, and, knowing that the world will continue to revolve after that ten days, they are planning what promises to be one of the winter's chief social affairs—a reproduction of the great ball that was held in 1860 at Washington to celebrate Abraham Lincoln's inauguration as president of these United States.

This ball of 1917 wil take place on Jan. 26 in the historic old banquet hall of the Palmer house. Every one will be in the dress of that era. Many will represent their own ancestors. Mrs. McGann is to wear a gown of her mother's of that period. Young John Wentworth will go as his distinguished grandsire, "Long John" Wentworth. Allen Haines will represent his grandfather, John Allen.

The dances of that time will be revived, the quadrille, lancers, and prairie queen. Mrs. Nancy Cox-McCormick is organizing a dancing group of sixteen young people. Farwell Winston and Wayne Taylor are getting up another dance group to be composed of the debutante set, wherein one of the number will play a fiddle and call out the figures as was the custom with our forebears.

It will be a real experience to revive once more the spirit and personalities of those far off, simple days—days so momentous in our history.

Ray Atherton, Charles Dewey, and others of the Arts club executive committee are already working to make this ball a success. The invitations, by the way, are an exact facsimile of the original inaugural ball.

I omitted last week, in announcing Capt. Pechkoff's talk at Mrs. George M. Pullman's next Sunday, to say that Muratore is going to sing on that occasion and that admission is by invitation only and that it is entirely a nonpay entertainment.

Never mind, there will be lots of agreeable ways of getting rid of your money in aid of war sufferers this week and the week after, so don't line your pockets with asbestos.

Of Interest to Mothers:

For many years I have taken children's pictures on each anniversary of their birthday. In this way parents have a series of portraits which are their most treasured possession. Our charge for one picture is only one dollar each year.

Thistle Booth Receipts to Help Scotland Women

By Hazel Whitaker.

AMONG the many, many interesting attractions billed for the Allied bazaar is the thistle booth, the proceeds of which will be devoted to Lady Aberdeen's child saving campaign fund, which is being collected for the purpose of helping the mothers of Scotland to guard against every preventable death in their own families, so many of which have already lost fathers and sons in the war.

The fund is being sponsored here by the Woman's Association of Commerce, with Mrs. Ella Wood Dean acting as chairman and Mrs. James Hamilton Keeler as vice chairman.

"In the struggle to carry on the war," to quote Lady Aberdeen, "it is exceedingly difficult to raise funds for ordinary health work at home, as the natural impulse is to send every available cent to the sick and wounded." So the child saving campaign fund managers feel that their work is of urgent importance. They are making a special effort to coöperate in this work with parents, teachers, and municipal authorities, as well as with patriotic Scotch folk the world over.

"At such a time," says Lady Aberdeen, "when all available doctors are at the front, when the women at home are straining every effort to supply labor usually carried on by men; when prices have risen so high; when sorrow and anxiety are rife in every household, young mothers and infants encounter far greater dangers to life and health than in ordinary times.

"And especially is this true in the crowded cities. The little ones on whom the future responsibility rests of taking the place of a whole generation should be brought up in full mental and physical vigor. This only can be done by giving skilled parental care and wise instruction to the mothers in the management of their children. And this means funds, funds to be devoted to this work especially."

Lady Aberdeen has enlarged the field of this campaign, which now includes all of Great Britain and Ireland, so much since its inception that the work has grown to be an enormous responsibility. Both Lord and Lady Aberdeen will arrive in the city on Tuesday direct from the Boston bazaar and will bring with them many treasures to be sold. Already ten boxes have been sent by them.

The members here especially wish contributions of Scottish ornaments, and products such as Scotch scones, toffy, etc., as well as the services of bagpipe and piebroch players and Scotch dancers.

A donation of "good fairies" has already been received from Mrs. Jessie McCutcheon Raleigh, some silk plaid ties from David McCurrach Jr., and an electric lamp from the Edison company. Through the kindness of Sir Donald Mann, Charles Strohm, and Marvin Hughitt plans are under way for tickets for excursion trips on the roads represented by them. Mrs. A. E. Palmer has been asked to donate one of her pictures.

Mrs. Walter Deemer is a member of the cast for the play which Les Matinees Francaise is giving at a salon on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Francis P. Caughlin.

News of the Religious World

College Heads Gather Here for Convention.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

COLLEGE presidents, church workers in state universities, and secretaries of the boards of education of the various church denominations, totaling 250 college presidents and educational leaders, will be in session in Chicago this week.

For the first time an exhibit of the colleges of Illinois will be displayed. Invitations have been extended to 100 of Chicago's prominent business men to view the exhibit and have it explained to them. It will then be open for public view.

Every college in Illinois, including the University of Chicago and Northwestern university, has been surveyed and the facts concerning the nature of its work, the places from which its students come, the relative amount of undergraduate and professional work done, and other features will be visualized.

Impetus will be given to a national campaign in the interest of the church and independent colleges. There are twenty denominations coöperating. An immediate fund of $100,000 is being raised to promote the campaign which, it is believed, will bring to the colleges millions of dollars in new equipment and endowments.

Henry Churchill King, president of Oberlin college, president of the Association of American Colleges, will make the opening address at the Hotel La Salle on Thursday at 8 p. m. Silas Evans, president of Ripon college, Wisconsin; John S. Nollen, president of Lake Forest university; Edward D. Eaton, president of Beloit college, Wisconsin, and Thomas F. Holgate, acting president of Northwestern university, will be speakers Thursday evening or Friday. "New Fields for College Men and Women," "The Chief Weakness of the American Colleges and How They May Best Be Met," will be two of the subjects for addresses and general discussion.

The council of church boards of education will meet on Wednesday and Thursday at the Hotel La Salle. The Presbyterian College union will meet at the McCormick Theological seminary on Thursday and the Methodist Education association will meet at the La Salle on Tuesday and Wednesday. A joint meeting of all the church boards will be held on Thursday at 3 o'clock. The church workers in universities will meet at the Congress hotel from Tuesday to Thursday.

R. Watson Cooper is the secretary of the Association of American Colleges and the executive in the national campaign in behalf of the coöperating colleges and has opened headquarters at 19 South La Salle street.

The Rev. J. M. Dean, pastor of the Second Baptist church and president of the Northern Baptist Theological seminary, has been granted three months' leave, beginning Jan. 1. He will spend the time on the Pacific coast in regaining his health. The Rev. Percy W. Stephens will act as pastor in his absence.

The Rev. O. F. Jordan, pastor of the Evanston Christian church, will speak in the First Christian church, Springfield, next Tuesday evening on the subject, "The lights and Shadows of a Great City."

The Rev Joshua Odén

PHOTO McELLIOTT

The Rev. Joshua Oden is pastor of the Irving Park Lutheran church, Belleplaine and Harding avenues, which is erecting a parish house and church building at a total expense of $65,000. The parish house will be ready for occupancy in the early spring. The church building is under roof and the interior work is being done. When the church building is ready moving in day will be celebrated with special services, but dedication will not take place until Oct. 31 next. This date was selected because it is Reformation day when the international celebration of the Lutheran reformation will culminate.

The Irving Park church was organized in 1903. Pastor Oden came to the church in 1908 when it was a small mission. The congregation is still worshiping in the frame church costing $2,000. The building has been moved to a nearby lot and will be abandoned as soon as the new church is ready. The membership of the church is about 500 and the Sunday school numbers 450.

Mr. Oden was educated in Bethany college, Lindsborg, Kas; Augustana Theological seminary, Rock Island, Ill., and took post-graduate work in the University of Nebraska. He is a member of the board of city missions, a member of the statistical committee of the quadricentennial reformation celebration, and past president of the Augustana league.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson will preach tomorrow at 10:30 at the regular meeting of the Methodist ministers in the First church, Clark and Washington streets.

The churches of Joliet, Ill., are observing the entire month of January as go to church month.

The Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic university, Washington, D. C., will preach this morning at St. Anne's Catholic church, Fifty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue. He will address the Irish Fellowship club next Saturday, and next Sunday speak at the Holy Name cathedral, North State and Superior streets.

The celebration of the feast of the Holy Name will be held this evening at the Cathedral of the Holy Name, North State and Superior streets, under the auspices of the archdiocesan union of the Holy Name societies. Archbishop G. W. Mundelein will be present, and the Rt. Rev. A. J. McGavick will sing the vespers. The address will be given by the Rev. C. M. Thuente, O. P.

At the German Evangelical church, Orchard street and Kemper place, a cantata, "The Holy Child," will be given today at 10:30 by the choir under the direction of Joseph Schwelkerath. The Rev. R. A. John and the Rev. Jacob Pister, pastors, will speak.

The Rev. Martin D. Hardin, for nine years pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, Ashland boulevard and Ogden avenue, will preach his farewell sermons today at 11 and 7:45 o'clock. Dr. Hardin announced he would take a rest for some months before assuming charge of another church. Dr. Hardin has raised an endowment of $100,000 and leaves the church free from debt. Thomas Kane of Evanston is chairman of the board of trustees.

Dr. Albert Parker Fitch of Andover Theological seminary, Cambridge, Mass., and Amherst college will speak tonight at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall. His subject will be: "The Power of the Positive Life." Dr. Fitch has been president of Andover for eight years and was recently elected to Amherst, where he will direct the new foundation on the history of religion. Dr. Fitch will be the preacher today at 11 o'clock and next Sunday at the University of Chicago. Clifford W. Barnes will preside. W. P. Sidley will read the scriptures and Gustav Holmquist will sing the offertory.

Miss Victoria Booth-Clibborn, daughter of La Mareschale Booth-Clibborn and granddaughter of Gen. William Booth, founder of the Salvation army, will speak at 8 o'clock this evening in the interests of the Canadian Red Cross work in the Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue. George Hamlin will sing. The Rev. A. E. Selcer is rector.

The Rev. James W. Sommerville, Gloversville, N. Y., will spend today and Monday in Chicago under the auspices of the Chicago Methodist Social union. He formerly lived in Wichita, Kas., where he was the founder of the gospel team movement. He will speak tonight in the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, Ellis avenue and Forty-sixth street, and will be entertained at a luncheon tomorrow noon at the Hotel Morrison. He is expected also to make other addresses while here.

The St. Stephen's English Lutheran church, 4348 Drummond place, will celebrat today its second anniversary. The Rev. Earl S. Rudisill is pastor.

The Argyle Congregational church, of which the Rev. James S. Ainslie is pastor, will hold its first services today in the Argmore theater, Argyle and Kenmore avenues.

Corns Peel Right Off With "Gets-It"

2 Drops, and the Corn is a "Goner!"

When you've got to walk on the sides of your shoe to get away from those awful corn-pains, there's only one common-sense thing to do. Put 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" on the corn right away. Pain and inflammation will disappear, the corn will begin to shrivel from that instant—then it loosens and falls right off.

There's no other corn-remover in the world that acts like "Gets-It." No new discovery has been made in corn-removers since "Gets-It" was born. Don't forget that fact. "Gets-It" does away forever with the use of salves that irritate, bandages that make a bundle of your toe, plasters that half do the work, knives and scissors that draw blood. Use "Gets-It"—no more digging or cutting.

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF NEW YORK SOCIETY. - - By Mme. X.

New Year Brings Many Weddings and Gay Parties.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Society has just been thrilled by the announcement of two spectacular engagements. Paris as well as New York is interested in the betrothal of Miss Gabrille Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren, to Reginald B. Rives, son of Mrs. Reginald Rives.

Mrs. Warren and her daughter, who have been engaged in relief work in France since the opening of the war, returned to New York in September from Paris, where Mr. Warren remained to supervise various relief projects. Mr. Whitney Warren Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren, has been attached to the Harjes section of the American ambulance in France some time.

Miss Warren and her fiancé are members of old families of New York. Her mother was Miss Charlotte A. Tooker. The late Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Warren were her grandparents and the late Mrs. Robert Goelet was her aunt. George Henry Warren and Lloyd Warren are her uncles. Mrs. William Starr Miller is her aunt, and the Marquise de Lasteyrie of Paris, whose husband has been at the front since the beginning of the war, is her cousin. You will remember that this young woman on her honeymoon put on knickerbockers and climbed the Rockies.

Mr. Rives is a grandson on one side of the late Edward Buckley and on the other of the late Francis R. Rives, and he is descended from the Rev. Henry Barclay and Mary Rutgers Barclay of colonial renown in New York. He is a nephew of Mr. George L. Rives, Mrs. Walker Breese Smith, and the late Francis R. Rives, whose widow lives at Ascot, England; the late David King, and the late John Borland. He is related also to the Ward, Kountze, Schuyler, Parsons, Beverley Robinson, Gallatin, Goelet, and Henshaw Jones families.

Young Harriman to Wed.

There was little surprise in the announcement of the second interesting engagement last week, when Dr. and Mrs. Harold H. Fries of 40 West Fifty-ninth street gave out that their daughter, Miss Gladys C. C. Fries, would marry Roland N. Harriman, son of Mrs. E. Henry Harriman and one of the five heirs to the great fortune left by his late father, the financier and railroad owner. Their friends had known it some time before. Dr. and Mrs Fries went on Tuesday of last week to their shooting preserve at Tillery, N. C., accompanied by Miss Fries and her fiancé.

When not at Yale university from which he will be graduated next June, Mr. Harriman gives much of his time to trotting horses at Arden farms, part of Mrs. Harriman's beautiful estate at Arden, N. Y. [The house sits on top of a rugged hill, a thousand feet above the surrounding picturesque landscape.] He has made some fine records at the famous track at Goshen, N. Y. He has been driving his trotters since his seventeenth year. He soon will be 21.

Mr. Harriman is one of the two unmarried children of Mrs. Harriman. His sisters are Mrs. Robert Livingston Gerry, Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, and Miss Carol A. Harriman. His brother is William Averell Harriman, who married Miss Kitty Lanier Lawrence, daughter of the late Francis C. Lawrence and granddaughter of Charles Lanier, in September of last year. Edward Henry Harriman, who died in September, 1909, left an estate estimated at more than $200,000,000. By the terms of the will Mrs. Harriman received the entire fortune.

Dr. and Mrs. Fries and their daughter are now at their shooting lodge, "Tillery," North Carolina, where Mr. Harriman is their guest. They will return to town the early part of January. Miss Fries was graduated from Miss [illegible] school and was introduced to society years ago. She is a member of the Junior league and has been active in the entertainments of this and other charitable organizations.

Everybody's Skating.

While Tuxedo and other fashionable country colonies were sending their quota to town for the New Year merrymaking, there was no lack of entertaining in these suburban resorts of fashion and up in the Ramapo country so much was going on that we wonder how they ever got through with it.

Dancing in the cottages and dancing in the clubhouse made Tuxedo gay. The costume skating carnival on the club rink was picturesque and reminded those who took part of St. Moritz before the war days. The rink was illuminated like a fairy scene with the young people gliding and dancing over the ice in their fancy attire and under boughs of evergreens and holly.

At these low prices we cannot send Coats, Suits or Furs on approval or accept their return.

FUTURE EVENTS

Every day of the early part of this week will be a-quiver with the excitement of committee meetings, working bees, and tea parties having to do with preparations for the opening on Thursday in the Coliseum of the greatest charity event Chicago has ever laid its busy and enthusiastic hands to. There is scarcely a social leader who has not made the great allied bazaar the first interest of her life for the last few months, and Thursday the results will be seen—or but faintly seen, for it will take many visits to the bazaar to begin to comprehend the wonders of the work that will be on exhibit and for sale, and the beauties of the articles to be had but for—the paying for them. Among those who have been most active in the preparations are Mrs. James T. Harahan, Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. Charles H. Hamill, Mrs. Hathaway, Mrs. James A. Patten, Mrs. John C. Spry, Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, Mrs. W. Irving Osborne, Mrs. Halsted Freeman, Mrs. Reuben H. Donnelley, Mrs. Arrick Kirk, Mrs. George D. McLaughlin, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. William A. Yager, Mrs. Frank C. Letts, Mrs Cecil Clark Davis, Mrs. James B. Forgan, Mrs. D. R. Forgan, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. Harry Channon, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis, Mrs. Ralph Clarkson, Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. John Smulski, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, and Miss Martha Wilson.

Society is taking an especial interest in the debut of Leo Sowerby, a Chicago boy, who will make his first appearance as a composer with the Symphony orchestra under the leadership of Eric De Lamarter at Orchestra hall on the evening of Jan. 18. Mr. Sowerby, who is but 21 years of age, has written a piano concerto especially for the occasion, which he will play himself.

Miss Alice Gerstenberg of 539 Deming place will give a dinner on Tuesday evening in honor of Edward Goodman, director of the Washington Square players of New York, now in the city.

Miss Betty Newberry and Miss Florence Taft will be given a dinner-dance on Tuesday evening at the Casino club by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Newberry and Mr. and Mrs. Oren E. Taft.

Mme. Paderewski will hold a sale of dolls and other articles made by Polish artists at the home of Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter, 677 Lincoln parkway, tomorrow afternoon from 3 until 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hamill of 1100 Lake Shore drive will give a dinner on Tuesday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Parsons of New York, who are to be their house guests for several days. Mrs. Parsons will speak later at the home of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson on "Sex and Feminism."

Mrs. Robert B. Gregory and her daughter, Mrs. Raymond E. Durham of Winnetka, will entertain at a reception on Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Harriet Blackstone of Glencoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard of 1344 Astor street will give a dinner before the dance to be given on Wednesday by Mr. and Mrs. Solomon A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce D. Smith at the Blackstone hotel.

The annual ball and card party given by the auxiliary of the South Side Catholic Woman's club will be held on Friday evening at the Colonial club, 4445 Grand boulevard. Miss Mary Carlin is chairman of the ball committee.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Niels Gron and her daughter, Miss Emma Louise Stone, are in New York for a two weeks' visit.

Miss Virginia Tietgens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tietgens of Evanston, has as her guest at White Sulphur Springs, where the family is wintering, Miss Virginia Schultz of Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. William Shippen Jenks are in Minneapolis, where they went to attend the wedding of Miss Delphine Gillette, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Singer Gillette, and Jesse Gilbert Burton of Mount Vernon, N. Y., which took place Thursday evening at the residence of the bride's parents.

Mrs. A. Stanton Zinn of 5023 Champlain avenue has as her house guests her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Cooper of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Miss Priscilla Pardridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Pardridge of 9 East Cedar street, will leave during the week to resume her studies at school in Washington, Conn.

Miss Josephine Palmer is one of the debutantes who will return to school during the week. She will go back to Vassar college, where she is a senior.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Fahrney of 4111 Sheridan road, accompanied by Mrs. Fahrney's mother, Mrs. I. Newton Rice of Desplaines; Mrs. Frank R. Donahue of Oak Park, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meyers, will leave this evening for Fort Myers, Fla., where they will board their houseboat, Wilma, for a cruise up the Indian river and through the Everglades. E. C. Fahrney, Mr. and Mrs. John Seinwerth, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Oamun, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rousseau are others who will join the houseboat party later. Mrs. Fred T. Rice of Highland Park leaves today for Fort Morgan, Ala., to join her husband, Lieupt. Rice of the medical corps, U. S. A., who is in charge of the military hospital there. They will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fahrney later in the winter.

The New 1917 Nemo Corsets

Third Floor—Center

Here is important news, indeed, for it tells of the new corset styles for the coming season and of Nemo corsets at prices that when these lots are sold will have to be advanced sharply because of the great increase in cost of all materials of which corsets are made.

Three models are specially featured because of their exclusive self-reducing, back-resting and auto-massage features giving a health and comfort service that no other corsets can duplicate, choice at $3, $3.50 and $4.

To have the correct model Nemo corset for your figure properly fitted means the height of health and comfort insurance. No fitting service in America can compare with ours in thoroughness and care. Still no extra charge is made for it.

Nemo Self-Reducing Corset with Auto-Massage

An entirely new form of the famous Nemo self-reducing corset. The girdle top is a bit higher at the front, and thus completely controls the superfluous flesh above the waist line. The semi-elastic auto-massage bands, directly under the end of the corset, in connection with the self-reducing straps, support the abdomen and banish excess flesh quickly and permanently. Of fine white coutil, in sizes 22 to 36, at.................................. 3.50

Nemo

STANDARD

OF CORSETS —AND— SERVICE

THIS INTRODUCTORY SALE

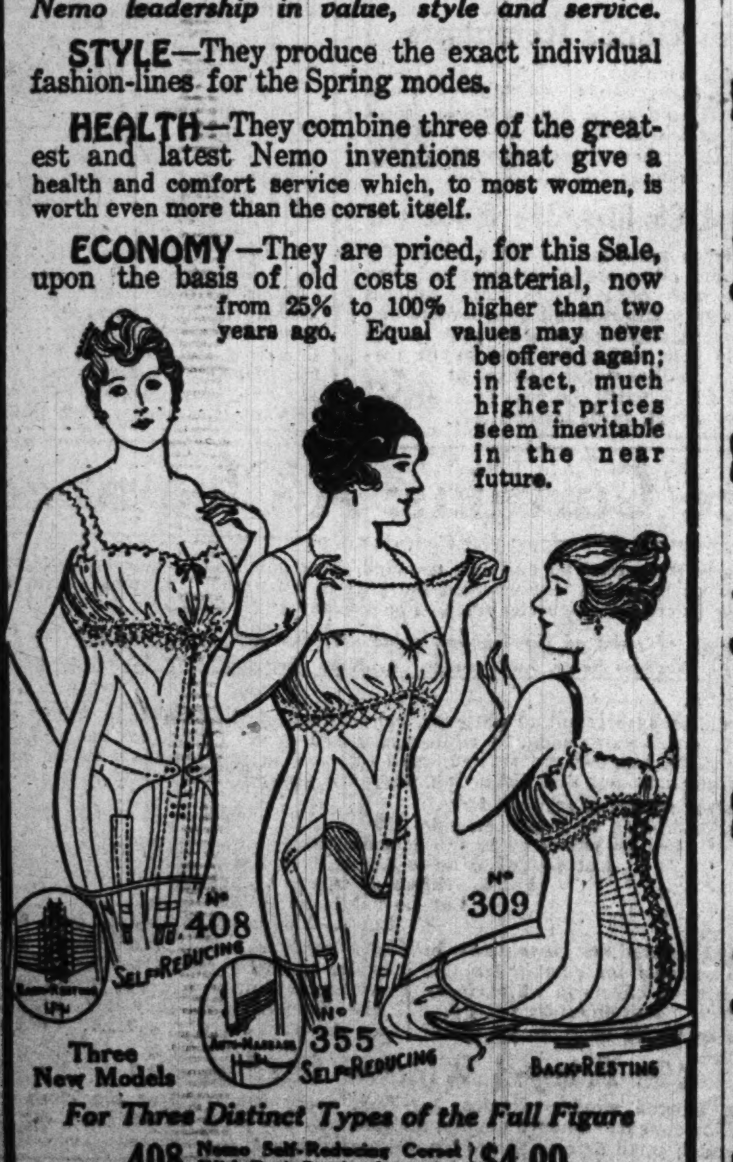
OF THREE NEW NEMO MODELS

—demonstrates once more the unchallenged Nemo leadership in value, style and service.

STYLE—They produce the exact individual fashion-lines for the Spring modes.

HEALTH—They combine three of the greatest and latest Nemo inventions that give a health and comfort service which, to most women, is worth even more than the corset itself.

ECONOMY—They are priced, for this Sale, upon the basis of old costs of material, now from 25% to 100% higher than two years ago. Equal values may never be offered again; in fact, much higher prices seem inevitable in the near future.



Three New Models

For Three Distinct Types of the Full Figure

408 Nemo Self-Reducing Corset With Back-Resting Invention } $4.00

For full figure, medium height. The new Back-Resting invention prevents backache by supporting and strengthening wearied muscles; induces correct poise and healthful breathing. Improved Self-Reducing service controls excess flesh on abdomen, hips and back. Low top; long skirt. Ultra-fashionable shape.

355 Nemo Self-Reducing Corset With Auto-Massage Service } $3.50

For stout figures, average height. Incurved front steels, with semi-elastic Auto-Massage bands (under end of corset), support perfectly and reduce permanently. Low "girdle" top, higher in front to cover and reduce any excess flesh above waist; long skirt.

309 Nemo Back-Resting Corset With Auto-Massage Bands } $3.00

For medium-full figures—the "plump" woman. Auto-Massage bands give support and prevent formation of fat. This corset "rests your back," and gives ultra-stylish lines. Low top, long skirt; light in weight. Fine coutil; sizes 20 to 30.

Considering the higher and rising cost of materials, these are the greatest values ever offered in Nemo Corsets. The prices named will be continued throughout January.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

YES, SIR, IT'S A REGULAR CAR!

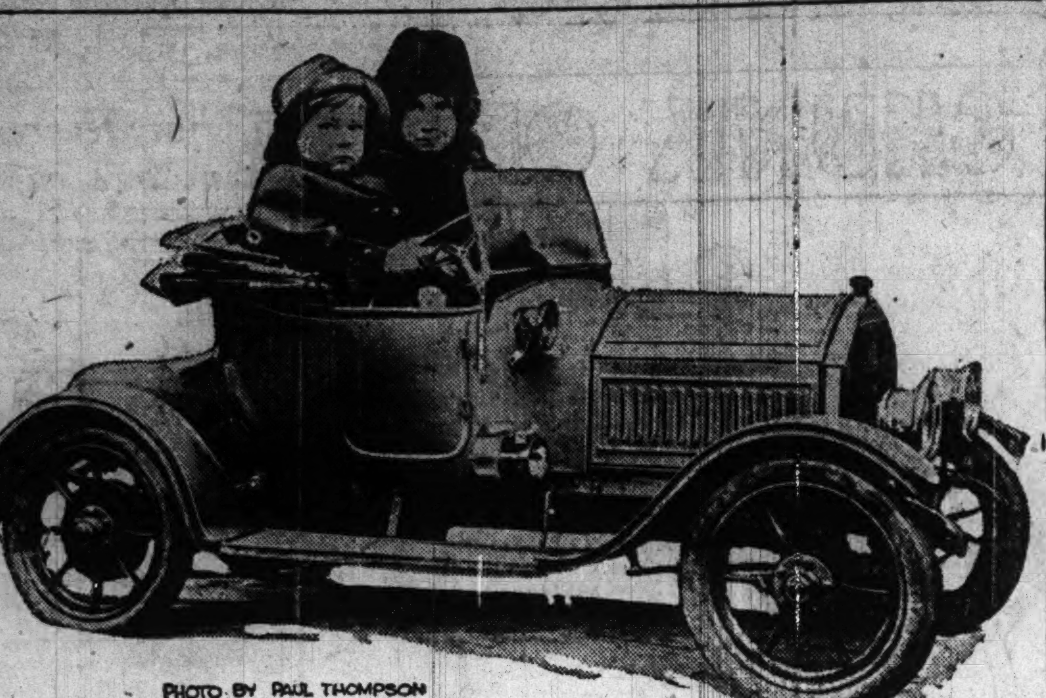

PHOTO BY PAUL THOMPSON

It didn't take up as much room in Santa Claus' bag as a full grown automobile, but it's a perfectly equipped roadster nevertheless. From radiator to differential it is a faithful replica, two-fifths the regular size, of a well known English motor car designed to seat two children. The top of the windshield (they call it the wind screen over there, y'know) comes just above a man's knee. President Fallieres of France was greatly interested in the little model when it was exhibited in Paris, and Queen Alexandra has purchased a similar car, slightly larger, for Crown Prince Olav of Norway.

The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

One Finger Does It.

Makers of automobile parts have experimented for several years with devices designed to do away with the ponderous gear shift lever. Now comes a

IT SHIFTS YOUR GEARS FROM THE STEERING WHEEL

Milwaukee manufacturer with a magnetic gear shift perfected to such an extent that one of the foremost makes of motor cars has adopted it as stock equipment and has abolished the lever entirely on its 1917 models. After throwing out your clutch you simply press the right button of a little group on your steering wheel post and your change of speeds is accomplished But you can't always get Louise Lovely of the movies to do the trick for you, as she is doing in the picture.

To Control Motor Heat.

One of the newest wrinkles in motordom is an air shutter for the radiator. Controlled by hand from the dash, it operates like a window shutter and offers a means of preventing air from flowing through the radiator cells so that the engine may be warmed quickly and may be kept warm after stopping It also permits the air current to be regulated so that the proper motor heat may be obtained at any time. The shutter is regular equipment on 1917 Hudsons.

Warning the Man Behind.

A simple automatic signaling device to notify the man behind that you are going to slow down or stop consists of a red hand on the end of a scissors extension. It is attached to the side of the car and operated from the driving seat, a slight pressure on the control lever thrusting the hand out 16½ inches from the car body. The makers say it can't get out of order.

A STOP SIGNAL FOR THE DRIVER BEHIND YOU

Speed Measured by Air.

A new speedometer of interesting design operates on the air friction principle. The speed measuring portion of the instrument consists of two cups, one inverted and telescoping the other within an air gap separating the two. The driving cup is inverted inside the driving member, the air friction being proportioned to the speed of the revolving cup.

Sure Lights for Fords.

Electrically lighted Fords may now be equipped with a device which automatically short circuits the right hand headlight at speeds below fifteen miles an hour, delivering a double quota of current to the left headlight. It insures a bright light at low speeds, which is not always obtainable when both headlights are going.

Just Step on It.

A Chicago firm offers a device which locks the gear shift lever in neutral at a simple pressure of the foot when the driver is leaving his car. It can be unlocked only with a key. Complete protection against theft without interference with the motor mechanism is claimed for the contraption.

THE LITTLE QUAKER MAID'S REMARKS.

It's wrong for men to watch me, still,
I like it.
They follow me against my will,
I like it.
They say such pretty things to me
I know it's wrong as wrong can be,
I should not listen, but you see
I like it.

Sometimes to hold my hand they try,
I like it.
I do not understand just why
I like it.
They say that I am pretty, too,
I know I should not think that's true,
But what's a little girl to do?
I like it.

They call me "little Quaker maid,"
I like it.
They softly say, "Art thou afraid?"
I like it.
They whisper sweetly in my ear
A lot of things I should not hear,
I'm a naughty little girl—O, dear,
I like it.

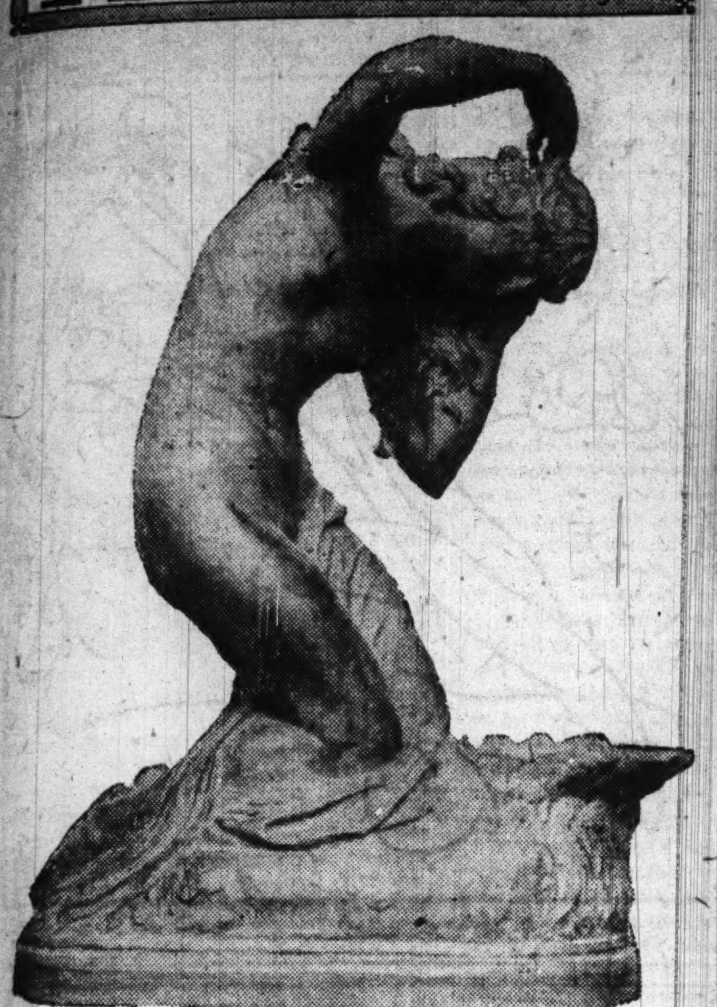
ART by Louise James Bargelt



The Nymph by Albin Polasek
Art Institute of Chicago

Works of Seven Artists on View at Art Institute.

A WIDE gamut of tastes, types, and kinds may be run in an exhibit which comprises the work of seven different artists. Such an exhibit opened last week at the Art institute, and such a gamut was generously run. And the effect, en ensemble, was that of an excellently assembled, splendidly representative collection of each man's work.

The first two rooms of the new annex are filled with paintings by Childe Hassam. Childe Hassam, the modern, the delicate, the colorful, the impressionistic. If I were to make even the briefest mention of the honors and awards which this man has received I should have to fill a column at least. He is seen everywhere in the country today, known everywhere, and wherever his work is exhibited, there promptly does he achieve some prominent and particular mention of work well done.

Hassam has a decidedly reportorial as well as a pictorial sense. He who has been called the Puritan painter of America has a most convincing color note. He neither paints flat nor sharp and for that reason his pictures are as delightful as a lovely voice which never wanders from the key.

His sun's rays fall hot and blinding on gayly colored flowers and garments and landscapes and interiors. One feels that he has played at hide and seek with colors and in the game has won at knowledge with them.

The varied scope of his work includes the use of oils, water colors, pastels, and etchings, and in all lines his intelligent understanding of the craftsmanship of art has made of him a truly superior workman.

Following Hassam's exhibit comes a display of paintings wherein surely, if ever, is contained that "peace that passeth understanding." They are the pictures by Carlson, and only in the soul of an artist, aloof, detached, poised, could such creations of still power and stupendous quiet be created. In his "Deserted Garden" one is reminded of "here where the world is quiet, here where all troubles cease," and in his "City Twilight," where action is vaguely hinted at, the deep restfulness of approaching night pervades all else.

The spirit of winter absorbs the canvases. With snow it binds up the streams or lets them loose for a treacherous thaw for a day; it creeps into the heart of the vast, silent woods at twilight and lays its hand across the prairies at noonday. It is only in the exception that one glimpses the gleam of autumn red foliage or feels as with a breath the soft fresh winds of early June.

In the room filled with landscapes by De Wolf one sees large views of nature, done in deep blues, misty purples, and soft grays. Now there is a mountain scene with snow capped peaks rising up into a cloud hung sky, and next there will be a simple glance into a wood, golden touched by October. And then, beyond, in picture after picture, more mountains and seas and vast widths of glorious sky.

In George W. Russel of Dublin is a mystical interpreter of Ireland. Ireland, the reckless, the poetic, the land of the dreamers of dreams and singers of songs, is poetically rendered in some twenty paintings by this "A. E."

Unless you are a lover of dreams yourself and have dreamed much and desired more you may not catch the caress in the clouds that hang low over "Dove Gray Sands" nor feel the infinite mysteries that dwell in the shadowy gray blossomed "valleys." You will not stand enchanted before the foaming shores of "Sessiagh Lake" nor feel something of the lightness and joy of the world in "Picnickers"; and unless you have been intoxicated by the mad spray of the sea beating hard against you you will not catch the spirit of "Bathers."

They are delicately emotional, these pictures, mystically artistic, and whether you like them or not I think is purely a matter of mood and of temperament.

Another room is devoted exclusively to the paintings by Edward Butler. There are twenty-four of them in all and they are vivid, attractive landscape scenes, full of vigor and vitality. Lake Michigan smiles upon us after a most familiar storm and the Pacific coast greets us sternly from a rock bound corner. Besides paintings which are essentially landscapic, there is the "Midnight Hour," which is an extremely atmospheric, impressive piece of work. The painting is pervaded by a purplish light, which is deftly suggestive of the hour of midnight. There are also some fine dock scenes, the "Boat Builders" being an especially strong portrayal of wharf life.

In the two exhibits of sculpture by Mahonri Young and Polasek there are a number of powerful pieces of work. Polasek is well known to Chicagoans because of his "Sower," which stood for some time on the institute steps and has since been bought by the institute for its permanent collection. Young is a New York artist of virility and charm, and his display contains much of the best work he has done.

The last day of the exhibit of the Chicago Society of Miniature Painters will be next Friday. On that day the votes will be counted for prizes. It is prophesied that the contest is to be a close one.

On Jan. 15 there will be an exhibition of etchings and dry points by Cadwallader Washburn.

Exhibitions at the galleries:

Art club—Society of Miniature Painters and Paintings by artist members.

Friedel's—Paintings and etchings.

Moulton & Bickell's—C. C. Conn's collection.

Boullier's—Etchings by Schneider.

Thurber's Art studio—Landscapes by Alfred Jansson.

Reducing Crossing Accidents.

THAT grade crossing accidents caused by automobiles crossing ahead of passenger trains may be reduced to a minimum, the Northern Pacific railway has started a campaign in states through which it operates. Under the caption, "A Word of Caution to Motorists," printed circulars embodying ways and means for the avoidance of such collisions have been sent to all secretaries of state in the northwest, with the request that these be distributed when new license plates are sent out.

"With the number of automobiles coming into use rapidly increasing, it cannot be too strongly emphasized that caution should be observed by drivers when approaching grade crossings," says the circular. "Daily reports show accidents that could have been averted had the driver of the motor car stopped, looked, and listened before attempting to cross ahead of an approaching train.

"Government statistics show the number of persons killed and injured in the United States at grade crossings to be as follows: During 1914, 1,147 persons killed, 2,935 injured; during 1915, 991 persons killed, 2,898 injured. The reduction in casualties during 1915, as compared with the previous year, is due to warning notices posted by railway companies and automobile clubs.

"But the real measures of avoiding such accidents are to be found in the care observed by individual drivers themselves. Let your slogan be: 'Stop! Look! Listen!'

"Drivers owe this to themselves and to the passengers riding in their automobiles. They hold as great a responsibility toward their families and friends as do the engineers of rapidly moving passenger trains to the patrons whose destinies they are charged with. All the signs, notices, bells, whistles, gates, and flagmen to protect the public are of no avail unless they can have the coöperation of the motorists.

"If automobile drivers would make it a habit to associate the sight of a grade crossing and its advance notices with the sight of a traffic policeman, and control their machines accordingly, grade crossing accidents would cease. No man is immune to the accidents at grade crossings which are so frequent with the constantly growing use of the automobile."

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

A "CONCLUSIVE PEACE."

If there is one point that all the belligerent peoples and all the neutrals will agree upon, it is that the present war, more devastating in extent than any other in the world's history, shall be followed by a "conclusive peace." "Never again" expresses the mood of most men, and the hope that somehow a peace which shall last may be achieved probably is the only thing that sustains them in the midst of the tremendous effort and sacrifice they are making.

We are all talking, therefore, of a "conclusive peace." But what is a conclusive peace? The militarist and the extreme partisan think a conclusive peace is one which follows a "knockout." If the adversary is not prostrate, if he is not helpless and hopeless, the peace is nonconclusive.

History does not support this theory. The English and Scotch fought for centuries to an inconclusive peace which endures today and always will endure. The English crushed the Irish and the conclusive peace has been a running sore in the side of Britain ever since. In a military sense most of Napoleon's victories were conclusive, most of his peaces based on them were conclusive. Yet they were never conclusive in the sense of bringing enduring peace. Nothing could be more conclusive than the debacle which France suffered in 1870. But 1914 was an answer to that fatal fallacy. The German armies triumphed at Sadowa, but, instead of sweeping over Austria and ruining her, Germany made an inconclusive peace. Austria was left standing, and today she stands shoulder to shoulder with her conqueror of 1866 against a common foe.

The statesmanship of Bismarck discerned the fallacy of the conclusive peace on that occasion. He did not hope to destroy his adversaries. It is said he opposed the taking of Alsace and wished to make an inconclusive peace with France, but was overruled by military opinion, which hoped to end forever the threat of a resurgent France. As a result of a conclusive peace in 1870 France cherished revanche for a generation, and today Alsace is a rock in the path of a sorely needed peace.

The Crimean war closed with an inconclusive peace. France and England, who fought Russia then, are her allies today. Our war with England in 1812 ended with an inconclusive peace. It has been followed by a hundred years of peace. The war between Russia and Japan ended in an inconclusive peace. Russia and Japan are fighting side by side little over a decade later.

In history the "conclusive peace" has often been most inconclusive; the inconclusive peace the most enduring.

DANGEROUS AMERICA.

Bernard Shaw writes to the Drama league of New York that he is afraid to come to this country. He says he never met an American who knew anything about the institutions of the United States except that they were glorious. Shaw says he knows enough of them to know that they are dangerous.

He says that a person of his temperament and habits would be in luck to keep out of the penitentiary if he succeeded in getting by Ellis island. Very likely he would be detained there and shipped back. He would be held for moral turpitude. If he escaped the inspectors he would confront these dangers:

A penitentiary sentence of two or three years for saying what he thought of matrimony and of populating the earth.

A jail sentence for displaying a "smart tie or attractively colored handkerchief—my ties and handkerchiefs were the stupefaction of London"—if a policeman happened to see a lady admiring them.

A penitentiary sentence for taking a railroad journey. (I quite frequently take railway journeys with ladies to whom I am not married, an abandoned practice common in Europe.)

Mr. Shaw says there are other perils he does not care to face. He does not mention them, but we know what they are. If a woman he did not know asked him for an autograph she could have him arrested for flirting with her and her picture would be printed in the papers. If he went into a moving picture house he might be taken away in the patrol wagon. If he stopped to talk on a street corner he might be arrested for an anarchist.

Mr. Shaw is not afraid of our Indians. He is afraid of our civilization. But what he does not appreciate is the glorious liberty we should permit him in the way of getting robbed, shot, or beaten up. He might enjoy the sensation of that perfect freedom which is denied him in Great Britain.

BOXING.

We do not believe that the passage by the legislature of a bill legalizing and regulating boxing would be offensive to the sentiment of the state. If the legislature were convinced of this, or could be strengthened in this opinion, it would pass the bill. Timidity may operate in the assembly, and it would not be astonishing if hypocrisy entered as an influence.

The request for the legalizing of boxing comes from citizens interested in the amateur development of the sport. It may be impossible to get a promoter proof law, but the scandals of professional prize fighting can be moderated, if not controlled, by effective regulation.

The bill will be supported by citizens who are beginning to think that American life needs a tonic. There are people who cannot see any virtue in violence. It is probably impossible to reconcile the two ideas, but we insist that the qualities needed in boxing are in themselves desirable and that it is desirable that the young men of the nation have them.

Boxing does not promote brutality in the boxers. It can become a degenerate sport by being made merely a spectacle for the satisfaction of brutal impulses of spectators. Then it has ceased to serve any useful purpose. It is good when it encourages the development of hardihood, courage, skill, and muscularity. It insists upon clean living. It is formalized for fair play in fighting.

A boxer is a clean, decent fighter. The old time American village terror or backwoods fighter was a biter and gouger and relied on mayhem. Boxing teaches restraint. Every quality it requires is good.

THE LONGING FOR TARSHISH.

To persons of polemical profession, to editorial writers, scolds, makers of lamentations, and criers out against sin, the mood of Jonah, evidently an editorial writer, occasionally comes. It is likely to happen along after the holidays, after New Year's, when the present seems to get lost in the infinite number of eons gone and coming.

Tarshish must have smiled from afar off to Jonah's imagination as an undisputatious land where no one had any opinions or cared to express them. It may have been the land of the lotus eaters, where no one thought of lamenting, rending garments, or sitting in sack cloth and ashes because of wickedness in high places.

Probably he thought of it as a land which had no state's attorneys or Committees of Fifteen, no Mann acts or liquor question. Evidently it could not have had a congress or a war department. It could not have any such neighbor as Mexico.

The people of Tarshish would be quite reasonable on the subject of universal military training and there would be no pacifists. An editorial writer could find no calm where there was a Josephus Daniels. We must presume that such things do not exist in Tarshish, that it has no drama leagues or censorship of the movies.

Whatever lured Jonah to Joppa to take boat for Tarshish, whether it was an illusion or a reality, it is more interesting to consider his mood when he refused to cry out in Nineveh. We must imagine him as having been at work daily for a number of years solemnly proclaiming infallible opinions and final judgments, reasoning from few and obscured facts to uncompromising conclusions, crying out in the market place, and scolding from the door steps.

Each morning he arose and made a mighty noise, but people unheeding passed along one side of the street or the other, talking of spinning and weaving, delving and reaping, dancing and eating, of playing on the harp and running races.

He scolded and cried out upon error and sin, upon stupidity and thoughtlessness, but the futility of words remained permanent. If any one heard him it was only to call him pro-Assyrian, to denounce him as a solid bone, to ask him where he obtained that uproar.

The futility of words, the hopelessness of argument, the foolishness of contention, the failure of explanation, the waste of effort, remained the outstanding facts.

The important things in life were dates and corn, wine and women, dancing and harp playing. The short ballot was as nothing. The budget system was a bore and preparedness was vexatious nonsense.

When Nineveh was to be cried out against Jonah, longing for Tarshish, fled away to Joppa. He was done with crying out. Let Nineveh and the world go its way.

He would go to the happy land of Tarshish, where things might be either so bad that lamentation was useless or so good that it was not needed.

For a tired crier out either condition of affairs would do. Tarshish is somewhere, but Jonah did not find it.

CONSCRIPTION.

Men intimately acquainted with congressional habits, timidities, hypocrisies, evasions, and stupidities say that there is no possible chance of a conscription law being passed. Congress, no matter what the consequences of inaction, no matter whether the feeble existing military establishment goes to pot or not, will not require military service of the able bodied men of the country.

We are not so afraid of that outcome as we are that some puny, ineffective law will be passed which will seem to require service and will do no such thing.

It would not be astonishing if congress worked itself up to a state of daring and gave the country legislation which would satisfy careless opinion, scare no one, make no soldiers, and leave the nation the worse off again for thinking that something had been done.

What we are afraid of is that the government will adopt some correspondence school or home training method of universal military service, will require each able bodied citizen to read a bulletin from the chief of staff each Saturday night and report "present" once a year at the nearest schoolhouse.

It were much better that the issue be open and aching until the American people can be brought to think of barracks and conscription without having the shivers.

Editorial of the Day

WHAT IS WANTED IN ILLINOIS.

[From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

It is fortunate that in Illinois, now facing one of the most perplexing situations in its history, there is a sufficient party preponderance in both branches of the assembly to give promise of unity of action and coöperation in purpose. The new administration, Republican throughout, will come into power with a mandate from the people to enter at once upon the inauguration of those economies and reforms which made the keynote of Gov. Lowden's campaigns for nomination and election.

The situation, at the outset, will be a very difficult one to deal with, as the outgoing Democratic administration leaves an empty state treasury behind, and the cost of maintaining the state institutions in Illinois is such that, before new taxes are available in April, the new appropriations must necessarily include several millions of dollars for covering deficits made since the biennial appropriations of 1915.

This situation is so well understood in the state, however, that public opinion is not insisting upon any reduction in the first state tax rate to be levied under the Lowden administration. What it is insisting upon is a beginning in the necessary work of cutting out extravagance, sinecures, supernumerary bodies, and excrescences of all kinds, in order that retrenchment may be seen to be a certainty of the near future. Legislation will be expected along the lines of making changes needed to effect retrenchments.

This was the expectation before the depleted condition of the state treasury was as well known as now. Present depletion, following one of the largest general appropriation bills in the state's history, will have the effect of emphasizing demand for the institution of such reforms as will make impossible the creation of such an emergency in the future. What the state wants, coincident with appropriating all the money now needed to liquidate unnecessary indebtedness resulting from waste, is legislation directed against the continuance of waste, a long growing evil in Illinois state government. For performance of such work a united and harmonious majority party is the best assurance.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

ORD ROSEBERY'S second son, the Hon. Neil Primrose, who is only 34 years of age and a familiar figure in New York, has been appointed parliamentary secretary to the treasury and chief whip of the new Lloyd-George administration. The two offices, which are always held jointly—though, strictly speaking, only the secretaryship of the treasury can be described as one under the crown—require the possession of an exceptional amount of tact and discretion.

Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury Neil Primrose has become the principal adviser of the prime minister in the distribution of official patronage and rewards. As chief whip he is responsible for the presence in the house of commons of a sufficient number of adherents of the government to assure it of a majority whenever there is a division, no matter how unexpected the latter may be.

It is to him that the prime minister looks to keep all his followers steadfast in their loyalty to the administration. He must study the ambitions and the aspirations of all the government supporters, in and out of parliament, recommend them to the prime minister for knighthoods, baronetcies, peerages, privy councillorships, and even for administrative office.

He must see that their wives and daughters receive invitations to the political hospitalities of the wives of the cabinet ministers during the season in London. In some cases he must provide for the presentation of the womankind of the legislators at court—that is to say, in times of peace.

Indeed, there is no end to the things that he is required and expected to do in order to prevent the supporters of the government, both in and out of parliament, from becoming dissatisfied and disloyal to the administration.

Finally, he is required to see that the exchequer of his political party is kept properly supplied with campaign funds by means of contributions from rich men, in and out of parliament—men, however, who do not give large subscriptions without expecting a quid pro quo in the shape of honors of one kind and another. And in attending to these matters he must act with so much circumspection as to avoid the charge so often publicly made against every government that has held office in England that it conducts a traffic in honors for the sake of cash contributions to party funds.

Neil Primrose, who has found time, among all his parliamentary duties and political activities, to do good service at the front in France, as a lieutenant of cavalry and as a staff officer, and incidentally to win the military cross for a particular piece of pluck while engaged in carrying dispatches under heavy fire and through an enemy infested zone, is married to Lady Victoria Stanley, daughter of the present Lord Derby, the new secretary of state for war, and with his wife makes his home with his father, Lord Rosebery, in Berkeley square.

His wealth comes to him from a two-fold source. His mother, the late Hannah Rothschild, was the only child and sole heiress of old Baron Meyer Rothschild, reputed the richest member of his family. While Lord Rosebery has control of all his dead wife's colossal fortune for his life, on his demise it will be divided up between the two sons and the two daughters born to the union.

Neil Primrose's co-heirs are therefore his elder brother, Lord Dalmeny, married to the late Lord Henry Grosvenor's beautiful daughter, and his two sisters, Lady Sibyl Grant and the wife of the Marquis of Crewe. Besides the money coming to him from his parents, Neil Primrose inherited a big fortune indeed from his mother's aunt, Miss Cohen.

He is a clever debater, with a great gift of ready speech and of repartee, and so great a favorite with the royal family that Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria, and several other members of the reigning house paid one of their rare visits to the house of commons to hear him deliver his maiden speech.

He did well as parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs under the direction of Lord Grey of Falloden, and is universally popular, alike in parliament and in society, his resourcefulness, his keen sense of humor, and his superabundant energy suggesting the American rather than the Englishman.

When in New York he has usually made his headquarters at the Brook club, which never closes its doors either by day or by night, and where, with complete day and night shifts of servants, it is just as easy to have a dinner served at 5 o'clock in the morning as it is at 8 o'clock in the evening. At the Brook Neil Primrose is renowned as never being tired, never going to bed, and being always on deck at every hour of the twenty-four.

No better choice could have been made by France's new minister of war, Gen. Hubert Lyautey, for the office which he has just vacated, of governor general and commander in chief of Morocco, than Gen. Gouraud, for Gouraud was one of his principal lieutenants in the conquest of Morocco and was serving there with him until the outbreak of the present war. In fact, he was with Lyautey in most of the latter's colonial campaigns in northern and central Africa and in Cochin-China and Tongking.

In the early part of the present war Gouraud so distinguished himself in the terribly heavy fighting that took place in the densely wooded ridge of hills in western France, known as the Argonne, that he received the well deserved sobriquet of "the lion of the Argonne." He looks the part. Extremely tall and with such a magnificent carriage of the head that he would have to bend his back in order to look down at any object at his feet, his tanned face tells of many years spent in fighting under the hot sun of Africa.

He has a long beard and steady eyes, possessing the most wonderful magnetic influence over the men under his command.

Badly wounded in the Argonne, he, on his recovery, was sent to command the French forces in Gallipoli, where he lost an arm and several of his ribs. In fact, his recovery from his wounds is in the nature of a miracle. He is barely 50 years of age and quite recently has been holding a command in the vicinity of Verdun.

PNEUMONIA CONTAGIOUS.

IN midwinter of 1915-16 we went through an unusual seasonal prevalence of pneumonia. The history of this disease indicates that we may expect another period of prevalence during this winter. In fact, it may have already begun when this article appears. The 1915 report of the vital statistics division of the census bureau gave pneumonia as the third among the causes of death. The probability is that the 1916 report will show an increase in pneumonia deaths over that of 1915.

In certain cities, for examples, Chicago and Pittsburgh, pneumonia is the chief cause of death and has been for years. The death rate from pneumonia is rarely higher than 25 per cent and is usually less. This means that the number of cases of pneumonia is always four times as high as the number of deaths. For example, we figure that Chicago, having in round numbers 5,000 deaths a year from pneumonia, has 20,000 cases at least of the disease.

Pneumonia is the most prevalent of diseases. December, January, February, and March are the pneumonia months. Half the pneumonia of the year occurs in those four months. During midwinter pneumonia is much the most prevalent of diseases.

Out of the epidemic of 1915 there came one scientific discovery that may prove of the greatest benefit. Workers at the Rockefeller institute discovered that pneumonia was contagious. They found that there were several varieties of the pneumococcus, each capable of causing pneumonia. There is one variety which is to be found in the mouths of most people. This coccus can, and does, cause pneumonia. A man in good health can get drunk or can overeat and sit around a hot stove and catch pneumonia from the cocci in his own mouth.

But this is the less frequent and the less important kind of pneumonia. When a man has had pneumonia pneumococci are found in his sputum. For a certain length of time after he recovers the same cocci can be found in his saliva. Other persons can contract or catch pneumonia from persons who have the disease or who have recently had it.

The important discovery of last winter was that the way to prevent pneumonia from spreading is to quarantine persons having the disease while they are sick and for a few weeks after they get well. This new discovery, like many discoveries, is the refinding of an old fact.

I have before me "Hirsch's Handbook of Historical and Geographical Pathology," second edition, written over thirty years ago. The first edition was written more than fifty years ago. I learn from this treatise that pneumonia when first written about was known as an epidemic disease.

The first information on the epidemic prevalence of inflammation of the lungs is met with in the sixteenth century chronicles of pestilence in Italy, Germany, the Netherlands, Switzerland, and France. There was an epidemic in Venice in 1535. In Switzerland the disease in its epidemic form was known in the middle of the sixteenth century as "alpenstich." The sickness reappeared as an epidemic in Germany in the lower basin of the Rhine in 1576.

In the seventeenth century there were many epidemics, especially in Germany, Switzerland, and Italy. The epidemiology of the eighteenth century is unusually rich in accounts of epidemics of pneumonia, particularly in Italy, Switzerland, and France, and the earliest records of malignant epidemical inflammation of the lungs in Spain, England, Denmark, and the United States belong to the same period.

It seems that the earliest American epidemic was in Waterbury and Hartford, Conn., in 1712. The great American epidemic of the nineteenth century began in Canada in 1812. It was at its worst in New York state in 1813 to 1815. Pennsylvania seems to have escaped fairly well, though Dr. Benjamin Rush died with it in Philadelphia in 1813. The epidemic had pretty well died out in the northern states by 1815, though the southern states continued to suffer until 1826.

The best proof that pneumonia is contagious has come from garrisons, crews of ships-of-war, prisons, penitentiaries, and institutions. A well recognized epidemic was that in an asylum for deaf and dumb in Philadelphia in 1824-25.

Among the chapter headings in Hirsch are such suggestive titles as "Infective Type of Pneumonia," "Evidence of Contagious Transmission," "The Search for Microbes," "Negroes in a Colder Climate Peculiarly Subject," "Insanitary Surroundings Favorable to Epidemic Pneumonia," "Epidemics of Pneumonia."

Among the six conclusions arrived at by Hirsch are, first, "There can be no doubt of the occurrence of infective forms of pneumonia. We have the epidemics of pneumonia spoken of at length in the foregoing pages, in which the infective character of the process is obvious from every point of view."

Second, "The conjecture that the primary infective pneumonias owe their origin to a variety of infecting matters, or, in other words, that there are forms of infective pneumonia differing in their etiology, cannot be summarily dismissed."

It appears that pneumonia in the United States has evolved in somewhat the same way that scarlet fever evolves in a country place as it develops from a rural district through village, town, small city to large city. In the earlier stages of such a place scarlet fever is unknown through long stretches of years. At long intervals it is imported and burns like wildfire through the community, then dies down and shortly disappears.

As the place becomes a town the intervals of freedom from scarlet fever become shorter, the visitations of the disease more frequent. Last comes the large city stage, in which scarlet fever is always present—endemic—better in some years and worse in others, but always present.

Just about 100 years ago pneumonia in this country passed from a periodically epidemic disease to one that is constantly present—endemic. Health authorities have never done anything to control it. Just now they are beginning to do something about it. They plan to repress it until it ceases to be an endemic disease, coming only in periodic epidemics. In course of time, probably a long time, it can be entirely suppressed.

Many health departments now require that pneumonia be reported as are other forms of contagion. This is the first step in control. To the household from which pneumonia is reported there are sent instructions for burning the sputum and disinfection of all cups, dishes, spoons, towels, and cloths which have come in contact with the patient's mouth or his mouth secretions. These instructions inform the patient that his secretions are infectious for at least three weeks after the termination of the disease.

Health departments do something about spitting. In the light of the recent discoveries about the infectiousness of pneumonia there is liable to be an increase in the activity of spitting campaigns. Ordinary spit is liable to spread pneumonia as well as the purulent sputum which has come from the bronchial tubes.

When Surgeon General Gorgas took account of progress in Panama he found that the pneumonia rate, to lower which he had made no efforts, had improved almost as much as the malaria and typhoid rates, which had borne the brunt of his attacks. When he studied the situation he found that he had done great pneumonia prevention work without knowing it. He found the cheaper labor, and particularly the Barbados and Jamaica Negroes, living in crowded barracks. He scattered them in cabins. Crowding together in small beds and cramped living rooms was done away with. When he got rid of crowded barracks the pneumonia rate dropped.

A few years later Dr. Gorgas was asked to go to the Rand and advise with the authorities relative to improving conditions there. He found that conditions there were much as he found them in Panama. The laborers were African Negroes. They lived huddled together in compounds somewhat similar in arrangement to the Panama baracks. The pneumonia rate was extremely high.

His advice was to scatter the lodgings of the laborers, to give family men cottages, and to provide separate living quarters for single men. The European war started so soon after Dr. Gorgas' visit that no information is available as to whether the pneumonia rate has fallen, or, for that matter, whether the recommendations were carried out.

In the large cities of this country we have a condition similar to the barracks system of Panama and South Africa. I refer to the lodging houses. In the worst of these hundreds of men sleep in a single room in bunks built in tiers. In the better of them a large storeroom is divided into small cubicles a little larger than a bed. The cubicle has no windows. It is open at the top and in many there is an open space beneath the door. Sunlight cannot get into these cubicles and thorough airing is impossible. A large proportion of the pneumonia comes from the lodging houses. If any health department will go to its county or city hospital and ask for the house addresses of the patients with pneumonia it will be surprised at the number which trace back to its lodging houses. Possibly future campaigns against pneumonia will consider the lodging house situation.

DRINK MILK.

A mother writes: "1. Have Dr. Holt's book on care of infants, but noticed you gave some one an address in Washington, D. C., where they could write for booklet which would be of help in taking care of infant. Please publish the address again. Also my baby (a boy, 10 weeks old and breast fed) seems to be hungry most of the time. My milk does not seem to be scant, but it does appear watery—that is, sort of poor looking. Baby does not refuse it, but seems irritable at times. 2. Please advise how I can tell if my milk is good or not. What appearance must it have to be poor? It seems to have a lot of water and baby passes lots of urine."

REPLY.

1. Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., many state boards of health, and some city boards now give away baby books.

2. It appears that your milk is not nutritious enough. There is no way to be certain except to have it analyzed at some private laboratory. Drink less water; drink milk instead. This will better the quality of your milk.

NURSE LESS OFTEN.

Reader writes: "1. What causes mucus in the stools of a nursing infant? My baby girl is 5 weeks old and nearly every bowel movement contains considerable stringy mucus and curds. The color of the stools is normal.

"2. Sometimes after each nursing she vomits sour curds. Is this because the food is too rich and, if so, what change would you advise in my diet to make the milk less rich?

"3. Does a glass of milk taken with each meal make rich food for the baby?

"4. Each morning I eat three tablespoons of bran with my breakfast. Would this affect the baby in any way? I am in good health and do not understand why the milk should not be more easily digested."

REPLY.

1 and 2. Stringy mucus and curds in the stool and vomiting result from a mild degree of indigestion. Perhaps you are nursing her too frequently or too much or the milk is too rich. Do not nurse oftener than once every three hours.

3. Yes. Take less milk. Drink more water.

4. Not adversely.

WHAT IS AN EPIDEMIC?

G. C. writes: "I have heard a health office quoted as saying that health officers have determined upon nine cases to each thousand of population as the number which constitutes an epidemic. Is this a generally accepted figure or, if not, what is ordinarily accepted as constituting an epidemic?"

REPLY.

I have never heard any definition of epidemic based upon any number of cases per thousand population. In the nature of things there must be variation according to such factors as season, age of persons affected, tendency to obey the law, congestion of population, hospital facilities, and contagiousness of the disease in question. The figure 9 per 1,000 is, of course, out of the question. A health officer who would not consider smallpox epidemic in Chicago until there were 22,500 cases present should be hung. In New York City last summer the health authorities took notice of the epidemic when the cases were in the proportion of one case to about 500,000 population.

WEIGHT OF WOODEN CONTAINERS.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why are not retail dealers who use wooden dishes for the sale of butter made to deduct the weight of the receptacle from the commodity purchased? With butter at 42 cents a pound, and the wooden dish weighing perhaps an ounce, the consumer loses about 2⅝ cents' worth of butter. Is it proper, too, for manufacturers to inclose a loaf of bread weighing 1 pound, and so labeled, in a wrapper marked 1¼ pounds? R. A. D.

The weights and measures officials do not permit the retail dealers to charge for the weight of the wooden dishes by including them in the weight of the commodity sold, but insist upon net weight being given. These dishes are containers only, and are necessary in the handling of butter, lard, chopped meat, etc., which, when sold in bulk, cannot be very easily carried away in one's hands. The weights and measures department has been hammering away at the dealers for several years, insisting upon them selling by net weight, and at the present time there are very few cases where the weight of the container is not allowed for.

The bread ordinance of the city of Chicago reads that there shall be "affixed to each loaf a label showing the weight of the loaf and the name and address of the maker, baker, or manufacturer." Any loaf of bread weighing one pound or more and less than two pounds must, under the ordinance, be marked "one pound." As the majority of the loaves wrapped in wax paper weigh at least twenty ounces, the manufacturers ordered the weight to be printed on the wrapper as one and one-quarter pounds, for the reason that they could get no credit under the labeling provision of the city ordinance for the four ounces more than one pound that the loaves weigh. They have been notified that this is somewhat confusing to the public, and as soon as the wrappers on hand are used up this marking will be discontinued. If the complainant will send the addresses of any places where he has not been allowed for the weight of the dish in the sale of butter, lard, chopped meat, etc., we will investigate it and see that it is corrected. MORRIS ELLER,
Inspector of Weights and Measures.

CANNOT BREAK WILL.

Rutland, Ill., Jan. 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have just made a will leaving all my personal and real estate to my wife during her natural life; after her death to my four daughters, leaving nothing to my five sons or mentioning their names in the will. Could my sons or their heirs break the will? When one of my married sons dies and leaves no will, do his sisters or brothers come in for their share? Are they entitled to any? READER.

1. Neither your sons nor their heirs can break your will. The mere fact that you did not mention them does not make the will invalid as to them.

2. The sisters and brothers of your deceased married son are entitled to divide between them one-third of the real estate, the other two-thirds of the real estate and all the personalty going to the widow. This is assuming that there are no children of your married son.

INHERITANCE TAX.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What tax does the state charge on an inheritance over $20,000? X. Y.

If the legacy passes to a father, mother, husband, wife, child, brother, sister, and other very close relations, it is subject to a tax of 3 per cent if it is over $100,000, and to a tax of 1 per cent if over $20,000 and under $100,000. If the relationship is not so close, a higher tax is levied.

A G-R-R-RAND FEELIN'.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—"Ain't it a gr-a-nd and gl-o-ri-us feeling" to read in THE TRIBUNE the official returns of the popular vote for president at the November election and to see how Illinois kept the Republican battle line in the face of so many obstacles?

My father fought through the civil war and, always having been somewhat skeptical of southerners, I do like to see Illinois, my home state, hold her own with 1,152,316 voters.

Let us hope that some day TRIBUNE influence will stretch far beyond "TRIBUNE territory" and let in the light of day—a full franchise—to every black man, every white man, and to every woman in every state in the union, including the solid south. Wishing you a happy New Year, I am

THE PINK RACE AND OTHERS.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If you read the Wichita Eagle you'll have been interested in Victor Murdock's recent articles reporting his impressions of Japan and the Japanese.

Here is the concluding paragraph of one of these Murdock articles:

"From what I can pick up, the United States could build up a lasting alliance with this nation, but only by a whole hearted spirit of amity. It will have to be without guile. It cannot have reservations. And it will have to show stronger foundations than fair words."

In the same article Murdock says:

"I do not believe that Japan understands one thing—that the white man will either survive or perish—that is, he will either dominate or die."

I do not believe that the white race understands one other thing—that the yellow race will survive or perish—that is, it will either dominate Asia or die.

That, I have reason to believe, is Japan's fixed purpose—not merely to control Asia's commerce, but to extinguish the last inch of Caucasian sovereignty on Asian soil.

Our country has no such sovereignty to be extinguished—seeks none. We need only recognize the Asians as equal fellow men and women and to treat them accordingly, and to avoid joining other white peoples in their prospective efforts to retain sovereignty on Asian soil. So doing we can, as Murdock says, win and hold the firm friendship of our neighbors across the Pacific.

White? There's no such thing as a "white race." We so-called whites are pink or tan. We're all "colored races," for that matter. All one race, modified by environment, and like good Rubes priding ourselves, not upon our obvious major likenesses to all other breeds, but upon the minor unlikenesses traceable wholly and solely to geographical environment.

War with Japan? Not if we can employ elementary good manners in our neighborly dealings with them for a few years longer.

I not long ago studied and reported on the Japanese "problem" in California for a Japanese newspaper syndicate. Aside from certain unimportant facts, I reported this bit of counsel:

"Be patient—if you can—until the first generation of Asiatic-American boys become voters; thereafter you'll have the tin horn politicians of all parties making love to you, and among them the most ardent will be the politicians, or the kind of politicians, who now seek votes by insulting you."
FRANK PUTNAM.

MR. HERRICK'S MIND.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Herrick seems to be a very narrow minded man if he writes in such a way about Germany. He seems to throw off the poison of which the English forces inoculated him. I am an American and can frankly tell Mr. Herrick it will do him great good to inform himself better of the true German character before he writes. L. SMITH.

NO WONDER THEY DON'T ENLIST.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—To one who has observed the disinclination of congress to carry out the provisions of the laws for the benefit of the soldier the apathy now existing among the people toward taking service in the army is not surprising. The officers of the civil war have not yet received the pay and emoluments promised them under the act of May [illegible], 1861, which was a part of the contract under which they joined the army.

After the close of the civil war congress declined to make the necessary appropriation, excusing itself by the plea of the country's inability to stand an appropriation of such magnitude, and now when it would require but a little more than $2,000,000 they are inclined to repudiate this contract altogether.

When the representatives of the people repudiate a contract entered into under conditions such as existed in 1861 to 1865 and attempt to hold back on the men who freely and voluntarily offered their lives that the nation might live, then does it surprise you if their sons are slow to enter the service of the country now?
OTTO PUHLMANN,
Late Captain and A. A. G., Third Brigade, Third Division, Eighteenth Army Corps.

QUAKER-GUNS

By Edward Goldbeck

WHEN during the civil war McClellan did not dare to advance against Gen. Johnston, the rumor spread in the army that part of the artillery of the confederates which had impressed the mind of the northern cunctator as so terribly dangerous was nothing but painted wood, and the soldiers called these innocuous instruments Quaker guns. In their reply to the German suggestion of "talking things over" the allies have mounted a proud battery of guns which cannot do the slightest damage to the enemy. Some of the shells may act in the way of boomerangs, that is all.

To speak plainly, the document is pitiable. The Swedish Chancellor Oxenstjerna was right when he said that very few people knew with how little wisdom the world is governed. If this note is the result of the combined efforts of Asia's and Europe's highest political intelligence we need not be ashamed of our diplomacy. Of course, it is a plaidoyer, but no budding lawyer would get a second case on the merits of such a specimen. An "entente" seems to be the French word for an agglomeration of people who do not understand each other. Every one of those leaders would have been able to do better if left to himself, but as they had to work together they produced stuff of which a freshman would be ashamed. This note explains all the military disasters of the allies. They may beat Germany by a war of attrition, but will never beat her by means of strategy.

THE note begins with the words: "The allied governments of Belgium, etc., to show the world the amount of consideration which poor, down-trodden Belgium enjoys in this set of high and mighty nations. Really, Belgium is entitled to distinctions like that, were it only to hide the dismal fact that England never considered her anything but a British fort. There is evidence enough for such an assertion in the telegram which Sir Edward Grey, on Aug. 4, 1914, sent to the British minister at Brussels. "You should inform the Belgian government that if pressure is applied to them by Germany to induce them to depart from neutrality, his majesty's government expect that they will resist by any means in their power." As Sir Edward knew very well at that time no substantial military assistance could be rendered to save Belgian territory from devastation, this telegram simply meant: "Let the Belgians sacrifice themselves!" Alfred Lloyd Granger, in his book, "England's World Empire," is right in saying: "Had Belgium surrendered to force majeure, insisting on substantial compensation for the trespass committed by the German troops, no one could have doubted her wisdom nor suspected her honor." King Albert may be a hero, but I know that if I were a Belgian I would curse him.

"THE allied nations have sustained for thirty months a war they did everything to avoid. They have shown by their acts their attachment to peace." Have they indeed? On July 30, 1914, the czar himself stated: "The military measures now taking form were decided upon five days ago, and for the reason of defense against the preparations of Austria." So Russia had decided on mobilization on the 25th of July, three days before Austria had declared war on Serbia! It was not until Aug. 1, according to the British ambassador at Vienna, that Austria replied to the Russian move. Emperor William spoke the truth when he wired to the czar on July 31: "Nobody threatens the honor and power of Russia, which could well have waited for the result of my mediation." In fact, Russia is the only European country which could afford to wait, as her distances protected her. Germany could not: Eastern Prussia had to suffer because the emperor waited too long.

France followed in the wake of the Russian government. She was bound to Russia by an alliance, by the idea of revanche, and by her insane financial policy. She had lent so much money to Russia that she had become the obedient servant of the debtor. Her attitude was entirely passive and she made no special efforts to preserve peace.

And England? During the negotiations Germany pledged herself to the integrity of Belgium, the integrity of France, the integrity of the French colonies. Finally the German ambassador asked Sir Edward Grey to suggest his own conditions of neutrality, and Sir Edward Grey declined to discuss the matter. He feigned to consider the overtures of the German ambassador as personal, not official, and did not even mention them to parliament.

"THE war," the note says, "was desired, provoked, and declared by Germany and Austria-Hungary." Declared? Yes. Desired? Who knows? But provoked it was by the assassination of the Austrian heir and his wife, who, by the way, was an "innocent woman," too. In his address of condolence to the emperor of Austria, Mr. Asquith said: "We are once more confronted with one of those incredible crimes which almost make us despair of the progress of mankind." Six weeks after the utterance of these heartfelt sentiments Britain was waging war against Austria-Hungary. And why? Listen to the note again: "In July, 1914, it was Austria-Hungary who, after having addressed to Serbia an unprecedented ultimatum, declared war upon her in spite of the satisfaction which had at once been accorded." We would like to see the ultimatum which England would have sent if the Prince of Wales had been assassinated under similar circumstances.

But the authors of the note are mistaken when they claim that satisfaction had been granted "at once." The murder took place on June 28 and Austria sent her ultimatum to Serbia on July 23. Sir Edward Grey confesses: "Count Mensdorf (the Austrian ambassador in London) said that if Serbia, in the interval that had elapsed since the murder of the archduke, had voluntarily instituted an inquiry on her own territory, all this might have been avoided." As a matter of fact, Serbia had done nothing. And please do not forget that on March 31, 1909, Serbia had made the following declaration to the Austrian government: "Serbia declares that she is not affected in her rights by the situation established in Bosnia and that she will therefore adapt herself to the decision which the powers are going to arrive at . . . By following the counsels of the powers, Serbia binds herself to cease the attitude of protest and resistance which she has assumed since last October relative to the annexation, and she binds herself further to change the direction of her present policy towards Austria-Hungary and in the future to live with the latter in friendly and neighborly relations." These facts, I think, explain the Austrian ultimatum sufficiently.

In the next sentence the note calls the mentioned events a "purely local conflict." Emperor William will be glad to read this admission, for that is what he said all the time. It was a purely local conflict, a matter which should have been settled between the offender and the offended. Why should Russia intervene? Austria was willing to guarantee Serbia's integrity; no conquest was intended. If it was a purely local conflict, why bring it before an international areopagus?

"RUSSIA and Austria came to an understanding on the eve of the conflict. But to all these efforts Germany gave neither answer nor effect." The allied governments know very well that the understanding on the eve of the conflict was frustrated by the general Russian mobilization, and that as far as it went it was due to Germany, who used all her influence with Austria to mitigate her attitude. The efforts of the German emperor at all the European courts were continuous and sincere. "Only one thing is uncontradicted," the Belgian minister at St. Petersburg writes to the Belgian minister of foreign affairs on July 30, 1914, "which is that Germany has made earnest efforts here and in Vienna to find some way of avoiding a general conflict." And a little later in the same letter: "Today in St. Petersburg one is firmly persuaded that England will stand by the side of France, and even that the assurance of this has been given. The assistance is of quite extraordinary weight and has not a little contributed to give the war party the upper hand."

Of course, the note emphasizes the German chancellor's alleged utterance that "treaties were scraps of paper." The only trouble is that he has never said that. Mr. Goschen, the British ambassador at Berlin, reported to Sir Edward Grey in the following terms: "I found the chancellor very excited. His excellency began immediately a speech which lasted about twenty minutes. He said that the measure taken by his majesty's government was terrible to the highest degree (Mr. Goschen writes in French); for a mere word—'neutrality,' a word neglected so often in time of war—for a scrap of paper, Great Britain wanted to make war against a nation which is related to her and desires nothing so much but to be her friend. All his efforts in this direction, so the chancellor continued, had been frustrated by this last terrible measure; the policy to which, as I knew, he had devoted himself since his nomination had tumbled down like a house of cards. He cried out that what we had done was inconceivable; it was like stabbing a man in the back at the moment when he defends his life against two assailants."

This sounds a little different from the cool-blooded and dogmatic assertion that "treaties are scraps of paper." The man who speaks is not a wily diplomat; honestly and bluntly he pours out what is in his mind, without any fear that the adversary might use his words as a weapon against him. How Disraeli would have chuckled listening to the poor outspoken German fool! But in 1870 Mr. Gladstone made it clear that in a general conflict neutrality might be violated.

Now, what was Germany's position with regard to Belgium? The British Blue Book (Introductory Narrative of Events) characterizes it splendidly. It says: "Germany's position must be understood. She had fulfilled her treaty obligations in the past; her action now was not wanton. Belgium was of supreme military importance in a war with France; if such a war occurred, it would be one of life and death; Germany feared that if she did not occupy Belgium, France might do so. In face of this suspicion, there was only one thing to do." This is a very convincing explanation of Bethmann-Hollweg's "necessity makes law."

The aggressors, says the note, "after imagining that they would reach their goal in two months, discovered after two years that they could never attain it." What was the goal of the Germans? Was not it the establishment of a German world empire? And they thought they could attain that in two months? Silly asses, these Teutons!

THEN, of course, we hear that the allies are fighting for "human freedom" and the German atrocities in Belgium are mentioned with indignation. We have had a taste of this indignation during the last weeks. Novelists, professors, and massmeetings have outvied each other in utterances of righteous wrath. As to the atrocities committed by soldiers, I side with Gen. Sherman. The general said to Carl Schurz a few years after the civil war: "Before we left the state (South Carolina) my soldiers had become so accustomed to destroy everything on our route that often the house in which I had made my headquarters was burning before I was out of it. That is not beautiful, but it is human."

The "atrocities" ordered by the German government are necessitated by the situation and justified from the military, economical, and even moral viewpoint. It is impossible to have in the rear of a fighting army a hundred and fifty thousand men (or more) who refuse to work, but want to be fed and indulge in all the vices of idleness. A deportation to Germany, six hours in a decent train, is not a deportation to Siberia. That it is an unusual measure is undoubtedly true, but it is engendered by an unusual situation, which Germany insists is not of her making. But if Americans feel that it is their duty to be indignant, then let them be practical in their furor; let them do something, let them make propaganda for universal military service, let them agitate for an increasing of the army. Indignation with nothing behind it is stupid and contemptible.

Quaker guns! Their noise is harmless.

These few remarks will not convince pro-allies that the note is not a crushing indictment of the German attitude. When Charles E. Sumner was asked if he had ever looked at the other side of the slavery issue, he answered curtly: "There is no other side." This meant that he was unable to see it and did not want to see it; but there is always another side.

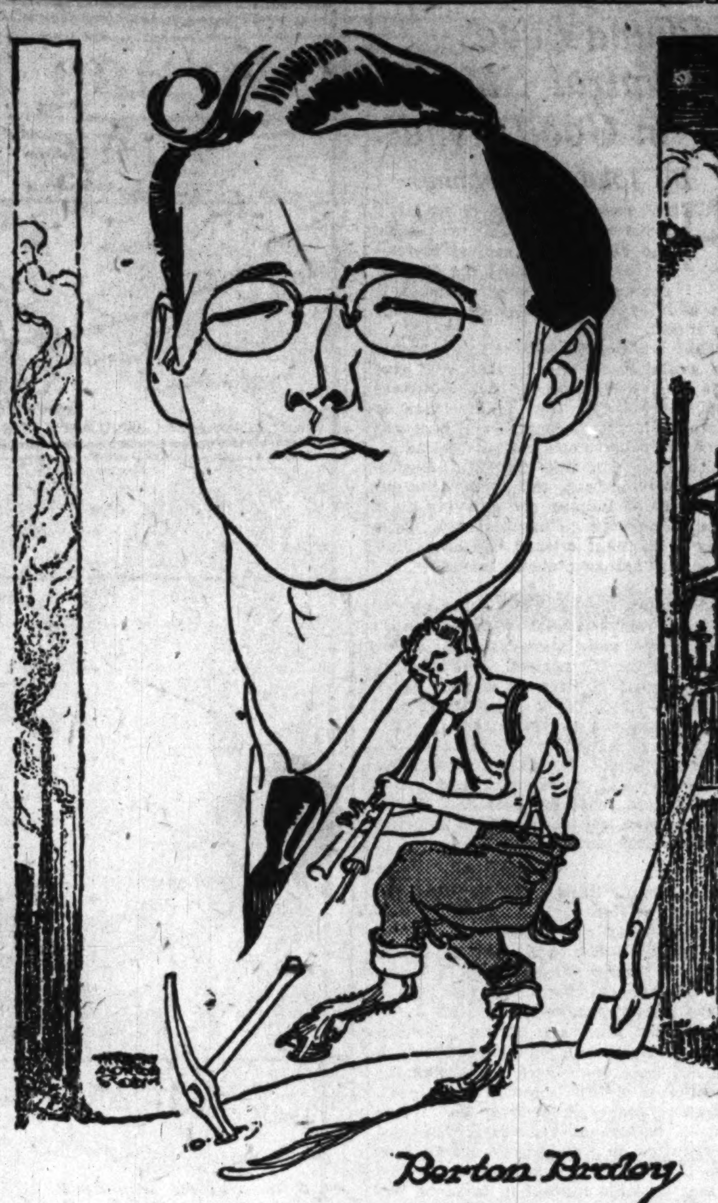
IN spite of the cannonade, the peace cause is advancing. The note demands reparation and a guarantee for the future, and the moment the little word "mutual" can be smuggled in the conference becomes possible. It is important to emphasize that the note stands up for the "principle of nationalities and of the free existence of small states." Ireland, Egypt, and India will be glad to hear it.

Our own situation is very serious. If the allies, stiffened by Mr. Lansing's unmistakable hints, should stubbornly refuse to enter negotiations, we may be put before an alternative which is fraught with danger. Miss Doty was right and many of us owe her an apology: conditions in Germany are bad. Germany is suffering terribly and the American public ought to know it, because, with full knowledge of the facts, the measures which Germany is compelled to take will be judged differently. The question may arise: Can we allow millions and millions of human beings—not Germans, but Belgians, Poles, and all the prisoners—to die with hunger because the allied leaders insist on "crushing German militarism"? Most people will cry out, "Certainly not!" But can we risk a war with the allies to enforce peace? Can we risk any war in the condition of unpreparedness in which Mr. Wilson has left the country? In my next article I will say something about the peculiar kind of patriotism which is incarnated in our president.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher



Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

WAR.

"Ambulance No. 10" (Houghton Mifflin), by Leslie Buswell.

FICTION.

"Mr. Britling Sees It Through" (Macmillan), by H. G. Wells.
"The Wonderful Year" (John Lane), by William J. Locke.
"Mary 'Gusta" (Appleton), by Joseph C. Lincoln.
"The Lion's Share" (Doran), by Arnold Bennett.
"The Heart of Rachael" (Doubleday Page), by Kathleen Norris.
"The World for Sale" (Harpers), by Sir Gilbert Parker.

NONFICTION.

"Further Foolishness" (John Lane), by Stephen Leacock. (There was some discussion about the nonfictionness of "Further Foolishness." It's satire, but obviously not a novel. Call it what you will, it's selling "best.")

"POEMS BY ALAN SEEGER" (Scribners) is on my desk beside me and in my heart there is a feeling almost of envy for the boy whose literary monument is this slender volume. Twenty-eight years he lived, seeking beauty and romance in life and then found it in death. They are so full of the zest of youth, so unspoiled by the brain cluttering pose of most youthful poets, so clean in their almost classic sharpness, so sincerely an expression of life in the living that one sheds no tears at the shaft so slight to mark the tomb of youth. Unlike any other poet whose days have been few, Alan Seeger died as the fulfillment of his dreams. Out of Harvard only two years, he was in Paris when the great war dragon first opened its red-blood eyes and winked ironically at God and man. He loved Paris as a clean hearted boy loves the first sapphire eyed enchantress that comes into his life, passionately blind to the coldness beneath the glitter and reverently joyful in her beauty.

"Paris has had many lovers, but few more devoted than Alan Seeger," says William Archer in his introduction to the Poems. It was as the protector of Paris, the knight errant of these modern dark ages, that he joined the American legion and fought for France. You have probably read his "I Have a Rendezvous With Death," which is one of the most significant poems of the war, a beautiful thing, which has been reprinted many times in the newspapers of the country.

There is nothing tragic about a death like Alan Seeger's, although his passing does leave vacant a place in the world which may not soon be filled. On the night of July 4 last year the American legion, that gallant band of American volunteers, was ordered to clear the enemy out of the village of Belloy-en-Santerre. "Alan Seeger advanced with the first rush," says William Archer, "and his squad was enfiladed by the fire of six German machine guns concealed in a hollow way. Most of them went down, and Alan among them—wounded in several places. But the following waves of attack were more fortunate. As his comrades came up to aid him Alan cheered them on; and as they left him behind they heard him singing a marching song in English. They took the village; they drove the invaders out; but for some reason unknown the battlefield was left unvisited that night. Next morning Alan Seeger lay dead."

Thus, with joy in the dying, Alan Seeger fulfilled the destiny which he had dreamed would be his.

"The Poems of Alan Seeger" was the most popular book of poetry on the shelves of the public library last week. If you would like to have a little booklet about him, including his portrait and a biographical sketch written by one of his friends and classmates at Harvard, his publishers, Charles Scribners' Sons, Fifth avenue and Fortieth street, New York, will send one to you.

"Official Diplomatic Documents Relating to the Outbreak of the European War" (Macmillan), by Prof. Edmund von Mach, is no longer on sale. The reason given by the publishers for its suppression is that it has inaccuracies in it. The reason given by its author—who, incidentally, didn't know that it was being suppressed—is that the allies have forced the publishers to suppress it because they don't want America to know the truth about the war. The author says the manuscript was read and approved by Prof. Beard of Columbia university, who was chosen by the Macmillan company as mentor, before the book was put to press and that the book contains only documents and no personal opinions of any one concerned. The Macmillan company says that the book is now in the hands of an expert, who will report upon its authenticity, and whether it will be withdrawn or reprinted depends upon his report.

From London comes this bit of news, which will surely interest you—Frederick William Wile was a correspondent for "ours," you know: "The renowned 'Quex' of the London Evening News (one of the best known 'columnists,' as I believe you call them in U. S. A., on this side of the water) has become an American, or rather an American has become 'Quex.' The original 'Quex,' a well known London newspaper man, donned khaki a while ago and has been succeeded by Frederick William Wile, who hails from Chicago and who, up to the declaration of war, was the Berlin correspondent of Lord Northcliffe's Daily Mail as well as of a couple of well known American newspapers."

Edith O'Shaughnessy, officially Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, author of "A Diplomat's Wife in Mexico" (Harpers) has gone abroad—to Switzerland, her publishers say—to work on her new book. She told me she was going to England to get her small son and to edit the letters which she had written to her mother, as she wrote the letters in "The Diplomat's Wife." The letters which will comprise the new volume were written years ago, when they first went to Mexico, she said, and she hadn't any idea what was actually in them, but she hoped to be able to find enough material in them for this new book. Perhaps she and small son and packets of letters will all take themselves to Switzerland for meditation.

You may have wished that the dramas of Jacinto Benavente, the great modern Spanish dramatist, were available in English, and just so kind is fate that your wish has come true. Translated by John Garrett Underhill, representative of the United States and Canada of the Sociedad de Autores Espanoles, four of his seventy-five dramas will be published by Scribners.

Berton Braley, whose latest volume of poems is "Things as They Are" (Doran), declares that you can't get anywhere with editors unless you don't get discouraged when your knuckles begin to ache from knocking on sanctum doors. He displays, as proof, a poem which has been quoted all over our fair land which was turned down sixty-four (count 'em) times before it was accepted by an editor who had himself refused the poem several times. He keeps a card index of his poems' travels.

For the statistical minded: Last year Mark Twain's publishers used in binding sets of the Authors' National edition forty-five thousand yards of cloth, enough to make a carpet twenty-five miles long. Myself I don't care about 'em, but there be those as live neither by bread nor catchwords but my statistics, and the Tabloid aims to please every one. Speaking of Mark Twain makes me think of the latest news from him. He is writing a posthumous novel, "Jap Herron." Yes, sir! Yes, m'm! A young woman, discreetly left unnamed, is his amanuensis, and he's dictating to her through the ouija board, like "Patience Worth." Please don't ask me who the girl is. It isn't secrecy that keeps me mum; it's ignorance. I was told very mysteriously about the ouija board, though, and the name of the novel. Perhaps that immortal remark about the premature report of his death should apply to his not writing any more.

A letter from Oswald Kendall, author of "The Romance of the Martin Connor" (Houghton-Mifflin), written from the French front some weeks ago, says: "I am still in hospital, but hope to leave shortly. I was wounded on July 1 and have had nearly fifteen weeks of hospital and shall be glad to be discharged. During nine months spent in France, mostly in the trenches, I have had no time for writing, and I have seen enough of the real war as to leave me little inclination to write about it—as yet, anyway. I expect to be back in France shortly and to spend another Christmas in the trenches."

The latest addition to "at court" literature is Nellie Ryan's "My Years at the Austrian Court" (John Lane). Nellie Ryan (whether Miss or Mrs. I dinna ken) was for many years a companion in the household of Archduke Karl Stefan, a cousin of the late Franz Josef, and she spends most of her pages declaring that madness does not dog the footsteps of the Austrian royal family.

The pages of James Stephens' "The Insurrection in Ireland" (Macmillan) were written, he says, "day by day during the insurrection that followed Holy week. They are not a history of the uprising but rather a statement of what passed in one quarter of Dublin and the gathering together of the rumor and tension which had to serve the people of that city in lieu of news."

From Albert Bigelow Paine's "The Boys' Life of Mark Twain" (Harper's) I recount this tragedy of the realization of a literary dream. Mark Twain had written an article on the Hornet disaster, a vessel burned in the Pacific, and to his great joy it had been accepted by Harper's Magazine. In imagination he saw his name in every style and size of type and he could scarcely wait until the promised number appeared. When he looked for his story he found it, but it was written by Mark Swain.

Herbert Bayard Swope, author of "Inside the German Empire" (Century), met during his material collecting trip to Germany Capt. von Papen, Capt. Boy-Ed, and Dr. Dernburg, all of whom were sent home by this country for their unbecoming actions. Capt. von Papen, Mr. Swope says, is now chief of staff to Gen. Schweinitz, and is very friendly toward the United States, but Dr. Dernburg, who is chief intelligence officer at the admiralty in Berlin, hates us eternally and vociferously.

FRIENDS OF FRANCE

By Robert Herrick

PARIS, France.—I like to go out to 21 Rue Reynouard in Passy, where in an old mansion the field service of the American ambulance has its Paris headquarters. It was once the home of the Bartholdi whose name is familiar to most Americans as the author of that imposing dame whose upraised arm greets the incoming traveler at New York. Now the narrow passages and rambling rooms of the old house are full of young men, and in the long dining room that opens on a terrace and a lovely old garden—one of the few large gardens still left in modern Paris—any day a considerable group of young Americans in the khaki uniform of the field service may be found at luncheon, much as one might find them in a good American college club.

Indeed, although not all college men, these American ambulance drivers have the look of cheerful, good natured, comradely youth that reminds me of college days. They have not come hither, one feels, for sport or excitement—for the thrill of the front—that can be left to the war correspondent, safely coddled through the trenches by an immaculate staff officer! These ambulance young men are of a graver sort: they have been touched by the desire to serve France, roused by the splendid spectacle of her heroism. The fruit of her bloody sacrifice is that she has quickened chivalry in the hearts of all the world. They are here in Paris, of course, only in passing or on leave for a few days' rest. But there are so many of them now in active service, nearly two hundred, that the old mansion is never empty, the dining table never wholly deserted.

Outside in the stone paved courtyard there are always some gray ambulance cars with the squat rear pitched canvas body that gives the little Fords the look of fat butterflies spreading their wings. Absurd as it may look, the Ford ambulance has made tremendously good in this war: it is about the best recognized American product on the roads of eastern France, in the hills of the Vosges, and latterly at Saloniki. For the field service has had the honor of sending to the orient the only foreign ambulance section. It left last September and now the French government has asked them to send another, which is about to depart. Although it can carry but three wounded lying down or four seated cases, the Ford is so light, so easy on its suffering burden, so gently handled by the American drivers, that the wounded ask to be transported in the American car and the Fords are used for urgent cases. They go far up into the lines to the more advanced dressing stations, and when they drop into some pitfall of a shell hole they can easily be lifted out.

In that endless procession which during the height of the great battle revolved between Verdun and the rear, the American ambulances were given the right of way because the Fords could dart in and out among the heavier cars, making use of the sixty yards space kept between each moving cog of that endless chain. The Ford ambulance car handled by the young men who have volunteered for the service symbolizes many good American qualities.

BELOW the house, under the old ivy covered trees of the stately garden, are parked twenty of these cars, which compose the new section recently given to the field service with funds for its maintenance by the New York stock exchange. It is the seventh section to be equipped and manned by the field service, which means that this American organization is maintaining at present about one hundred and fifty cars at the front, at different points. Each section has its own American director, a French lieutenant, two mechanics, and is supplied with a mechanics' tool car with spare parts, a kitchen car, supply car with tents, etc.: in a word, is fitted out for complete self-maintenance except for the rations provided by the army. When it leaves Paris it goes first to Versailles, then is sent forward to join the army division to which it is assigned. It follows thereafter the fate of this division, going forward to the front with it and being sent back to rest when the division goes en repos.

As I have said, these sections have seen service all along the western front, from Dunkirk to the Vosges, and in the orient. Two have been stationed near Verdun for months. Four out of the six sections have been "mentioned" in army orders—one of the Verdun sections having received this honor twice. These "citations" give in their brief, colorless phrases a vivid idea of the services performed: the imagination easily fills out the formal language. For instance, Gen. Serret, commanding in the Vosges, mentions section 3 in these terms: "Has demonstrated anew its unswerving devotion by safeguarding with cool audacity and in perfect order, during the days and nights of Oct. 15, 16, and 17, 1915, in a district in which such movements were very dangerous and which was partly within reach of the enemy's guns, the removal of numerous wounded."

At Verdun in August and September of this year the first section "has assured the removal of the wounded of three divisions in a sector especially dangerous; has asked as a favor to retain their position where officers and drivers have given proof of the most brilliant courage and the most complete devotion." Again the same section, in another order of the day, also at Verdun, "has remarkably cared for the daily removal of the wounded, searching for them the farthest possible, in spite of a bombardment at times violent; has specially distinguished itself the 11th of July, 1916, in crossing several times a cloud of asphyxiating gas under an intense fire without respite for thirty-two hours in order to remove to the hospitals the asphyxiated."

And the whole story is well summed in the brief words of the commander of the Seventy-third division: "American ambulance section 2, composed of volunteers, friends of France, has never ceased to be noted for the spirit, courage, and zeal of its members, who, unmindful of danger, have worked unceasingly to help our wounded, whose gratitude and friendship they have acquired.

ON a wall of the salon in that old Passy house is a simple wooden plaque with the honor roll of the field section—the names of those who have died, been wounded, and of those who have been cited for distinguished bravery and devotion to duty and have received either the medaille militaire or the croix de guerre, or both. To read them gives me something of that thrill I had when as a boy I first saw the long list of names on the marble tablets in Memorial hall at Cambridge of those who had served their country in our great war. Fifty-seven members of the American ambulance have received "citations" in some order of the day for one reason or another—an extraordinary number! Two drivers have been killed, Richard Hall in the Vosges last Christmas and Edward Kelly at Marre, near Verdun, this autumn. Three men have been seriously wounded in the performance of their duties.

These beautiful words were said of Hall in the divisional order of the day: "The good Samaritan, Richard Hall, had determined to travel often with us on our regular road in order to extend an untiringly helping hand to those of our military compatriots upon whom the present hostilities had brought misfortune. He did this for many long months with the tenacious persistence that you know of. On that road a German shell killed him. Reverently I salute his mortal remains, expressing to him and to his rivals in devotion to the cause my sentiment of profound and unstinted admiration."

FROM this sheaf of citations I take here and there a few words that seem to me characteristic of the spirit of the whole. Victor White of New York, who has been cited twice, "has shown coolness, courage, and the finest devotion" in clearing the wounded from a village violently bombarded, and again "distinguished himself particularly at the time of a German gas attack," and "has displayed on all occasions much energy, courage, and self-possession." Lovering Hill of Michigan has also been cited twice, "showing the finest qualities of leadership—forgetfulness of self and absolute devotion to his duties and to his volunteers." Edward Salisbury of Chicago was the first member of the field service to get the croix de guerre—"indefatigable, with a firm and determined will, he has set a fine example of devotion, kindliness, and courage." Young Dudley Hale of New York (a grandson of the great American preacher, Edward Everett Hale) was mentioned in an order of the Sixty-sixth division for "going out of his own initiative under shell fire to pick up the wounded of a force near his station and ensuring their immediate removal." William Barbour, who was "grievously wounded in the performance of his duties," was cited in an order signed by Gen. Joffre, "has distinguished himself by his courage and his coolness in transporting his wounded every night over a road continually bombarded by the enemy artillery," and with the citation was given the croix de guerre "with palm."

Stephen Galatti, now the assistant inspector of the field service, has been cited because "during a fortnight he safeguarded, night and day on a bad mountain road constantly swept by the enemy's fire, the removal of many wounded with a zeal and devotion deserving of the highest praise."

I could add to these typical "mentions" many others. The same theme of praise runs through them all. These American volunteers have shown coolness, bravery, and devotion to their duty, not sparing themselves, exposing themselves when necessary to shell fire, driving their cars over bombarded roads, carefully, skillfully, always volunteering for dangerous work. It is a proud record of pluck and steady nerves and unselfish doing of duty. In all the poison of hates and grimy horrors engendered by this war it is refreshing to linger on this fair page of simple generosity, mercy, and devotion.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Traffic Problem Within the Loop Still Unsolved.

WHAT'S to be done about Chicago's loop traffic?

The sweeping anti-parking ordinance which motorists expected as a sort of white elephant New Year's gift sleeps in the archives of a council committee, drugged into a coma, if not done to death by Chief Healey's declaration that it was entirely too drastic.

Blithely—as blithely as may be, anyway—the man who drives still hitches his way through the downtown streets like Mark Twain's frog, placing his faith largely in a beneficent providence and the traffic policeman's good nature.

Without any particular compunction he violates the thirty minute parking rule by leaving his machine at the curb for hours at a time, knowing that this particular ordinance can't be enforced and that the head of our constabulary admits it.

And there we are, about where we were a decade ago, by all odds the slowest of the great American and European municipalities to work out any feasible plan for easy movement of congested traffic.

As a matter of afct, the Chicago automobilist never has had any particular worries in the matter of being regulated. But such of his kind as have had occasion in the last few months to drive through the heart of some of our sister cities have had their eyes opened to what a council can do when it goes on the warpath.

Detroit has abolished parking in the heart of the city. "If you leave your car at the curb you lose it," reports a comedian of one of the current shows who has just come from there. "So a couple of men in the same neighborhood just get together, buy a —— every morning, drive downtown, and leave it."

New York, Philadelphia, and half a dozen other cities have installed more or less drastic régimes for downtown traffic. In Philadelphia they tackled the problem only a few months ago, devising a system which appears complicated, but which, they say, has proved highly satisfactory. This being the case, the Quaker city's rules would seem to be worth considering hereabouts, for the situation there is in many ways like that in Chicago.

One way traffic, a scheme widely used elsewhere, but never seriously considered in Chicago, is an important item in the Philadelphia plan. In the heaviest traffic center a zone slightly more than half a mile square immediately around the city hall, certain streets are set aside, as indicated in the accompanying diagram, for the use of street cars and vehicles of all kinds moving only in a single direction.

For Broad street, the principal north and south thoroughfare, there are special lanes of traffic—particularly where the flow of vehicles divides around the city hall—which are not to be violated under any circumstances. Thus, if you're driving north in Broad street, approaching the city hall, and have some vague idea of edging to the left toward the Pennsylvania station, your dream is quickly shattered. A stately minion of the law swings you far to the right, around the city hall, and on into some far territory from which it seems as if you'd never get back.

"And it isn't half as bad as it sounds," a recently returned Chicagoan told the writer. "I wanted to get around that way, and a chauffeur told me what to do. I just slipped into a special parking space, stopped a moment and then slipped out into the traffic moving in the opposite direction. That landed me where I wanted to go, and I didn't break any rules."

Not much parking of automobiles is permitted, however, in the city hall zone. Between 9 a. m. and 6 p. m. machines may stop only long enough to discharge passengers in sections of no less than seven streets in this area. The extent of this no parking space is indicated in detail in the diagram and the text accompanying it.

On central thoroughfares outside the city hall zone an elaborately varying system of parking rules prevails, permitting stops of fifteen minutes, thirty minutes, or one hour at different points. To an outsider this sounds confusing. For example, in Chesnut street you may park for fifteen minutes between Seventh and Eleventh and between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets; thirty minutes between the Delaware river and Seventh street and between Seventeenth and Nineteenth streets, and an hour between Nineteenth and Twenty-third streets.

Somehow, with the help of occasional signs along the roadway, they keep track of the puzzle and make it work.

The proposed Chicago ordinance, which was to have gone into effect on Jan. 1, abolishes parking on downtown car line streets during rush hours for the first six months and during the entire day after that. This would wipe out cab stands, and largely for this reason Ald. A. J. Fisher and his associates on the transportation committee found themselves facing a lot of opposition when the measure came up for a second committee hearing.

Chief Healey agreed that the suggested rules were too sweeping and urged that they be modified. Whether this will be done or whether the whole thing will be dropped for the time being is doubtful.

"One thing is certain," says the chief, who knows a thing or two about traffic, "the present thirty minute parking ordinance cannot be enforced. We might as well not have any. Something must be done, for loop conditions are getting worse every day. And the man who makes the trouble is the man who drives to business, leaves his car at the curb till noon, goes to lunch, and then leaves his machine all the afternoon."

Are you one of 'em?

The arrows indicate one way traffic. Between 9 a. m. and 6 p. m. no parking of automobiles is permitted in Broad street from Race to Spruce; Walnut from Twelfth to Sixteenth; Chestnut from Eleventh to Sixteenth; Market from Juniper to Sixteenth; Juniper from Filbert to Walnut; Filbert from Juniper to Fifteenth; and South Penn square (half a block south of Market), from Juniper to Fifteenth.

Questions and Answers

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

The writer has been troubled recently with more or less ice forming in the cooling apparatus of his car, and I have heard that kerosene, instead of the usual solution of alcohol and water, has been successfully used in radiators. After investigating I am unable to locate any one who has actually tried this, and I would be deeply obliged if you could furnish me with any information regarding the merits of the scheme. Would there be any likelihood of the kerosene catching fire if it became overheated? Also, would any damage result to the water pump, hose connections or radiator? I find alcohol and water unsatisfactory on account of the rapid evaporation.

L. G. H., Chicago.

I would advise you to stick to the alcohol solution and leave the kerosene alone. Kerosene has been tried as a cooling agent, but I have yet to hear of anybody who found it satisfactory. As it cannot be mixed with water it is necessary to fill the radiator with it. On cold days it might work all right, but if the weather moderated your car would resemble a steamer. The specific heat of kerosene is much higher than alcohol and water, and as a consequence it would quickly boil. Another great disadvantage is the disagreeable odor, for when the motor once gets heated up the stench from the kerosene is enough to drive one out of his car. There is little danger from fire, however. A majority of motorists who drive their machines in the winter use alcohol, and find it satisfactory. Possibly you have not been using it correctly. For the ordinary radiator one gallon of alcohol to four gallons of water is about right. Glycerin is rather expensive, but the addition of about one quart to the solution tends to keep the alcohol from evaporating so quickly. Personally I find plain alcohol and water all right. Care should be used to see that it does not become too weak. More alcohol should be added from time to time. A table of proportions and temperatures was printed in the issue of Nov. 12.

I have heard conflicting reports regarding the condition of the Dixie highway between Chicago and Miami, Fla., and would like to know the truth about the matter. Am planning to drive down there soon, but would not think of making the trip if it would be likely to prove too strenuous for my wife, who is not well. Are there many stretches of roads that would be hard to travel over in comfort?

I would strongly advise you to abandon all idea of making the trip at this time. Such a trip would be bad for anybody, and positively dangerous for one in ill health to attempt. Contrary to general belief, the Dixie highway is not in good condition now, nor will it be until next fall, when contemplated improvements probably will have been made. The Dixie is the only logical motor road to the far south, and eventually will be a fine highway throughout. Officials of the Dixie Highway association, the headquarters of which are located in Chattanooga, Tenn., are advising tourists against traveling over their route this winter. Of course the trip may be made, providing those who undertake it are prepared to undergo considerable hardship in getting over scores of bad detours where sections of the highway are closed for construction work. At one point, that between Nashville and Chattanooga, it is impossible to drive over the Cumberland mountains and the tourist is obliged to go 100 miles out of his way and over wretched roads.

What are the regulations regarding Illinois automobile licenses and how should one proceed to take one out? What is the fee for a second hand car (1912 model) of thirty-five horse power? Does the owner of the car have to take out a license to drive it?

TOM MCA., Chicago.

Write to Lewis Stevenson, secretary of state, Springfield, for a registration blank which you will fill out and return, together with the fee of $6. Motor vehicles driven in the state must be registered within ten days after purchase and all certificates of registration expire on Dec. 31 of the year in which they are issued. It is not necessary for the owner of the car to take out a license to operate it.

I would like information in regard to the Dixie highway to Florida. What are the conditions at this time?

H. W. B., Springfield, Ill.

The conditions are rather bad. If you are game enough to attempt the trip, drive through Decatur, Tuscoda, Chrisman, Rockville, and Danville, Ind., to Indianapolis, and pick up the Dixie highway for the balance of the distance. The roads consist of sand-clay and dirt, with a few short stretches of stone and macadam. Better play safe and ship your car to Florida.

Regarding your reply to L. T. A. in the issue of Sunday, Dec. 31, would say that Mr. Eberhart and I have just finished the trip from Chicago to Louisville, Ky. We left Chicago on Dec. 28 and arrived in Louisville on Jan. 1. We found a little snow and ice between Chicago and Rensselaer, Ind. [85.5 miles], but the balance of the way through Indianapolis to Louisville was nearly as good as Garfield boulevard. Three miles of the route near Bedford, Ind., was rough, but passable. We took the Jackson highway from Chicago to Indianapolis, then picked up the Dixie highway, and will follow it through to our destination, Miami, Fla. All in all, we found fine roads and we hope the balance will prove as good.

[MRS.] NETTIE P. EBERHART.

At the time L. T. A.'s letter was answered the rains had made conditions bad between Chicago and Lafayette, Ind., one man having reported that twenty hours had been consumed for the trip to Indianapolis. I am glad to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Eberhart found conditions improved and that their trip to Louisville was a pleasant one. However, I fear they will not find such smooth sailing after leaving Nashville, Tenn. I have just received a report from the Dixie highway officials which indicates that the section of their route between Nashville and Chattanooga is impassable and that it is necessary to either ship a car between those points or make a detour of 100 miles via Huntsville, Ala., over bad roads. The Dixie highway people are advising tourists to postpone their trips to Florida until fall, when several sections now being built will have been completed. Those using the Dixie highway, or any other southern automobile route this winter, must be prepared to undergo considerable hardship.

I find it next to impossible to get my car started during cold weather. I keep the machine in a cold garage, and somebody told me to put hot water in the radiator, and also to pour it on the manifold and carburetor, to make the motor start more easily. I have tried this, but it seems to do no good. You have helped me out with good advice regarding automobile routes. What can you do for me in this case?

JAKE, Escanaba, Mich.

Whoever told you to put hot water in the radiator and on the manifold and carburetor gave you some poor advice. It is a wonder such a procedure has not cracked your water jacket. Some ill advised people recommend the use of cloths saturated with boiling water, while others recommend the use of a blow torch in heating the manifold. The necessity of keeping a naked flame away from the motor is apparent. It also is apparent that water dripping from a saturated cloth through an auxiliary air valve so it would get into the carburetor mixing chamber would cause considerable trouble. A good way of heating the carburetor or manifold without danger is to make a long tube or bag of cloth, fill it with sand and heat it in an oven. Then wrap the tube around the manifold or carburetor and leave it as long as possible. In all cases the motor should be primed in cold weather. Do this by opening the pet cocks or removing the spark plugs and squirting in a little gasoline or petroleum ether. As soon as the motor starts place a good sized piece of paper over the front of the radiator. The air suction will keep it on and help to get the motor warmed up.

Scenery Ready for Auto Show.

ONLY one week will elapse between the close of the Allied bazaar on Jan. 20 and the opening of the National Automobile show on Jan. 27 at the Coliseum, and a crew of decorators has begun laying the groundwork for the scenic effects for the big motor exposition.

Work has been completed on the decorations at the Tietzel studio at Evergreen Park and the pieces to be used in the scheme will be transported in motor trucks to Chicago. Pending installation the scenery will be stored near the Coliseum.

The problem of clearing the Coliseum of bazaar exhibits and filling it with a wealth of automobiles within the space of a few days will be one of the most difficult feats ever undertaken by Manager Miles' staff of workers.

Indiana Leads Central States in Good Roads.

By John G. DeLong.

HOW many motorists, when they drive over Indiana's fine roads—the best in the central states—try to imagine what the Hoosier thoroughfares would be like if an additional $2,100,000 were expended on them?

That amount of federal funds would be available for use during the next five years were it not for the dishearteningly simple fact that Indiana has no state highway department. There are only two other states similarly situated.

But something may be done. Realizing their handicap, the good roads enthusiasts of Indiana are carrying on a lively campaign to have a state highway department created and have high hopes of bringing about favorable action.

The campaign has been going on for over a year, with the Hoosier State Automobile association as the prime mover in the big project. The association consists of fifty-six county motor clubs, of which the Hoosier Motor club of Indianapolis is the largest. Hundreds of good roads meetings have been held throughout the state. Government engineers and prominent good roads spellbinders from all over the United States have unlimbered their batteries of oratorical pursuasion.

Dr. Ben L. Bruner, former secretary of state of Kentucky; S. E. Bradt, Illinois highway commissioner; Luke W Duffey of Indianapolis, Judge J. M. Lowe of Kansas City, William G. Edens of Chicago, president of the Illinois State Highway association, and A. C. Batchelder, chairman of the American Automobile association's executive committee, have made speeches urging the creation of a state highway department. On the occasion of Highway day, which was a feature of Indiana's centennial celebration in October, President Wilson, in speaking on the subject of good roads, declared himself in favor of legislation that would give the Hoosiers what they are working so hard for.

Why Indiana has to take a back seat with South Carolina and Texas is a mystery. Until these three states create state highway departments they cannot participate in the division of the $85,000,000 appropriated by congress for the purpose of constructing good roads.

Recently representatives of about thirty state organizations attended a meeting called by the Hoosier State Automobile association and a set of resolutions was drawn to guide the committee in preparing a bill to be presented to the general assembly when it convenes in Indianapolis this month. At the meeting arrangements were made for organizing the Indiana state organizations committee, which body will pass upon the proposed bill. Needless to say, the committee will receive the hearty support of all good roads organizations in the state.

The committee selecting this larger committee includes former Mayor Bookwalter of Indianapolis, William M. Jones, president of the Indiana federated bodies of agriculture, and A. G. Lupton of Hartford City, former president of the Indiana Bankers' association and now president of the Hoosier State Automobile association.

The success of the good roads movement thus far is largley due to the untiring efforts of M. E. Noblet, secretary of the Hoosier State Automobile association and of the Hoosier Motor club.

Indiana's campaign for better roads is of particular interest to Chicago motorists, who turn toward the smooth highways of the Hoosier state when the abominable roads of Illinois make touring anything but a pleasure. "Let's go down into Indiana, where they have good roads," is a common expression. In fact, many of Indiana's roads are worn out more by Chicago cars than they are by those carrying number plates of that state. As many as 1,500 Illinois machines have been counted in a single day as they passed over some of the roads in Lake county.

Indiana has had a progressive road building policy for many years, and its best roads have been built under what is known as the three mile gravel road law. This law has been the means of developing a splendid system of side roads throughout practically the entire state. There is hardly a county but what has gravel or other road building material on hand.

Roads have been improved to such an extent that often a motorist gets into some farmer's lane before he realizes he is off one of the regular roads.

Indiana's plan, however, has been considerably abused. When a road is built under the three mile gravel law, the township is bonded for the payment. The construction work is primarily under the direction of the three county highway commissioners elected by popular vote. Indiana has been spending about $18,000,000 a year for roads and has piled up a road indebtedness of about $40,000,000.

Another fault has been that, with the township as the only unit, there has been no plan for evening up the cost of construction and maintenance in townships through which a main artery road passes. The roads may be worn out 90 per cent by interstate and intercounty traffic and still the township must pay all the cost. A state highway department would mean that on such roads there would be county, state, and federal aid, a trinity that would make greatly improved highways. Again, with the township as the only unit for bonding and the county the largest unit for supervision and construction, Indiana has, as Illinois previously had, from 4,500 to 5,000 road officials without a head authority to establish standards of construction, to bring about uniformly efficient road engineering, or to provide means for timely and adequate maintenance.

There are many instances where main traveled roads have been built of material that would not stand up under excessive traffic, and consequently had to be rebuilt a second or third time before the bonds issued to build the original road were anywhere near paid out.

It is well known by motorists that tires are designed to sustain certain loads, and that these loads cannot ordinarily be exceeded without injury to the tires. However, the factor of safety which is built into Goodyear cord tires was emphasized last week when a Locomobile car, carrying fourteen men, was driven over the brick road between Buffalo and Lancaster, N. Y., at a rate of speed exceeding sixty-three miles per hour. The Goodyear tires used had already covered a distance of 10,000 miles.

THE SUN'S YEARLY PATH

DRAWINGS by S F MAXWELL

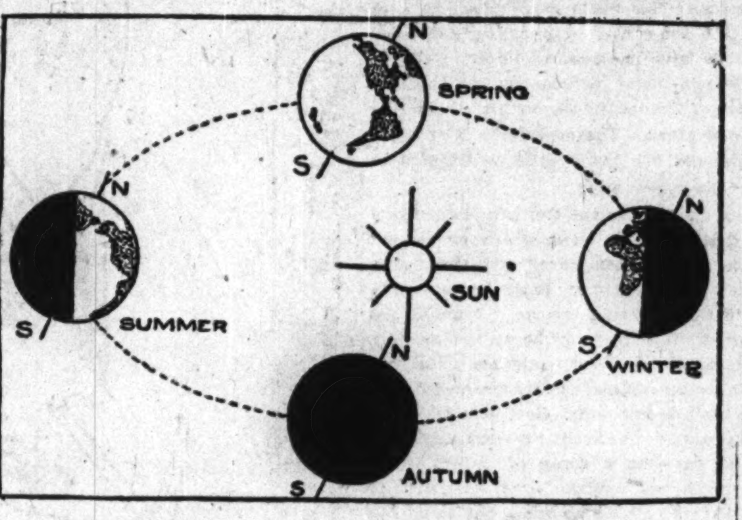

DIAGRAM OF THE SEASONS

THE SEASONS.

OF the celestial movements, one, apparent rather than real, shows the sun moving north and south along the eastern and western horizons. It shows as a change in position of rising or setting, from month to month, from season to season, which indicates an apparent movement of the sun northward and then southward.

You may watch this progress against familiar objects of the western horizon, from the far point which the sun reaches in the south in winter to the far point which it reaches to the north in summer.

This apparent movement of the sun is the explanation of the seasons. Mr. Maxwell's drawing shows the apparent path of the sun. The path is not that of the sun. It is the path the sun seems to travel with reference to the earth's equator, being on a plane with it twice a year, and twice a year being at the furthest angle to the plane.

The earth is inclined at an angle of 23 degrees to the plane of the sun. It circles about the sun with its poles not upright, but tilted. It rests a little on its side. It does not stand on end. If its poles were upright there would be no seasons. The heat and light of the sun would come the same one day as another to any particular spot. There would be the same amount of heat in Chicago in January as there is in July. The cause of change would be removed.

Because the earth is tilted it presents its surfaces, particularly its polar and temperate zones, towards the sun at different times with different effects, because of differing angles.

The effect of the tilt is presented for the perception of mankind in the seasons, in the change from heat to cold, in the processes which cause the sap to descend and ascend, vegetation to disappear and again renew itself, and the visible evidence of the apparent movement can be watched in the progress of the sun along the horizon.

In its yearly journey the sun comes to its most southern point on Dec. 21, in the sign of Capricorn, giving us our shortest day. On March 21 it is in the sign of Aries on the equator, and the days and nights are equal. Three months later the northern point is reached, and on June 21 we have the longest day. Turning southward, it recrosses the equator on Sept. 21, and by December it is again at the winter solstice.

The path of the earth about the sun is not a circle but an oval, with the sun out of center. It so happens that on Jan. 3 the earth is nearest to the sun and on July 3 farthest from it.

Another movement of the earth makes a change in the seasons which requires centuries to observe. Its pole makes a circle which requires nearly 26,000 years for its completion. The movement is due to the gravitational pull of the sun and moon upon the [illegible] the earth and is likened to the pull of gravitation upon a dying top [illegible] spinning, is [illegible] center.

In the time of completing this [illegible] the seasons, as we [illegible] by months, must change. In Chicago [illegible] time spring begins [illegible] as April. It begins now [illegible] we know as March.

In the year 11,917 A. D., [illegible] hence, the seasons will have been completely reversed. Either "summer" will be synonymous with icy blasts and "winter" with 100 degrees in the shade, or we will have new names for July and January. The evolution of the seasons would [illegible] would stand aghast at [illegible] which our far removed descendants will have to accept.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JANUARY

The Unknown Good

FOR each person the portal of each year is a narrower gate than the portal of the year before. The way, wide to youth, is a narrowing way. For genial and experienced post meridian life, far enough away from the winter solstice not to be frigid, and far enough away from the vernal equinox not to be enraptured, the unseen walls are converging. Old age finds the impasse.

The walls press in but are not oppressive, although to groping life there is a sense that they are just beyond the finger tips of hands outstretched at the side.

A way that narrows, gate by gate, to a certain end, a way traveled blindly for unknown purposes to unknowable achievement, might be terrifying; but this way, although traveled blindly with no certainty except the increasing certainty of pain and sorrow, is benevolent.

The gate of each year opens to diminished prospect, but greater promise of good. Illusion so deludes perception that the way as it narrows brings the greater good nearer. The portals of the years which in fact take a gate tax from hope, in illusion quicken the expectation.

The unknown good, never found in fact or revealed in experience, lies at the end of the narrowing way. The west window shows richer colors than the east. There is more promise in a sunset than in a sunrise.

Sunrise brings the pleasant fact of day, a thing wholly revealed and explained by experience. A sunset promises, beyond the night, something that experience has never revealed.

His records of speed and endurance on board, dirt, concrete and brick tracks alike, were the sensations of a season, notable for its furious speed.

Wins on Silvertown Durability

Resta won, as he is the quickest to declare, because his tires—his two-ply, cable-cord Silvertowns—stood him steadfast and true throughout that tire-destroying struggle.

Of the grand total of 22,720 points accredited to drivers toward the A. A. A. trophy, Silvertown took 15,482 points to 7,238, by the other competitors combined.

The next five drivers—Aitken, Rickenbacher, DePalma, Cooper, D'Alene—scored 5,855 of their points on Silvertowns to 4,880 on other makes of tires combined.

Read that list of Silvertown Triumphs.

Silvertown-equipped cars won more than eighty per cent. of the prize winning positions in the races of 1916. They took more than $210,000 in prize money.

In the races, sanctioned by the A. A. A., Silvertown won 30 firsts to 5 taken by all its opponents combined—18 Seconds to 3,—and 7 Thirds to 2.

In all these races Silvertowns either set up a new world's record, a new track record, or a new record for the event.

Lesson to Tire Users

Silvertown's wonderful achievement is not chance. Speed kings do not trust their hopes of prize money and their LIVES, idly, carelessly, to ANY tires.

The lithe, sinewy, two-ply body of a Silvertown tire, tells you why Silvertown is supreme on the speedway.

That supremacy lies in the rubber-saturated cable-cord, the size of it, and that it is cross-wrapped into but two layers, or plies.

Silvertown with but two plies reduces inside heat to the practical minimum. It is bound to outlast many-ply tires with their multiplied internal heat.

Take a leaf from this lesson of the speedway, a lesson 793,000 people who saw the 1916 automobile races had read to them. The tires that stand the grind and burn of the motordrome are the tires sure to carry you free from tire trouble through the greatest mileage over city street and country road.

Though Silvertowns, marked by the Red Double Diamond, cost more than fabric tires, you can not afford to be without their greater comfort, gasoline-saving economy, and general satisfaction.

Executives and Managers.

MANAGER

OF BROAD EXPERIENCE AND DEMONSTRATED ABILITY, SIX YEARS WITH PRESENT FIRM, WANTS TO CONNECT WITH A SOUND CONCERN. ANY BUSINESS HAVING THE POSSIBILITY OF BIG SUCCESS WILL BE CONSIDERED.

REASONS—

Probably the first question occurring to you is "Why does this man desire to change?" One reason is that I want to get into a business susceptible to development on a large scale. Another is that a partial reorganization of the concern I am now with has injected retrogressive policies with which I am not in accord.

Salary is not the vital point. Am now occupying a managerial position and drawing a comfortable remuneration. I must be convinced of the POSSIBILITIES of your proposition or I do not want it at any price.

EXPERIENCE—

My experience covers a period of nine years, during which time I have filled successfully, executive positions with manufacturing and mail order firms. I have organized and managed both sales and office forces and my knowledge covers sales, credits, and collections, as well as the things that are essential to the management of every large and complicated organization.

EXECUTIVE ABILITY—

Can build up an organization and get the most out of it. Not a slave driver, but have the knack of getting people to work because they want to work and are interested in what they are doing. I am proud of the loyalty and enthusiasm of my present force.

CHARACTER—

My ideals are high. I believe in putting into my work the best there is in me. Am 35 years of age, temperate, healthy, energetic, and am to be found "on the job" all the time. In temperament, even and well balanced, having the faculty of getting along well with people.

REMUNERATION—

You will realize that a man of the caliber indicated cannot be secured at a low price. Notwithstanding this, I am willing to start for $5,000 a year, with the understanding that when I have demonstrated my ability to your satisfaction I am to be paid a salary strictly in line with my knowledge, experience, and ability.

I am absolutely sure of myself. I know my business thoroughly and if I undertake a thing I will carry it through successfully if it is humanly possible to do so.

A permanent connection with plenty of opportunity for constructive work is particularly desired.

INTERVIEWS—

Where possible, prefer to meet inquirers personally, and will be pleased to arrange an interview to suit your convenience. If too far away will submit all essential information by letter.

Address Y 172, Tribune.

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY FOR REAL SALESMEN.

We have a big, clean, high class sales proposition with an air-tight, sure-shot plan of selling and the strongest lineup you have ever seen, that will pay any salesman capable of handling it more money than he ever made before or can possibly make anywhere else.

It does not make much difference what kind of sales experience you have had, just so as you are a real salesman; not necessarily the high pressure, but the intelligent kind.

We are looking for the salesman who is determined to make big money. The man who says, "If another man can do it, I can," and who has already made at least $5,000 a year in the selling game as a basis for his assertion. This is the only class of men we consider and some of our salesmen make as high as five times their previous earnings.

Out of fifteen men started in the last two months, only two have fallen down. If you can deliver the goods on a make-good basis, on a big proposition, this is a real opportunity, not a chance. For interview, address with particulars T M 508, Tribune.

A SALESMAN OF EXPERIENCE and ability with a successful record is required for both city and outside work; he must be able to furnish unquestioned references and prepare himself to handle the business resulting from our heavy advertising. We furnish drawing account and a noncompetitive, standard product. Answer after 10 a. m. 917, 431 S. Dearborn.

MEN OF CHARACTER AND ABILITY.

Every day 264 people move into Detroit, 1,850 arrive every week, 7,920 each month. Detroit is growing faster than any other city in the United States. The net increase in population last year was 96,802. More than 2,595 acres of new land must be opened up for these people every year.

The H. A. Jones Real Estate Co. conducts by far the largest general brokerage and subdivision business in Detroit.

So great is the growth of Detroit in population and wealth, and so active is the real estate market, that we are unable to obtain competent salesmen as fast as opportunities for them develop.

Nearly every one of our salesmen has been in some other work before joining this company. All of them have been successful. One was a bookkeeper, another a clerk in a supply house, one an insurance man, two were newspaper men, one was a chemical engineer, one a photographer—our salesmen represent nearly every occupation there is.

Every one of them who is studying his work and applying the principles he is taught is making several times as much money as he ever did before.

We need more salesmen.

We want men of ability and good standing, regardless of their occupation before; men who want to establish themselves with an active, aggressive firm permanently.

Previous experience in the real estate business is unnecessary. We have opportunities both for men familiar with real estate and for men who have done well in other lines of business. Our educational methods enable any man who has it in him at all to make good, to succeed in this office in a larger measure than in any other place we know.

If you have read any of the descriptions published recently of the H. A. Jones Training Course for Salesmen you will appreciate the value of this educational work.

Pleasant work and congenial surroundings, close co-operative methods developed to a point unknown in any other institutions of which we have heard, and the possibilities for profit in Detroit's phenomenal growth and prosperity—these and many other considerations make this a distinctly unparalleled opportunity for the man who can make our opportunities his own.

We should like to correspond with any one to whom this prospect appeals and explain to him the methods we employ, the possibilities and opportunities available, and to show exactly what each man in our organization—not just a few exceptional ones, but all of them—is doing.

H. A. Jones Real Estate Co.,
70 Washington-blvd., Detroit

SALESMAN—
We want a live representative in your town, who wants to learn to be a successful investment securities salesman. On account of our country's immense prosperity, there are more salesmen making big money selling bonds and securities than ever before. This company offers its representatives a line of the most interesting work in the investment field. Opportunities for the man or woman without the slightest degree of previous experience are unlimited, as we place at your command a tested selling plan that will enable you to get big returns from the start, provide you with an elegant selling kit, furnish brand new red hot leads, and an individual advertising campaign in your locality. We protect our representatives and have learned that we must make money for them before we can make money ourselves. This is an opportunity for you to learn the best paying business there is [without expense] and connect yourself permanently with the largest organization of its kind. Compensation of $5,000 to $10,000 may be reasonably expected. We pay no salaries or advances, but the most liberal commission we have ever known. If you are a real 19[illegible] model, guaranteed to hit on all 12 cylinders, and can pull up any grade, we want you, but you must be a "go getter." Write or wire for territory.
A. S. TERRELL & CO., Stock Exchange Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

SALESMEN.

A $25,000,000.00 Chain Store Corporation desires to secure the services of fifty of the highest class salesmen in this locality as a nucleus for its Chicago Sales Force.

It is immaterial what you have been selling. If you are a PRODUCER, we want you.

In our New York sales force very few men made an income of less than $2,500 for the past year—the average was from $5,000 to $10,000. We expect a still higher average this year.

CAN YOU MAKE $5,000 OR BETTER WITH THE SAME PROPOSITION?

If you can furnish the proper credentials as to character and ability—this is your opportunity.

Call Suite 601 Harris Trust Building.

SALESMAN, ON STRAIGHT SALARY, FOR ADVERTISED LINE OF WOMEN'S WEAR.

We are one of the largest manufacturers of women's ready to wear apparel and are now ready to introduce modern newspaper advertising, under local dealers' names, to increase the sale and prestige of our line. We want a topnotch salesman of real ability to cover our old trade and new trade in the central west, as a specialty man introducing this new feature of our service to dealers. You must believe in advertising and be able to make retail merchants realize that it will tremendously increase their sales. The advertising will cost the retailer nothing, but we want his enthusiastic support and co-operation. At the same time you must be able to get big orders for our line of high grade, fashionable suits, dresses, skirts, coats, and waists. This is a real opportunity for a smart, live, hustling salesman who can prove his worth. Preference will be given to man experienced in ready to wear garments. Straight salary. Call Sunday after 10 a. m. Mr. Philo, Hotel La Salle.

HOMES

This is the right time to come out and make a selection for early spring occupancy of one of our real bargains, in a handsome house or bungalow.

A small cash payment and $15 per month and interest secures one of these homes. Some ready now, others will be completed in early spring.

The houses are 5, 6, and 7 rooms, and contain every modern feature, and are complete in all details.

Located at 1703 Arthur-av. Take Clark-st. or Broadway cars or L road to Loyola Sta., or C. & N. W. R. R., Kenmore or Rogers Park Sta.

Shall be glad to make an appointment to show you these houses and others which we are building. Also have some very attractive two flat buildings, with sun parlors, at reasonable prices, and on which we will make easy terms.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

Well Worth While

MOST FOLKS are satisfied with the prospects of making a good living; all comforts and some luxuries; good education for the children; some travel; friends good and true; and a contented, independent old age. A man who gives his family these things does his full duty in life and is entitled to the highest respect. It is to sensible men like this that I make my appeal with the sound investment that I offer in a farm home.

THIS IS NOT a speculation. Mine is just a good paying, solid investment. If you are looking for a commodity whose value shifts back and forth, then my land would not interest you, because the market does not break on it, but always holds firm and is constantly advancing, the same as good agricultural land everywhere.

WHY AGRICULTURAL LANDS everywhere are constantly increasing in value is well understood by most every one who is paying the increased cost for butter, eggs, meats, poultry, milk, cream, cheese, bread, fruits, potatoes, and all vegetables; shoes, woolens, and everything else that comes from the farm. As nothing can stop the increase in these food costs, likewise nothing can stop the increase in the value of the land along with it.

THE SWIGART TRACT in Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford Counties, besides sharing this increase, which is common to all farm land, is enjoying the added increase from special development work. To begin with, the lands are sold extremely low, and every house erected enhances the value of the adjoining land. Every good road built enhances the value of the section it passes. Every telephone line, schoolhouse, church, or store that is built adds that much more to the value of every piece of property in the township. And in this way the lands I offer are each season advancing a larger percentage in value than is possible to lands in older agricultural sections. Two or three seasons ago, in one of our townships, a power dam was built, and this permanent industry helps support the township. Right now, in another township, the largest dam in the State of Michigan is being constructed, involving an expenditure of millions of dollars and at the present time the employment of four hundred men. These are only the first two of a series of seven dams, which insure the certainty of a large industrial expansion for this district.

IN THE MEANTIME I am selling my lands based on their present state of development rather than upon future value, realizing as I do that the more I settle the country the more valuable will be the balance of my holdings. It is a satisfaction to a manufacturer who buys a plant with which to produce a certain commodity to sell, if he knows that, although he did not buy his plant to sell, yet it is increasing in value. That applies to the lands I sell. But I sell them first of all on their merits for farming purposes because they will raise profitable crops of potatoes, beans and all vegetables; rye, wheat, clover, vetch, alfalfa, timothy, oats, corn and fruits. I recommend these lands because they are good for general farming, for raising live stock, poultry, and are excellent for fruit growing.

TO GIVE YOU A GOOD CLEAR IDEA of the farming possibilities in this district let me send you a large book, free of charge, giving all the statistics about the crops, live stock, etc., produced in these Counties, where I am selling well drained, splendid lying, good farm land for $15 to $25 per acre, on terms as low as $25 to $100 down and $7.50 to $10 per month, per 40 acres. And after the land is partly paid for the purchaser is insured for the balance. I am selling a great deal of my land on my Mid-Winter Offer, with privilege of exchange for other land when purchasers take the trip during the growing season. Ask about this when you write me. Also ask for a large map of the district. Call for this literature if you can and see many stereopticon views and samples of 1916 crops. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate firstcomers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, Industrial Commissioner, A., T. & S. F. Ry., 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

Business Property.

BUSINESS BLOCK—

This building is located east of the I. C. R. R. in the Hyde Park district, one block to Jackson park, three blocks to the lake and bathing beaches.

Store and apartments are all rented on leases, expiring from one to ten years, at a rental of $21,720. The building is entirely fireproof and has the lowest rate of insurance of any building of its kind in the city. There are now under construction two ten story hotel and apartment buildings two blocks east of this property. Space in this building is constantly in demand.

I will consider for my $115,000 equity a high grade improved, well stocked clear farm close to Chicago; must have merit and one that will stand the closest investigation. I will furnish full particulars to brokers having clients who may be interested in a proposition of this kind.

BUY NOW

Used cars are cheaper now than they will be in the spring. All new cars will have advanced sharply in price by then, thus making the used car more valuable. The best argument in favor of the above fact is all used car dealers are advertising cars wanted and are positively buying and storing for spring business. Therefore make your selection now and we will give you until you are ready to drive it in the spring.

Storage Free

Don't fail to take advantage of this opportunity to save money.

1917 BRINGS A NEW WAY OF SELLING USED CARS. THE CAR YOU WANT AT THE PRICE YOU WILL PAY. IF IT IS ON THE MARKET WE WILL GET IT FOR YOU. IF WE HAVEN'T GOT IT. THE LARGEST SINGLE FLOOR SALESROOM IN CHICAGO FOR USED CARS IS NOW READY FOR BUSINESS ON THE SECOND FLOOR AT 1326 MICHIGAN-AV. SECOND FLOOR RENTS MEAN SECOND FLOOR PRICES, SO YOU CAN SAVE $50 ON A CAR BY WALKING UP ONE FLIGHT OF STAIRS.

Being Chicago distributors for new Buick cars, we naturally specialize on used Buicks, and in addition to that popular line we have a complete assortment of medium size—properly priced—recent model—cars of standard manufacture in splendid condition, and all will be disposed of immediately to make room for the cars coming to us on early spring delivery trades.

In addition to the cars we now have on hand we have a list of more than one hundred cars which are available to us on trades as soon as we can make room for them, so we must move quickly in disposing of those now on hand, and you should take advantage of this fact and save money by buying today.

THE PERSONAL EQUATION.

A group of practical men are organizing [under Illinois charter] a legal reserve life assurance company which will be operated upon lines thoroughly practical, safe, and distinctly progressive in its protection of both shareholders and patrons.

There are features of co-operation and mutual welfare inherent in the scope of activity planned which secure attention and prompt approval of thoughtful persons who can appreciate the obvious advantages.

Three men of good presence and repute who possess initiative, tact, and energy which endures, are wanted to interview Chicago people capable of contributing $100 to $500 toward part ownership in the financial control and who will agree to give personal assistance to the co-operative movement related to first year's business.

Sales experience is an advantage, but ability to present the truth and ask for prompt decisions is of greater use.

Compensation on commission basis only. If applicant will not test the merits of proposition for one week without an advance, he is unlikely to be the caliber man needed.

Write briefly, stating present occupation, lines followed during past five years, and indicate something of social standing in neighborhood you reside. Address T D 116, Tribune.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

A MACHINE, PROTECTED BY SOUND patents; retails $5; costs $1.20. Every home from mansion to cottage in every country prospective customers. Public interest and market demand active. 16,000 already sold and giving satisfaction. Renders indispensable service. Sells readily through department and other stores and by mail. Competition negligible though missionary work has been thoroughly done. This is a new industry that will rival as a money maker such lines as the sewing machine, the cash register, or the phonograph. Every "if" has been removed by actual performance. Am sole proprietor. Have invested $30,000 in perfecting this device and in patents, dies, and machinery. Have successful international record, can furnish bank and commercial agency references. Am increasing capital of Chicago Corporation to $100,000 and want a qualified co-worker with $10,000 or more or a party to take financial interest. Everything in readiness for sales extension. Full details at interview with principals only. Address Y 187, Tribune.

Small Investors

SUIT MAY KILL "L" EXTENSIONS

Mrs. Potter Palmer Contends Loop Has Injured Palmer House Holdings.

Millions lost to downtown property owners by the noise, dirt, and darkness caused by elevated structures furnish the stake fought for today in a suit brought by Mrs. Potter Palmer against the elevated loop company.

Damage to the Palmer house property, facing on Wabash avenue, is charged in the suit. The ground floor rooms have been made too dark and unattractive for advantageous use as shops and the upper floors have lost privacy and resound with the constant roar and rattle of passing elevated trains.

The test case on hearing before Judge David F. Matchett asks for $50,000 in damages. The elevated roads, however, with Francis W. Walker as chief counsel, are contesting the suit. If Mrs. Palmer wins and Harry S. Mecartney, her attorney, expresses confidence that she will, other property owners on Wabash avenue, Fifth avenue, Van Buren, and Lake streets in the loop are expected to sue for damages.

Experts' Plan at Stake.

The plan of using North State street, South Market street, South Fifth avenue, and the important radiating avenues such as Milwaukee avenue and Blue Island avenue as foundations for more elevated structures may fall through if Mrs. Palmer wins.

The city's traction and subway commission decided to recommend that the public streets be turned over to the elevated roads as free right of way for future extensions after Walter L. Fisher, its special counsel, had assured it that the elevated road interests have been able to defeat all efforts on the part of property owners to recover damages.

All their estimates of cost, according to Chief Engineer Henry M. Brinckerhoff of the commission, are based on the supposition that the city will turn over without charge its public streets for rights of way for the elevated roads.

Drop in Values Shown.

A long history of real estate transactions in Wabash avenue showing the drop in values which followed the construction of the elevated structure in that street has been related in the hearings before Judge Matchett. Henry A. Knott, a real estate expert, presented to the jury a mass of evidence showing the loss in rental value caused by the elevated road.

Closing arguments in the case are set for Tuesday. The elevated road attorneys are making little effort to disprove the undesirable nature of the elevated road covering a business street. They rest their hopes on the claim that this has been overbalanced by the additional shoppers the "L" has brought to the doors of the Wabash avenue merchant.

Mrs. Palmer's attorneys contend that all citizens of Chicago, by the granting of franchise privileges and the payment of taxes, are entitled to transportation facilities without being forced to pay the additional penalty of having an elevated road structure covering the street on which their property faces.

Ask Equalization.

They declare that if Wabash avenue property owners are to be forced to pocket this loss in order to get transportation service the subsidy to the elevated roads should be paid by special assessment and all property sharing in the benefit should share in the cost.

Cicero Protests Today on Electric Plant Sale

Residents of Cicero will hold a mass-meeting in Liberty hall, Fifty-second avenue and West Twenty-second place, at 3 o'clock this afternoon to protest against the sale of the Cicero electric light system to the Public Service company of Northern Illinois.

"We must stop the sale of the Cicero light system. Wake up and defend your property and your interests," reads part of a poster.

G. O. P. ELECTORS ARE NEGLECTED AND LEFT ORPHANS

None of Illinois Officials Will Take Care of Men Chosen to Vote for Hughes.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The twenty-nine Republican electors from Illinois, who want to meet in Springfield on Monday and vote for Charles Evans Hughes and Charles Warren Fairbanks, are orphans, mavericks, or something like that.

The retiring Democratic state officials have washed their hands of the Republicans who have been elected to sit in the electoral college. Nobody is paying any attention to them and no arrangements have been made for the session that is required by the federal law, except for some informal preparations that were started late yesterday by Lewis G. Miner of Springfield, one of the electors.

Officials Refuse to Act.

The law requires that the electors assemble at the state capitol on Monday to cast the formal vote for president and vice president. Somebody got the hunch that it was the business of the secretary of state to issue a formal call for the meeting, provide a place for the session to be held, and preside over the assembly until a chairman had been elected.

This was put up to Secretary of State Stevenson. He had the law dug up and declined courteously but thoroughly on the ground that his duties ended when he issued the certificates of election. "Let the governor do it," was his ultimatum.

Governor "Gets from Under."

Then Gov. Dunne was consulted. He said he had nothing to do with the electors, and anyhow he would be busy getting rid of the governorship at high noon, Monday, the hour at which the electors are supposed to meet. Speaker Shanahan agreed to furnish the electors with seats for the inauguration, but that was as far as he could go.

The upshot of it all is that Elector Miner has taken charge of things, and has secured a committee room in the state capitol, where there is to be a perfunctory session at noon, a recess for the inauguration, and a later session at which Gov. Lowden and Speaker Shanahan will be asked to make speeches and give to the meeting some semblance of formal function.

CARRIERS LEVY A TAX OF $2 ON RECONSIGNMENTS

The railroads are distributing privately the new rules they proposed on diversion and reconsignment of cars. The shippers will have seven days after official notification by the interstate commerce commission to file arguments against the changes.

The new terms of the railroads propose a charge of $2 a car for any reconsignment. No charge will be assessed for changing a name of consignee and point within the district, if it is made before the arrival of the car.

The charge for the first twenty-four hours after arrival is placed at $2, and at $5 for any time thereafter.

FIREMEN SUE FOR SALARIES

John C. McDonnell and Elisha W. Case, in behalf of the members of the fire department, yesterday filed a petition for a writ of mandamus against Eugene R. Pike, city controller, and Frederick H. Bartlett, city treasurer, to compel them to payy to all members of the fire department their salaries for the last sixteen days in December.

The petition recites that the city council appropriated $3,417,650.60 for the expenses of the fire department for the year 1916, but has held out $160,000 as directed by the city controller under the retrenchment plan. The amount held out has made it impossible for the city treasurer to pay the salaries of members of the fire department.

The bill alleges that the members of the fire department made demand upon the city treasurer and the city controler on Jan. 2, 1917, for their pay, and it was refused.

Chicagoans Asked to Aid Lithuanian War Relief

Appeals for relief for the war sufferers of Lithuania have been made to Chicagoans through the committee in charge of the work, with headquarters at 29 Fifth avenue, New York.

"Being a distinctly different nation than the Slavs or the Teutons, the Lithuanians are not aided by organizations for the relief of the other nations and are entirely destitute," reads the communication sent out by A. B. Strimaitis, secretary. J. S. Lopatto is president of the committee.

"The cries of Lithuania's 3,000,000 women and children, homeless and starving, in the provinces below the Baltic, including Vilna, Kovo, Suvalki, and Grodno, have been almost drowned out until now," says the appeal.

Contributions may be sent to the Lithuanian war relief committee at the New York address.
